JAIL BOY, 14, SOUGHT FOR MURDER

LYLE MESSNER IS HELD BY POLICE AT ROCK ISLAND

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Youth Sought In Slaying of Kathleen Forrest, Admits Identity When Confronted By Playmates of Girl. Police Say Confesses Killed Child. Parents Also In Jail.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Sept. 17—(United Press)—Lyle Messner, 14, sought in connection with the slaying of 6-year-old Kathleen Forest of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was arrested here here tonight and confessed to the police.

The youth was arrested when mission workers, to whom he applied for food, noticed his resemblance to the Cedar Rapids boy wanted for the slaying.

Although maintaining stoic indifference when first taken into custody, and insisting his name was John Breckle, young Messner broke down and confessed when confronted by two playmates, police said.

The playmates were brought here by Chief of Police Wesley Benesh of Cedar Rapids who started for Rock Island as soon as he was notified the suspect was in custody.

Was Visibly Shaken.

Police said Messner was visibly shaken when his former playmates walked up to him in the jail and said: "Hello Lyle, how are you?"

Messner did not reply audibly, but apparently realizing the folly of further denials, and the gravity of the crime which is laid against him, broke down and sobbed the story of the slaying, according to police.

The youth's arrest ends a 4-day search in Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin which was instituted after the mutilated body of little Kathleen was found in the basement of a deserted house a few doors from her home Tuesday eveninf.

Police Chief Benesh immediately made plans to return young Messner to Cedar Rapids tonight. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Messner, are in custody there, charged with obstructing justice. Police believed they helped the boy escape.

Kathleen's playmates said young Messner forced the girl into the abandoned house after she refused to go with him on the promise of a nickle. They had become frightened and ran, they said but did not tell their parents.

Disappeared After Slaying.

Messner disappeared a few hours after the alleged attack and the child's body was not found for 24-hours.

The youth had assaulted the girl, doctors who conducted the post-mortem examination, said. She died of suffocation, they said, from a cap pulled tightly over her head, presumably to stifle her screams.

Because of his youth, young Messner, if he is convicted can only be sentenced to the reform school until he is 21 years old, Cedar Rapids officials said.

DOUBLE ATTACK BEING LAUNCHED ON DRY LEADER

Dr. E. S. Shumaker Is Center of Indiana Political Row.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DEALS DIRECT BLOW

Seeks to Increase 60-Day Sentence Imposed For Contempt.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Formal charges that Dr. Edward S Shumaker, superintendent in Indiana of the Anti-Saloon league, sought to save himself from serving six months on the county farm for contempt of court by criminal attempts to influence the state supreme court were laid before that court today by Attorney Arthur L Gilliom.

Gilliom asked that United States Senators Arthur R. Robinson and James E. Watson, Clyde E. Walb, republican state chairman; Henry Lane Wilson, former United States ambassador to Mexico, and Boyd Gurley, editor of the Indianapolis Times, be summoned to give evidence.

The attorney general declared that Shumaker's efforts to have his sentence made lighter, if proved, should be further penalized by a much heavier sentence. The original sentence was imposed following conviction of attempting to compel the juctices of the supreme court to follow Shumaker's views in punishing liquor law violators. Political reprisals were threatened unless they did so.

Hearing October 5.

It was indicated, after the filing of the motion, by Chief Justice Julius C. Travis that a hearing will be had on October 5.

Today's action followed publication of letters exchanged between Shumaker and Senator Watson following the former's citation for contempt.

To Break Influence

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—Indiana's trubulent political waters were still further stirred today by the launching of a double attack against Dr E. S. Shumaker venerable head of the Anti-Saloon league in this state. The attacks were calculated to break whatever is left of Shumaker's political influence.

Attorney General Arthur S. Gilliom was responsible for the most menacing threat. He filed a motion in Supreme court asking that a contempt case against Sumaker be re-opened for the purpose of increasing a 60-day sentence imposed on the dry leader for contempt of court.

The other attack against Shumaker came in the trial of Mayor

CAR HITS TRAIN NEAR HAVELOCK

F. E. Folts Escapes Serious Injury in Crossing Crash.

Believe Lincoln Man Drove Into Side of Rock Island Engine.

When his car hit a Rock Island passenger train near Havelock at 3:20 Saturday afternoon, F. E. Folts, 3054 R street, suffered numerous cuts and bruises but escaped serious injury.

Mr. Folts was too dazed Saturday night to recall much about the accident and continued to ask, "What hit me?"

Mr. Folts had been to Havelook on business and was returning to Lincoln when the accident occurred at the crossing about three blocks west of the Havelock Rock Island depot. The street car and railroad tracks cross near this place. A trolley car had stopped for the train but it is believed Mr. Folts drove directly into the engine.

His car, a Buick Six, coach was shunted on its side against a pole. Trainmen were not aware of the accident until after the train, the Chicago Fast Mail No. 5, arrived in Lincoln. Examination of the side of the engine showed where it had been hit by the auto.

Although acrowd soon gathered about the scene of the accident Mr. Folts was not removed from the wrecked car until an ambulance arrived. Then he was taken out through the back window.

He was taken in Wadlow's ambulance to the Lincoln General hospital. Dr. H. A. Fulton of Havelock attended Mr. Folts after the crash and at the hospital.

Six stitches were taken in scalp wounds but an X-ray examination revealed no fractures of the skull. Mr. Folts sustained numerous cuts on his hands, bruises about the body and complained of a "lame back." Dr. Fulton, however, did not think his condition serious.

Her husband then brought her here, she states, and told her of the alleged sale.

Barnhizer informed his young bride he had married her, she says, for the sole purpose of bringing her to Los Angeles where she would be forced to live with another man as his wife.

Mrs. Barnhizer left her husband ten days after the wedding.

AURORA BANKER GETS FREEDOM AFTER 5 YEARS

Charles Wentz is Granted Parole By State Board.

EDWARD MARES IS ALSO FREED

Walter Rifenberg and Five Others Denied Clemency.

Charles Wentz, former Aurora banker, has been granted a parole by the state pardon board after serving over 5 years of his 1-to-10 sentence for falsifying the books of his institution to conceal its true condition from a state examiner. His case was heard last Tuesday by the board and it was shown that he has been in the penitentiary considerably longer than the average time spent by other bankers convicted of similar offenses.

Wentz will not return to Aurora but is to take employment in Lincoln as an insurance solicitor. His plea for freedom was strongly supported by many of his friends in both cities. It was stated in his behalf that he lost all his own money in the failure of his bank and an allied investment company.

No Clemency for Rifenberg.

The fact that Walter Rifenberg, doing 25 years for murder in Brown county, has renedered valuable service as a physician's assistant at the penitentiary hospital and has helped to save the lives of men under treatment there is not sufficient, in the board's opinion, to justify his release at this time.

Rifenberg was sentenced to the penitentiary for shooting and killing Jacob Davis, jr., at Ainsworth, while robbing the latter of $195. That was in 1911. He escaped in 1917 by violating his privilege as a trusty, and

BELIEVE WOOD'S EMPLOYE KILLED

Evidence Placed Before Jury to Prove Murder Theory.

Caretaker of Lincoln Man's Summer Home Found in Lake.

ASHLAND, Wis., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—Indications that county officials will attempt to prove a murder theory in connection with their investigation into the death of Allen Stahl were apparent in the evidence placed before a coroner's jury today.

Stahl, caretaker on the summer estate of George Woods, Lincoln, Neb., at Madeline island, was reported drowned Wednesday while working with Ernest Russell and his son, Bernard, collecting a boatload of stones.

County officials began their investigation after a relative of Stahl told them there was ill feeling between the caretaker and the Russells.

Dr. Dell Andrus, Ashland county physician, told the coroner's jury that three bruises on Stahl's head were caused before he was drowned. Coroner Louis Sollie exhibited a fly wheel crank from the launch and called the jury's attention to corrugations on the handle and to the marks on the dead man's forehead which might have been caused by his having been struck by the handle. Officials also asserted that the spot where the Russells said Stahl fell from the boat and was drowned had been measured and was so shallow that a man could wade ashore.

The jury is scheduled to return its verdict Monday.

Heavy Showers Reported Over Large Area Saturday Evening.

A heavy rain which lasted for more than an hour Saturday evening gave Lincoln and vicinity and a large portion of the state its first relief from the oppressive heat of the past three weeks.

Followed by a cool breeze, the rain swept over the state, reaching Lincoln shortly after 6 o'clock in the evening. Moisture amounting to .23 of an inch fell here up until 7 o'clock.

Accompanying the rain was a 20 degree drop in temperature. The thermometer reading at 6 o'clock by the weather bureau showed 90 degrees, while at 7 o'clock it stood at 70 degrees. The highest reading during the day was 93 degrees.

The Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph company reported heavy rains extending from Grand Island on the west to Nebraska City and Plattsmouth on the east and south. York and Seward received good rains.

The Burlington reported that during a period of slightly more than an hour about one-third of an inch of moisture fell over most all of the Lincoln division. Rain was also reported on the Omaha division.

CONCLUDES CASE AGAINST DUVALL

60 Per Cent of Appointments to Be Members Of Society.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 17—(INS)—A picture of John L. Duvall, running for mayor of Indianapolis in 1925, solemnly raising his left hand and pledging himself to name Ku Klux klansmen to not less than 60 per cent of the appointive offices under his control, was drawn today in his trial here on charges of violating the corrupt practices act by failing to list all campaign contributions and promises.

The witness who described the incident was the Rev. George S. Henninger, Methodist minister.

The scene was a meeting of 1,800 klansmen in the community house of the church of which the minister is pastor. Forty or fifty persons were on the platform, he testified, most of them republican candidates for city offices.

Rush to Platform.

When it was suggested that he be asked to sign a pledge to favor the klan in givnig out appointments and not to receive instructions or directions from any political group in Marion county except the klan, there was a great rush of would-be officeholders, Henninger said.

"There was a chorus of 'let me sign it first,'" he continued. "Duvall was given the honor and he stood with his left hand raised while I read the pledge, then said loudly, 'I will' and stepped forward and affixed his name. The others followed."

"What was the significance of holding up the left hand?" the witness was asked.

"That was the voting sign of the order," he replied.

The pledge, as near as the witness could remember it, was:

WITHDRAWAL OF McADOO CREATES MIXED SYMPTOMS

Believed In Some Quarters That If Smith Would Pull Out Democratic Ticket Would Be Elected Next Year. New Yorker's Followers Did Not Consider McAdoo Active Candidate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—(United Press)—The statement of William McAdoo, withdrawing his name from the race for the democratic presidential nomination, was received tonight with mixed symptoms by democratic leaders.

Some supporters of McAdoo in 1924 suggested that his old opponent, Governor Al Smith of New York, would do well to follow McAdoo's example, while Smith men generally accepted the withdrawal with questions about its effect on their candidate.

THE WEATHER.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—The weather outlook for the period of September 19 to September 24, inclusive, follows:

Upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys: Mostly fair weather northern portions throughout week, but showers more likely southern portions; seasonable temperatures during first part of week, followed by rising temperature by middle of week.

Nebraska: Fair Sunday and Monday; much cooler Sunday.

Kansas: Fair Sunday and Monday; much cooler Sunday.

Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, recalled Smith had proposed to McAdoo during the disastrous 1924 convention fight that both retire from the race.

"I hope he feels the same way about it now," Caraway said.

"If Smith retires, the atmosphere will be clarified and we can nominate the next president of the United States at our convention next year."

Senator Dill, Washington, echoed Caraway's sentiment.

Smith Men Reticent.

Smith men, less willing to be quoted privately expressed the opinion that McAdoo's withdrawal might not benefit their candidate to the extent some might anticipate. They said they had not considered McAdoo as an active candidate at any time since the Smith boom started.

McAdoo's withdrawal was revealed today in a letter to George F. Milton of the Chattanooga News a former publicity man for McAdoo. The latter said in his letter that "everything possible should be done to prevent the 1928 convention from degenerating into a struggle of individuals or personal preferment at the expense of principles and policies of fundamental importance to party character and the welfare of the nation.

Publication of the statement seemed to start even the republican ball rolling here, although it had no political connection with the developments which brought three republican leaders to President Coolidge's desk with an impression that he might be the republican nominee next year.

Representative Will S. Taggart, republican, Tennessee, said the Most of the city of Havre was asleep when the vessels arrived at dawn. Ten gendarmes, however, were on duty at the gaily beflagged quay, and they stood at attention while the legionnaires disembarked.

In spite of the handicap afforded by the pouring rain, a French army band valiantly blared out a welcome, concluding with "The Star Spangled Banner."

SEES M'KELVIE NEXT PRESIDENT

J. E. M. Thomson Writes in National Magazine About New Prospect. Believes Nebraskan Is Strong With Coolidge Contingent.

Dr. J. E. M. Thomson recently wrote the following communication which appeared, under the caption, "McKelvie Boomed," in Time, a national weekly published at New York:

"On reading your article "McKelvie versus Lowden" I wondered where there was any significance behind that title. With the statement by President Coolidge that he doesn't care to enter the presidential race again, following so closely the publication of this issue, it would seem highly probable that you might have conjectured that the race for the presidential nomination in the republican party might possibly lie between Mr. McKelvie and Mr. Lowden. The hunch seems to be a good one and from your article I would judge Mr. McKelvie to be a favorite and highly pleasing apparently, to the Coolidge contingent.

"Apparently the McNary-Haugen bill does not have the approval of the business interests in close contact with agriculture and of the business farmer as they realize it did not answer the purpose for which it was intended. Early in the discussion, the Nebraska Farmer, Mr. McKelvie's publication, I understand, opposed this bill, by this greatly strengthening his prestige politically and with the thinking public.

"A few months ago one of the leading bank presidents of the country, at a conference of influential men of the great central west, I am informed, introduced ex-governor McKelvie as the next president. Doesn't it seem reasonable to surmise from those circumstances that have arisen during the past few months—McKelvie's conference with the president at Washington—the first overnight guest of the president at his summer home—the recipient of the only visit made by the president on a private individual while at his summer home—and, as you say, the spokesman of the president in regard to the farm legislature and one who is apparently pleasing to the financial interests of the country—that here is a man who is proposed to fill the bill of the republican convention next year.

"Mr. McKelvie was a splendid executive as governor of the state of Nebraska, publisher of an influential farm paper and has been a most successful business man. His varied intersts in civic and state activities have always been felt in the right direction. He is held in the highest respect by every citizen in Nebraska."

Increase Sought in Shumaker Sentence Because of Letter

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Based on the letter which passed between United States Senators James E. Watson and E. S. Shumaker, Indiana anti-Saloon league official, which were published here today, Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom today filed a motion in the Indiana Supreme court asking that the court increase Shumaker's penalty for contempt of the court.

Shumaker was sentenced to 60 days on the state farm and fined $500 by the state Supreme court on August 6, for criticizing the court's decisions in liquor cases.

Biblical Miracle Really Happens Near Jerusalem

JERUSALEM, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Scenes connected with the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, which Abraham witnessed and described as "smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace have been repeated since the recent earthquake in the vicinity of the Dead sea.

Geologists here believe that it is the gas ascending from the depths of the earth through cracks formed by the earthquake, and not smoke from a volcano.

The gases have been seen ascending in a number of places, offering an explanation of the smoke phenomenon seen by Abraham and described in the Bible.

Giants Battle.

DETROIT — "Just wait until Henry Ford starts full production again!"

On the street, in hotel lobbies, at the employment agencies, everywhere men gather in Detroit, one hears these words.

The day laborer, the skilled mechanic, the foreman employed at the Ford factory, the butcher, the baker, department store owner, the amusement house proprietor, the steel man, all these are waiting, just waiting to "see what Ford is going to do."

Each is an interested spectator at the battle of giants which has its setting in Detroit.

In Titanic Struggle.

Henry Ford, head of the Ford Motor company, and Pierre S. DuPont, chairman of the board of General Motors, are the giants of this struggle.

Many months ago, the rumor that "Ford soon will bring out a gear shift car," was current. Then came delays in the car's appearance, and still more delays. What was Ford attempting to do? Detroiters queried. Was he playing a waiting game at the expense of his powerful competitor, General Motors?

Ford production was steadily curtailed until in June it stopped altogether. Months passed while machinery remained idle and no new car appeared.

A Waiting Game.

General Motors, likewise, has been "waiting, just waiting," observers say, unwilling to make any radical changes in the lower-priced cars of its units until Ford puts his new model on the streets. It has not stopped production, but neither has it launched any startling innovations. A slightly higher-priced car of one of its units, however, probably because of the deadlock, has been forging ahead.

With winter coming on Detroit is rejoicing over the resumption of activity at the Ford plant, following months of unemployment.

In recent weeks men have been rehired to get the plant into shape for production once more.

Great changes have taken place within the shops and more than $15,000,000 has been spent for new equipment, and alteration of old. Approximately 4,500 new machine tools have been purchased and 15,000 altered. One hundred and sixty-six gear generating machines have been rebuilt, at a cost per unit of $3,000, to produce two gears included in the rear axle assembly. Punch press equipment costing $1,000,000, and hot metal spinning machines costing approximately $60,000 have been installed. A total of $4,500,000 is said to have been spent in rebuilding tools. More than 50 per cent of the tools have been rebuilt.

Observers in Detroit say: "General Motors would give a fortune to know what Ford's next move is going to be."

Ford Busy at Other Things.

In the meantime Ford is expanding in other ventures. As one informant says:

"Take a trip up the River Rouge. Almost all the land on both sides belongs to Ford. Doesn't seem as if he could know how much property he really owns.

"On the river you will see a dozen or more old shiping board vessels, which he purchased. Several iron boats are being cut up by acelylene torches and the wreckage carried across the river to his smelters.

"He has his own railroad, the D. T. & I., which is electrified for part of the way. Recently he is believed to have purchased land for the erection of woolen mills to make his own upholstering.

"Pass his wheat fields and you will see 35 or 40 tractors harvesting the crop. Ford has his own mills to grind the grain into flour.

"When Ford closes down, the whole nation suffers.

"This battle of the industrial giants may be a picturesque story, but we will be glad when both sides are straightened around and money again is plentiful."

ILLITERACY TO BE RESURVEYED

Special Investigation Will Be Made in Adams County.

Federal Ratio Reported in 1920 is Believed To High.

In order to correct the manifest inaccuracy of the last federal census in Nebraska, relative to the percentage of illiterates in its population, a special survey is to be made in Adams county, selected as a representative subdivision of the state, under the direction of a special committee named for that purpise at the request of the National Federation of Woman's clubs, which is initiating a similar inquiry in all the states of the Union

State Superintendent C. W. Taylor is the chairman of this committee, appointed by Mrs. Evelyn M. Minier of Oakland, president of the Nebraska Woman's club federation. The other members of the committee are Mrs. Paul Perryman, state director of club activities for the federation, and Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle of Lincoln, educator and state normal board member.

Preliminary steps for the survey were taken last Thursday at a conference held in Hastings, attended by Mr. Taylor, Mrs. Perryman, Mrs. W. R. Snyders, president of the Hastings Woman's club, Supt. A. H. Staley of the city schools and the Adams county superintendent of rural schools, Mrs. Martha Schultz.

Through the teachers in the city and country schools a systematic census will be taken during the month of October to ascertain how many illiterate persons there are in Adams county.

Federal Ratio Exaggerated.

Figures reported by the federal census bureau indicated that between 2 and 3 per cent of Nebraska's population in 1920 was unable to read or write. As this state has always had a very high rating in education and literacy, the accuracy of this estimate was challenged when it first came out. Former Governor Bryan, with the assistance of woman's clubs and other agencies, caused a partial survey to be taken several years ago in different parts of the state, which showed that the governmental statistics were much in excess of the actual number of illiterates.

In Adams county, for instance, the census showed 370 persons in that class, whereas the later inquiry disclosed only 70. The same disproportion was found in other counties. For instance, the government charged Gage county with 497, as against 187 found by local people. In Lancaster, the survey commission discovered only 125, while the census bureau reported 1,376. Douglas county was listed by the government as having 4,050 illiterates, but only 2,190 were found there by the subsequent check.

For Nebraska as a whole the percentage of illiterates was only 1 per cent plus in the unofficial survey, or less than half as much as the census bureau figures showed.

Counted Institution Inmates.

It developed, upon inquiry, that the government counted as "illiterate" a large number of inmates in the state penal and charitable institutions at Lincoln, Omaha, Hastings, Beatrice and other places, these being charged up against the respective counties. Many of these people are not illiterate at all, though some mentally defective.

The fact also leaked out that the federal census takers put into the illiterate class persons of foreign birth who could not read nor write the English language, regardless of the fact that they may have been well educated in their native tongues.

The Federation of Woman's Clubs in Iowa has completed a survey of that state, which shows that the government figures on illiteracy are much too high.

MUSICAL FAMILY TO APPEAR HERE FOR THIRD TIME

A spring wagon, equipped with camping outfit, cabinet organ, and rough collapsible seats made up the outfit with which Rev. James M. DeMoss started out fifty-five years ago with his family upon a concert career which three generations have continued up to the present day. Next Friday evening, for the third time, the De Mosses come to Lincoln.

Since then the family has traveled by the overland stage, by covered wagon, by train, ocean steamer and automobile every year for fifty-five years; they have entertained thousands in every state in the union, every province in Canada, and England and Wales, Germany, France, Belgium and Switzerland. Last season they toured from New York to Portland, Ore., and back across the Atlantic to Great Britain. They have just returned from their concert tour across the ocean and at the very beginning of this year's tour they give their program in Lincoln.

They will be heard here in the Tabernacle Christian church, Twenty-second and South streets.

WEEKES IS IMPROVED.

NORFOLK, Neb., Sept. 17— (U. P.)—W. H. Weekes, veteran newspaper man and editor of the Norfolk Press, is slightly improved tonight, following a stroke of paralysis which he suffered yesterday. Physicians say he has an even chance for recovery.

Man Held In Lincoln Jail Claims Was Once Mentioned For Governor Of Arkansas

Claiming that he was at one time mentioned as a candidate for governor of Arkansas and that for several years he was a leading minister at Hot Springs, Ark., and the founder of a newspaper there, William T. Amis sits with his head in his hands in mourful regret in the Lincoln city jail.

The trouble occurred over a car.

According to the former Rev. Mr. Amis, for he abandoned preaching seventeen years ago because of approaching deafness and entered the business field, he left Dallas, Tex., nearly a month ago and planned to be out of the state only about two weeks. A loan company at Dallas has a first mortgage on Mr. Amis' large sedan, $800 being due on the machine which was originally purchased by Mr. Amis for $3,800.

Business being bad in Texas, Mr. Amis ventured northward but, he says, forgot that a mortgaged car could not be taken from the borders of a state. When he discovered this fact he went to a Lincoln motor company and wired the Texas firm to send all papers to a Lincoln bank, through which he would pay the required amount.

But he had been out of Texas nearly a month and several detective agencies had been booked to find him, so when the word that as in Lincoln came to the Dal- company's attention, a return wire to Lincoln police said to the car."

And that is why William T. Amis is sitting in jail. Mr. Amis waived [illegible] Saturday afternoon and an officer from Dallas is now on his way to Lincoln to take Mr. Amis back to Texas to face charges of moving a mortgaged car from a state.

Remembering Amis as a classmate in a southern Baptist theological seminary in 1900 and 1901, Rev. G. Carroll Berryman, 1224 North Forty-sixth street, Lincoln, visited Mr. Amis Saturday night.

He told of the former preacher's activity and prominence in the south. He had, however, not seen Mr. Amis since graduation from the seminary. Rev. Mr. Berryman graduated in 1901 and Mr. Amis in 1902.

Mr. Amis is 53 years old.

"I never was meant to be a business man," sadly smiled Mr. Amis. "If my hearing had been good I'd have remained a minister, as I was supposed to be.

"This is the first trouble I've ever been into. It's too bad. Of course I did not mean to do anything wrong to any one at all. Yes, it's too bad."

LESS PROPERTY TO BE SOLD FOR TAXES THIS YEAR

County Treasurer Albers and his assistants are busy now drawing up the list of real estate that will soon be sold for taxes.

Although the work has not actually progressed far enough to determine how large the list will be, Mr. Albers believes from general observations that it will be smaller this year than last. He has notified bankers over the county of delinquent taxes in their vicinity, and has checked up with loan companies. Good business conditions also wil halve a bearing on the subject.

Britain Seeking Air Supremacy; Constructs Speediest Planes

LONDON, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Since the time has arrived when the phrase, "Britannia Rules the Sea," has become doubtful in the minds of the people and England's supremacy of the seas is threatened by America, Great Britain is striving hard to gain world-wide recognition above the seas and transfer their supremacy to the air.

Six new seaplanes, in quest of the greatest speed ever attained by man, and ordered built in the closest secrecy by the air ministry, constitute another step forward in the nation's air developments.

These six machines are being sent to Italy, where three of them will be chosen to take part in the great air race for the Schneider cup, scheduled for September 25th, and when they will play their part in a thrilling attempt to defeat the formidable opposition of Italy and America, or in other words to beat the world.

Work On Models.

World famous designers, both of aircraft and engines, have, for many months, worked strenuously upon the construction of these planes, and have produced astonishing results which are a big advance on anything that has previously been built by the British government.

Three of the machines are supermarine-Napier S. 5 monoplanes; two are, Gloster - Napier IV biplanes and one is known as the Short-Bristol "Crusader."

Although the actual speed which they have attained is being kept secret, it is reliably learned that their thousand horse power engines are credited with reaching a speed of 300 miles an hour, 54 miles an hour faster than the Italian machine which won the Schneider cup race from the United States last year.

Novel Features.

Piloted by "aces" of the British royal air force these beautiful constructed planes contain all kinds of novel features. The whole of the fuel is carried in the floats, the effect of which is to partially balance the engine, where the fuel si carried by an engine-driven pump.

The monoplanes are of a low wing type, the wnigs being almost under the body of a tiny fuselage, which is considered small in cross section area than any fuselage previously designed. The radiators are fitted so skillfully to the wing that there is, for the first time, a perfectly flat surface that does not add any resistance whatsoever. The fuselage is made entirely of metal, the floats are of duralumin specially treated to resist sea-water corrosion, and the wing is of wood.

The Schneider cup race,, which is held yearly, is the only sporting event in which governments take place directly, and Great Britain is making every possible effort to get ahead of the lead in aeronautics, which has in the past, been set by other nations.

100 Old Ladies, Each Over 75, To Knit for Silver Loving Cup

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—A knitting contest to be participated in by 100 ladies all of whom are over 75 years of age.

Just to prove that the art of weaving cloth and knitting may have declined in many states but not in Maine, the above contest was staged in Portland as the feature event of the annual meeting of the Maine Three-Quarter Century club, under the auspices of the Maine Public Health association.

A silver loving cup offered by the Honorable Burleigh Martin, speaker of the house of representatives of the state of Maine, will be presented to the winner of the knitting contest.

15,000 Members.

The Three-Quarter Century club is open only to those 75 years of age or over and already has a membership of over 15,000 residents of the state. Already the association has given 15 gold medals to members who are over 100 years old. It is expected that over 6,000 members will attend this year's meeting.

The knitting contest will consist of knitting a belt 36 inches wide using number five bone knitting needles and four-ply yarn. The contest will start at one o'clock and will run for 30 minutes. The judges will award the prize according to the number of rows knitted and neatness of same.

The unique contest will take place in the historic Deering Oaks park in Portland.

Included in the list of other contests is the second annual horseshoe pitching contest for the gold-plated horseshoe in which one county champion from each county is eligible.

Checker Contest.

There will also be a checker contest and special participation by the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Sons of the American Revolution, and there will be the usual dancing of the old-time dances on the green, singing of the old-time songs, basket picnic and general reunion.

Another feature will be a special gathering of couples who have celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. It is expected there will be more than a hundred of such couples present.

All Maine railroads are giving special rates for the meeting and the state highway police and all civic and local organizations are giving full support to the occasion. Governor and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster will be on hand to welcome the old folks as well as other state officials.

CANADA TAKES A PART AS MEMBER LEAGUE NATIONS

GENEVA, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—The new council of the League of Nations, with Canada sitting for the first time as a member, received the report today of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, from the league committee appointed to settle the Roumanian-Hungarian dispute over the Hungarian agrarian laws.

The report recommended that Roumania reappoint a member to sit on the mixed arbitration tribunal, but stipulated that this tribunal should be clothed with the right only to consider details, and not to decide on the question of the justice of the agrarian laws.

Count Apponyi, Hungarian delegate to the league, vigorously denounced the committee's report and demanded that the question be referred to the world court of international justice.

RISE INDUSTRIAL STOCKS FEATURES WEEK'S BUSINESS

Advance Coupled With Huge Volume New Financial Offerings.

Clearings 10½ Per Cent Greater Than Same Period a Year Ago.

BY W. S. COUSINS.
(International News Service Financial Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—The impressive feature of the week was the continued advance of the speculative industrial stocks, the leaders moved upward from five to 20 points in one ofthe most aggressive movements in the current period.

The huge volume of new financial offerings; the rise in sterling exchange to above $4.86 for the first time since 1926; the erratic movement in cotton prices; the firming up of the commodity markets and new evidences of trade revival in important quarters were all overshadowed by the violent upward movements of U. S. Steel, General Motors and other stocks which have been well in front in the last three years.

That powerful financial interests have been buying these stocks on an unprecedented scale is frankly acknowledged. Investment trusts and wealthy private investors have been such heavy buyers of common stocks that the floating supply has been greatly reduced, in consequence of which prices have responded quickly to well planned pool operations.

Industrial Gains Notable.

That there have been some notable gains in industry and trade this week was attested by the week-end reports of the statistical bureaus. Bradstreets reports a "further stepping up in wholesale trade and industrials" atlhough retail trade has failed to keep pace. The crop reports of the week reflected a spotted condition in estimates of lessened yields of corn, cotton, winter wheat, tobacco, rice, oats and nearly all fruits, whereas they showed probably larger totals of hay, spring wheat, peanuts, white and sweet potatoes barley and rye.

New financing this week aggregated about $200,000,000. Three large blocks of foreign bonds helped to swell the total of new offerings, which were about four times those of last week. Bonds on the listed market were firm with good price gains accompanying the easing up of the money market.

Cotton moved down sharply Thursday as the result of comment by a government bureau forecasting lower prices for cotton this fall. Coming on the top of three violent advances in prices as the result of the falling off in the crop estimates of the government and private bureaus, the department of agriculture's statement precipitated wide offerings of cotton contracts as prices were swept downward.

May Increase Orders.

Dun's Review reported 43 advances, 32 declines, in 75 wholesale commodity price changes, while Bradstreet's food index number moved up five points to $3.29, against $3.24 last week and $3.48 for the corresponding week last year. Some hesitancy was in evidence in commodity buying, but large consumers and manufacturers of American commodities are expected to place heavy orders for manufactured goods and raw materials by the end of the month.

Bank clearings for the week aggregated $9,878,730,000, up 10½ per cent from the corresponding week of last year.

FALL OPENING PLANS FINISHED

More Than 100 Merchants Already Have Signed For Display.

Rain Insurance to Be Carried; Band Concert Arranged.

Arrangements for the sixth annual fall opening display night, to be held Thursday, Septmeber 22, have been practically completed by the committee in charge. Although the committee has not yet called on all of the Lincoln retailers, more than 100 signatures have been secured, according to S. A. Sanderson, chairman of the retail trade sub-division of the chamber of commerce, which sponsors the event.

Window cards advertising the affair have been placed about the city and display advertising has been sent to a number of country newspapers in the Lincoln trade territory. Rain insurance has been secured which will cover the total expense should there be any precipitation between the hours of 5 p. m. and 10 p. m. on the day of the display.

Through the courtesy of the city, and of the park department particularly, a band concert will be held on government square during the evening, the committee announces.

The following notices have been sent to all local merchants participating in the fall opening display night:

"All merchants participating are requested to curtain as many of their windows as possible the entire day of the display.

"Curtains will be drawn simultaneously at 7:30.

"No stores are to be open on the evening of the display except drug stores, cigar stores, fruit stores, and other establishments which usually remain open in the evening.

"Merchants are to make their own displays of merchandise, the only request being that all windows be decorated as attractively as possible.

"There will be a total expense of approximately $450 which will include window announcement cards, local and country newspaper advertising, rain insurance and overhead street lighting. Merchants will be assessed for the amount of their share, which will be determined by a committee immediately following the display."

of the Ku Klux Klan, I agree to the following:

"That I will give 60 per cent or more offices to klan members provided qualities of the klansmen are equal to those of others qualifying. That I will not appoint men of vicious habits. That I agree not to receive instructions or directions from any political group in Marion county other than the Ku Klux Klan."

Grew More Generous.

Duvall, it was testified by another witness, Oren E. Davis, head of the Marion County Horse Thief Detective association, grew more generous with his promises later.

Otto Smelcer, former superintendent of the city asphalt plant, said that he had been promised the job in return for support of Duvall by the candidate, himself.

The only woman witness for the state, Mrs. Lilian Stringer, said that Duvall had summoned her to meet him and had induced her to change her support from Ralph Lemcke, another candidate, by promising her a place as assistant recreational director. She got the job after election.

Shumaker Mentioned.

The name of Dr. Edward S. Shumaker, was brought into the case directly today when George Snider, primary campaign manager for Duvall, said that before the election Shumaker tried to get from Duvall a promise to appoint Snider chief of police if he were elected Shumaker, sentenced to sixty days on the state penal farm for contempt of court, heretofore has been openly active only in state politics and his connection with a city campaign was a surprise.

The state concluded its case late in the afternoon.

tional divisions in their aprty to vote for something else.

Ritchie is not making his campaign as a supporter or an opponent of any candidate for president. He is a cousin of Governor Ritchie of Maryland, who is spoken of frequently in that connection. He is leaving the matter of presidential preference, however, to be decided by the democratic voters in the state primary next April, and assumes that the delegates from Nebraska will support the candidate who gets the most votes in the state or in their respective districts.

Fred Wright for Senator.

A United States senatorial boom is said to be developing on the democratic side for Fred Wright, of Omaha, formerly of Scottsbluff. Wright is a well-known lawyer and public speaker. It is claimed he will have strong backing in Douglas county as against Senator Howell, who also lives there, if both should be nominated, and that he would be particularly strong in western Nebraska.

C. N. Wright of Scottsbluff is being boomed by the Omaha Bee for senator to run against Howell in the republican primary. If he were nominated and elected, it would leave Omaha without a senator for the first time since 1911.

Two Former Nevada Officers Sentenced For Misuse of Funds

CARSON CITY, Nev., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Former State Treasurer Ed Malley and former State Controller George Cole were each sentenced to spend from five to fifteen years in state prison as a result of their conviction on charges of embezzling a half million dollars of state funds. Both declared their innocence as sentence was passed and notice of appeal was given.

Can Newspaper Be Bribed? a Question Court Must Decide

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 1.—(I. N. S.)—Can a newspaper be bribed?

This is the unique question raised here by a contention on the part of attorneys for a local editor that newspapers cannot be bribed.

Frederick L. Bagby, editor of the Utah Statesman, was arrested several days ago on complaint of Chairman W. H. Stenacker of the Salt Lake county board of commissioners, who charged criminal libel. The charge was based upon publication of a story that an agent of the commissioners had offered Bagby $1,000 not to print the story of an alleged liquor party in which the commissioners were said to have taken part.

was at liberty for two years before being caught. He has nearly 3 years to serve before his term will be out with good time deducted.

No Decision in Smith's Case.

More favorable action may be taken in the case of Riley Smith, as the board did not turn him down but merely deferred a ruling upon his application. Smith told the board last Tuesday, as he has always maintained before, that he had no part in the robbery of the Farers' State bank at Ithaca in 1921, for which he was convicted and sent to the penitentiary for 20 years.

He claims to be a victim of circumstances Members of the jury appeared at his hearing and stated that they would not have concurred in the verdict of guilty except for the trial judge's refusal to discharge them when there were prospects of a disagreement.

Mares Given Freedom.

Edward Mares, sentenced from Saline county in December, 1924, as the central figure in an auto stealing ring with headquarters at Wilber, is granted his liberty on probation. The board will withhold a final discharge for at least a year, and he will be on his good behavior meanwhile. His term was 3 to 7 years, but he is let out 3 months ahead of the expiration of the minimum time by being credited with "good time."

The case was heard on June 14, last at which time many influential people at Wilber and elsewhere in the state joined in requesting clemency for Mares. He is being paroled to Clarence B. Zajicek, a farmer near there, to assist the latter on his place.

Find Bell Not Aggressor.

On a showing that Otto Bell of Nebraska City acted only in self-defense when he struck his neighbor who had come over in a threatening manner with a missile in his hand and threatening to attack the former, the pardon board has commuted the remainder of his 1-year sentence for assault and turned him loose. He was convicted last April and his application was heard in May.

Chauncey Lemon, serving 2 to 15 years for street car robbery in Lincoln, is paroled after doing 4½ years in the senior prison.

In the cases of George Morrison and Harry Griner, sentenced for 2 to 15 years each for felonious assault in Dawes county, the board decided that they must stay in confinement awhile longer. They have served not quite 3½ years.

Following is the list of decisions given out by the board Saturday:

THREE PERSONS STRUCK BY CARS

Lewis was called and took Vance to his office where he was treated.

His injuries consisted o bruises, a cut on his left arm and a laceration on his head. He was later taken to his home at 2111 T street.

Miss Antoinette M. F. Lococo, 1433 Q street, was the victim of the third accident. She was working in a store on the south side of O street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth and left the shop to go to the north side of the street about 8 o'clock. She did not go to the intersection but crossed between streets it is said.

She was struck down by a car driven by J. C. Nelson, 1908 L street. Bystanders carried her to a stairway at 1336 O street where first aid was administered. She was taken to her home by her mother and Dr. George E. Lewis summoned. She was later removed to St. Elizabeth's hospital.

X-ray pictures were taken to determine the extent of the injuries. Miss Lococo's back was wrenched and her right knee cap injured. Her condition is not critical, Dr. Lewis stated.

BRIBERY CHARGES AGAINST KLAN BY JUDGE LINDSEY

DENVER, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Charges of bribery, fraud and corruption in connection with the 1924 city election here against Dr. John Galen Locke, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan and other members of that organization are contained in three alleged signed statements from Cleveland W. Cole, William Unter and Howard Kebler, also members of the klan, made public tonight by former Juvenile Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver.

WITHDRAWAL OF MADOO CREATES MIXED SYMPTOMS

Tennessee delegation to the next national convention may be instructed for the president despite his statement that he did not choose to run. Representative Will Wood, republican, Indiana, said his state delegation probably would be uninstructed but said sentiment for the president was so overwhelming that he would sweep the convention. C. Bacom Slemp, former secretary to Mr. Coolidge, said he thought the president would accept if nominated.

Nothing to Say.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(U. P.)—Governor Alfred E. Smith was noncommittal today when asked for a statement on William G. McAdoo's intention of retiring from the 1928 race for the democratic nomination.

Smith shook his head when approached by newspapermen.

"I have no comment to make," he said.

Suggests Smith Drop Out.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—"I think Gov. Al Smith ought to follow McAdoo's example and clear the way for a new slate in the democratic party," Sen. Duncan U. Fletcher (democrat) Florida declared, commenting on the withdrawal of William Gibbs McAdoo from the 1928 presidential race.

After praising McAdoo's record, Fletcher said: "By retiring from the presidential arena McAdoo has made a generous sacrifice of his own future for harmony in the party. It is in line with his well-known loyalty to the party and his well-known patriotism.

"If Gov. Smith also retires, the democrats would go to the next convention with harmony restored and with the party ranks united. It may be too early to speak of candidates, but I think the party would do well to consider a harmony ticket, like Walsh, of Montana, for president, and Reed, of Missouri, for vice president. I think our slogan then should be 'clean house—get rid of republican corruption,' and we would be assured of democratic victory."

Situation Muddled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—(International News Service)—The democratic presidential situation has been muddled rather than cleared by William Gibbs McAdoo's refusal to enter the race again for the nomination.

Politicians pointed out here tonight that while the ex-secretary of the treasury, a leading candidate in 1924, has effectively effaced himself from consideration, he will still be a dominant figure in the 1928 convention. McAdoo's nationwide following, which stuck to him through thick and thin in the hectic, weltering days at Madison Square Garden fight with Gov. Al Smith of New York, is expected to continue to look to McAdoo for leadership.

These leaders believe that McAdoo will occupy a position in the democratic ranks somewhat analogous to that held for so long by the late William Jennings Bryan, as the leader of the fundamentalists, the militant drys and the liberal elements in the party. It is likely that he will seek to wield a veto power on any candidate not in harmony with his views such, for instance, as Governor Smith or any wet to whom Smith might throw his support. It is the opinion of influential democrats that McAdoo will be able to influence nearly a third of the convention delegates. This would give him the veto power if the two-thirds rule for nomination is maintained, as it is expected to be.

Holds Wilson Group.

In addition, McAdoo will hold the old Woodrow Wilson followers.

As the spokesman for all these elements McAdoo made no idle boast, according to the view here, when he said in his letter of withdrawal that "as a private citizen" he would fight for the supremacy of progressive principles and the defeat of nullificationists, as the drys call the wets. He urged the party to keep the religious issue out of the next campaign.

This indicates that the democrats must still reckon with the Smith-McAdoo feud, although it may be less intense and less bitter by the retirement of McAdoo. Instead of concentrating on McAdoo, the drys probably will be divided among a number of candidates. This would give Smith an advantage he did not have in 1924.

Southern democrats gave McAdoo credit today for sacrificing personal ambition in the interest of party harmony. They said that Smith also should retire so that the sores of 1924 might be healed. With Smith still in and with McAdoo dominating a dry faction, leaders fear that Madison Square Garden may be repeated.

Would Be Calamitous.

They agree with McAdoo that such a repetition would be "calamitous" and the party would be made impotent against the republicans. McAdoo said he was stepping aside so that a new leadership might be developed.

There was considerable speculation over McAdoo's heir. Senator Walsh, (democrat) of Montana, was most frequently mentioned. This was pure conjecture, however, because McAdoo made no mention of any candidate to whom he might throw his support. About the only certainty is that McAdoo's man will be a dry.

R. H. RICHARDSON DENIES HE PAID COSTS OF SUIT

AIRPLANE IN FATAL CRASH

with those attracted by an offer to be carried aloft at one cent per pound.

Those who availed themselves of the last trip Chandler made had no fears when the motor suddenly stopped. To some it was their first trip in an airplane and they were gay in the experience.

Then the giant plane glided nose downward and plunged towards the earth.

Given hardly time to cry out, the victims were dashed into the trees of Joseph Schenck's orchard. The impact of the heavily loaded plane twisted it into a mass of wires and wreckage.

The terrific force of the landing brought a resounding crash.

Hear Screams Above Crash.

The screams of the terrified passengers rose even above the crash of the plane as it struck. The right wing crumpled like pasteboard, crushing in the cabin. A hush followed the roar of the impact. When police arrived at the scene with pilots and mechanics from the airmail field, the scene was quiet as death. All of the living victims were unconscious, several badly mangled.

The bodies were extricated with difficulty. Those who still showed signs of life were carried to ambulances and hurried to hospitals.

Miss O'Neill died on the way.

Ordinarily the fare for a 20-minute flight is $20, but today it was not based on the minute. The passengers who went aloft paid by their weight. They were thrilled at Chandler's perfect take-off on the fateful flight.

Chandler was a veteran airman but all of his efforts to land the plane in plunged ground and miss the orchard, failed. The motor in the plane was the same type as that used by Bertaud, Hill and Payne in their unsuccessful attempt to fly from Old Orchard, M. to Rome, a Jupiter, and it was noticed soon after Chandler had reached a height of 500 feet that it was not functioning properly. It skipped, missed and then stopped.

Plane Crashed at 3:30 P. M.

The crash occurred about 3:30 p. m.

The plane is owned by the Reynolds Airways Inc., the organization which recently purchased Curtiss field in Long Island and owns and operates nationally a large number of commercial and pleasure aircraft.

The injured, all in the Muhlenberg hospital, are:

Fred Heater, 40, New Brunswick; his daughter, Bessie, 15; Matthew Lutz, 14; Louis Bellis, New Brunswick.

Saw Plane Crash.

Charles Garamba, an employee on the Schneck farm, said he was working in a field only about 100 feet away from the orchard when the crash occurred.

"I saw the plane headed my way, flying low," he said.

"Its tail seemed to be dragging.

"I noticed that the motor wasn't working at all. Then I heard the women screaming and the men shouting. I distinctly heard some one shiek: 'Turn this way.' Then the plane came down. It made an awful crash. Just before that a woman's voice screamed: 'Oh, My God.'"

Schenck, with his son, Rob, and Garamba, were the first to reach the wreckage. Chandler and King were far down in the fuselage in the pilot's cockpit.

Chandler, although his face was crushed, had his hands "frozen" on the controls. The "stick" or control lever, pulled back to its limit, gave evidence that the pilot had made last frantic efforts to right the plane.

Schenck's description of the accident was:

"My son and I were working in a field about 100 feet from the place the plane came down. We had noticed as the plane got near us that the motor was dead and that the nose of the ship was wavering.

Crashes Ino Orchard.

"Then for a moment it seemed to steady and glide nicely.

"The plane started to wobble again at the nose, and then it crashed into the orchard. We could see the men at the controls tugging away and we heard the shouts and screams of the passengers."

Schenck and his son hurried over to the orchard.

"When we got there we didn't hear a sound," Schenck continued.

"All we saw was the smashed up plane. The wings were broken and the body of the plane was crushed. The wood from the cabin lay in splinters all around.

"The sight of the interior made us sick."

Carter Tiffany, vice president of the Reynolds Airways, Inc., issued the following statement:

"Since we commenced operations on July 15 of this year, our planes have carried more than 4,000 passengers and flown approximately 35,000 miles. We have taken every precaution in this passenger carrying work.

"The plane which had the unfortunate accident today was licensed by the United States department of commerce and was subjected to our usual daily inspecion. We shall continue our operations as usual."

RECEIVERSHIP FOR KLAN ASKED

Claimed Society Has Lost Sight of Its True Purpose.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—Startling charges were made in affidavits filed in United States District court here today, designed to support a suit for an injunction which would cripple the K. K. K. in Pennsylvania. The litigation instituted by insurgent klansmen, seek to have a receiver appointed for the order, claiming its true purposes have been lost sight of.

Hearing has been set for September 20, at Erie, Pa., The death of Thomas H. Abbott, in the klan riot at Carnegia, Pa., in the summer of 1923 was capitalized by Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard, to the extent that 25,000 new members joined the order, according to various affidavits.

William I. Likins of Louisville, Ky., a former Unfontown, Pa., newspaperman testified that the klan deliberately staged demonstrations to incite the foreign element against it, so that the reaction would result in added members to the order. In his affidavit he said that "the five principal men who sold the klan just like any other article of commerce, were Hiram Wesley Evans, the imperial wizard, George F. Fox of Dallas, Texas; E. Y. Clark, D. C. Stephenson of Indiana, and Zeke Marvin of Dallas, Texas."

DE VALERA GROUP MINORITY PARTY AFTER ELECTION

DUBLIN, Sept. 17—(U. P.)—William T. Cosgrave's government party had edged out Eamon De Valera's republicans by the narrow margin of four or five seats in the Irish elections held Thursday, returns available late tonight indicated.

The entire cabinet of Cosgrave succeeded in retaining its seats in the dail, and it appeared likely that the cabinet would be composed as follows:

W. T. Cosgrave and D. Fitzgerald, defense:
E. Blythe, finance.
E. Mulcahy, local government.
Thomas Johnston, labor leader, seemed certain of defeat.

At 9:30 p. m. the count on seats stood.

John Duvall of Indianapolis who is charged with "selling" offices over which he had the power of appointment. Witnesses in the Duvall trial testified that Shumaker had bartered his support to Duval in exchange for political appointments.

Thus for the moment Dr. Shumaker became the central point of attack in Indiana's amazing political situation.

Reply Not Ready.

Gilliom, one of Shumaker's most bitter enemies, started his latest action after Shumaker published a statement and letters which contended that United States Senators Watson and Robinson of Indiana had worked in support of anti-saloon league and attempted to influence members of the state supreme court in deciding the contempt case.

Shumaker has not yet had an opportunity to reply officially to these charges but it is expected that he will be called as a witness in the Duvall trial.

Gilliom has proved the nemisis of Shumaker since the fight for control in Indiana became bitter and the forces of the klan, with which Shumaker was at least in sympathy, attained power and more recently began to slip as its leader was ordered to prison and dissention arose within its own organization.

Bone Dry Law Rankles.

Gilliom has been especially bitter against Shumaker for the so-called bone dry law which prohibits use of medicinal liquor. Gilliom has admitted he violated it and charged that Governor Jackson also obtained whisky for a member of his family when physicians believed it was the only agent which would save life.

Briefly utlined, Shumaker's correspondence with relation to Senators Watson and Robinson is as follows:

Shumaker charged Senator Arthur S. Robinson appealed to Senator James E. Watson to keep the league superintendent from going to jail.

Watson then called him on the telephone, Shumaker alleged, and informed him he had consulted with three justices of the five members of the court—the three supposed to be unfriendly to Shumaker and they had agreed there would be no jail sentence.

Editor to Testify.

Shumaker said the only aid he had solicited was to have the pending case disposed of before election time so it would not influence his actions in the election campaign.

Watson repudiated his telephone statement in a subsequent letter, according to Shumaker.

Robinson, in a statement issued today, admitted he talked with Watson regarding the matter "but only to express my sympathy for Dr. Shumaker." He confirmed Shumaker's statement he had only solicited aid of the senators in speeding decision in the court proceeding.

If the Supreme court reopens the case, both of the senators would be called to testify under Gilliom's proposal. In addition, Henry Lane Wilson, former ambassador to Mexico, from whose home Watson is said to have telephoned Shumaker in the disputed conversation, would be asked to confirm or deny the conversation.

Boyd Gurley, editor of the Indianapolis Times, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, and a leader in advocating the state political investigations which have culminated in numerous indictments, also would be called by Gilliom.

JENSEN OVERDUE WITH FILM LION

firmation of the report had been received.

If Jensen were successful it would be the second time a nonstop transcontinental flight had been made. Lieutenants Kelly and MacReady, army flyers, made the first, traveling from east to west.

Ready For Leo.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y. Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—As landing fields all along the northern air mail routes reported no word of Martin Jensen, Dole flight flier and Leo, the moving picture lion, enroute here, from San Diego, officials at Roosevelt field were given to expressions of anxiety. Jensen was an hour over due at three o'clock here while the airports at both Chicago and Columbus were without news of the flier.

All was in readiness at the field for receiving Leo, including John McGrail, veteran animal trainer. A cage wagon and five gallons of milk awaited his majesty.

Whereabouts Unknown.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—(INS)—His exact whereabouts unknown, Martin Jensen, who is piloting the Merto-Goldwyn-Mayor studio lion on a non-stop flight from San Diego to New York, was believed nearing the Ohio river valley this afternoon.

Although his plane is equipped with a long-distance wireless sending set, no direct word has been heard from Jensen since 6 o'clock last night when a San Diego amateur wireless operator picked up a message stating Jensen was flying high and expected to reach New York at noon today.

VETERAN PASSES AWAY.

NORFOLK, Neb., Sept. 17—(U. P.) Charles Henry Tracy, 89, Civil war veteran and father of City Engineer H. H. Tracy of Norfolk, passed away at the home of his son here Saturday morning, following a paralytic stroke four days ago. WASHES HANDS IN LINDSEY DISPUTE

Denver Bar Association Drops Charges in "Records of Shame" Involving Confessions Of Young Girls.

DENVER, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—The Denver bar association has washed its hands of the dispute between Ben B. Lindsey, former judge of the Denver Juvenile court, and Philip S. Van Cise, ex-district attorney, over "records of shame" involving confessions of young girls and women. The association issued an official statement dropping the charges.

Van Cise charged that Lindsey had removed some court records upon being ousted from office some time ago. Lindsey says the records taken from the court were his personal files and, after burning them in a public manner as an answer to the charges, declared that no one had any legal right to take them away from him. Lindsey said he destroyed the records so that "thousands of Denver homes would be saved from destruction."

FIRMS SEEKING TO RADIO FIGHT

Rickard Says Reported Injunction Against Broadcasting Absurd.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—A report that the Columbia Broadcasting Co. would seek an injunction against the National Broadcasting Co. to restrain the latter from broadcasting the Dempsey-Tunney fight was today termed preposterous by Tex Rickard, promoter of the big fight today.

"The National Broadcasting Co. has a contract to radio the fight all over the country," he said, "and it is an exclusive contract, covering all stations outside of Chicago.

"The Chicago stations will broadcast the fight here of course under special arrangements. None of them however, may send the fight outside of the city limits proper, leaving full scope to the National."

DESERT PLANE CRASH IS FATAL

ger. It occurred at a desolate region eight miles east of Llano, a desert oasis. Parachutes were strapped to the backs of the men, but apparently none had made an effort to jump from the plane.

On Way to Races.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—The three naval fliers in a naval land plane which crashed near Palmdale were Lieut. E. A. Booth, Aviation Chief Machinist's Mate Kenneth McRae and Aviation Chief Machinist's Mate C. S. Harrison, it was learned here tonight.

The plane had taken off from the naval air station here for Spokane to attend the national air race there. Its first intended stop was Sacramento.

Meager Details.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Two aviators were killed in an airplane crash this afternoon near Llano, on the edge of the Mojave desert, according to a report flashed to the sheriff's office here.

Meager advices received here said the wrecked ship was a navy plane.

Both fliers were clad in naval uniforms.

The plane crashed on the desert waste twenty-seven miles east of Palmdale.

Rescuers set out to extricate the bodies of the victims from the wreckage.

MILES and More MILES

BEFORE your next week-end trip, fill your tank with Summer Conoco Gasoline. Then keep tab on your mileage. When you arrive back home, figure up your miles per gallon. That's the way to check our claims that Summer Conoco is packed with extra miles.

This summer make your gasoline deliver—make it deliver miles. And we promise you this: that—provided your car is in good condition—you'll never be disappointed when you use Conoco.

It pays to be particular when you buy gasoline. Careless motorists penalize themselves every time they allow inferior fuels in the tank.

Their cost per mile of motor operation is out of all proportion to what it should be. They are paying a premium simply because they never take the trouble to figure out the miles they get per gallon.

So play fair with your pocketbook. Use Concco regularly and keep down your motoring costs.

Just look for the Conoco sign on service stations and garages.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER

1—Sets new coast-to-coast record!

2—Wins 1st and 2nd places in Atlantic City Stock Car Race!

3—Climbs Pikes Peak—22 minutes, 47 seconds!

During the first week of September, The Studebaker Commander, by thrilling victories over time and space, again proved itself "the greatest achievement of post-war automotive engineering."

Endurance—Stamina—Dependability

New York Harbor to San Francisco Bay in 77 hours and 40 minutes—total elapsed time. You may not have Ab Jenkins' craving to shatter records, but you will find in the car which he used dependability, freedom from repair expense, long life, and abundant, eager power for all your needs.

Speed—Smoothness—Comfort

Two Studebaker Commanders were entered in the 75-mile race for stock cars listed below $2000, at Atlantic City on Labor Day. They finished first and second, with average speeds of 85.95 and 84.58 miles per hour. The latest models of Chrysler "72," Buick Master Six, Nash Advanced Six and Hudson were also entered.

You won't ever want to go that fast, but you can find daily use for the acceleration, the smoothness, the comfort which the quiet Big Six motor offers at ordinary speeds.

Mountain-Climbing

In the stock car race to the top of Pikes Peak on Labor Day, The Commander was second only to a car which lists at three times The Commander price.

Thus we not only claim but prove that this versatile automobile will out-perform any other car within a thousand dollars of its price.

No wonder The Commander outsells the combined totals of all the other cars in the world that equal it in rated power.

NEW LOW PRICES

All Studebaker models have more than $100 in extra equipment without extra cost, including front and rear bumpers; shock absorbers; coincidental lock to steering-ignition; engine thermometer and hydrostatic gasoline gauge on dash; etc.

Believes Cholera Checked—Although several new cases of hog cholera have appeared during last few days in southwestern Lancaster county, County Agent Purbaugh believes that for the present the disease has been brought under control here. Two farmers lost forty hogs apiece before preventative measures were generally adopted. Several others have now lost a hog or two, but vaccination has warded off death in most cases. Kramer still remains the center of the infected area and all the cases reported are within three or four miles of that village. Many farmers in other parts of the county, however, are taking expert advice and vaccinating their droves.

Mothers Offer Help Judge In Baby Problem

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 17—(AP)—Mothers of the nation have extended their knowledge of parenthood to help Judge Carl C. Weygandt of Cleveland solve the perplexing problem of whether Mrs. Sam Smith gave birth to a boy or girl.

Letters by the hundreds have poured into the Cleveland office of the judge since the unusual case first attracted attention, Judge Weygandt said here today.

From San Francisco, Dallas, Portland and Atlanta, have come letters from sympathetic persons seeking to bring peace to the unhappy mother, Judge Weygandt said.

One woman suggested that the city of Cleveland be called into a week of prayer.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith wanted a boy, I understand but both will be happy knowing positively that the girl is theirs."

Three babies born on the same day to different Smith's families, caused the trouble.

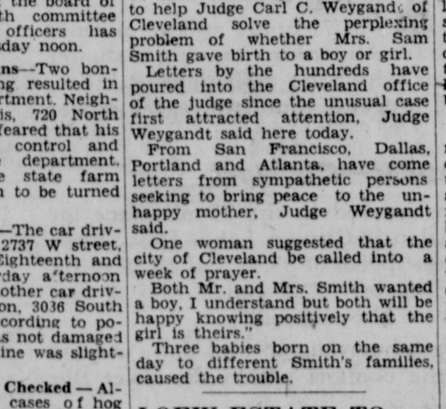

LOEW ESTATE TO GO TO WIDOW AND HIS TWO SONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(U. P.)—The widow and two sons of the late Marcus Loew will receive the bulk of the theatrical magnate's estate, under his will filed today in the surrogate's court.

Placed at "between $35,000 and $50,000" in the will, it will be several months before the exact amount of his fortune can be determined, Leopold Friedman, Loew's personal counsel, said.

Some estimates placed the estate as high as $35,000,000.

DRY ADVOCATES HOPE FOR MORE STRINGENT LAW

Several Bills To Be Presented to Enable Tightening Prohibition Net.

DES MOINES, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—The Volstead law is to be fitted out with a brand new set of strong, sharp teeth, if the plans of John B. Hammond, Iowa dry crusader, carry through successfully.

Hammond, who fought temperance battles in his home state here for twenty-five years, was so successful in his campaign against rum in the last New York legislature, according to anti-liquor leaders of the Empire state, that he has been chosen to head the lobby of the National Civic League during the next session of Congress.

The veteran foe of liquor has prepared drafts of several bills embodying changes in the national liquor laws which he declares will permit drawing the net more tightly about scofflaws of the home and hip pocket brand, not to mention amendments relating to sale and manufacture.

Drastic Changes

One of the most drastic of the proposed changes, he states, relates to the search and seizure. The new provision would permit search of the family home and confiscation of instruments and materials for manufacture. Penalty for officers making a search on faulty warrants would be eliminated also.

In addition Hammond would provide for a permanent "padlock" on property adjudged a nuisance, and a permanent injunction against the person convicted of keeping it. The machinery for enforcement of the abatement features of the prohibition law is changed to speed up court procedure following arrests and seizures.

Other Amendments

Other changes advocated by Hammond are:

Absolute prohibition of physicians prescribing liquor or filling of prescriptions by druggests.

Prohibit sale or manufacture of all malt liquors, regardless of alcoholic content.

Require reports of sales from retail and wholesale dealers in denatured alcohol.

Briefs of the proposed measures have been sent to the New York headquarters of the National Civic League for final approval, Hammond stated. He now anticipates going to Washington in November to prepare for the siege in Congress.

Ohio Referendum.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Wet and dry leaders throughout the nation are looking to a referendum election in Ohio, which probably will be held this autumn, as a barometer which may indicate the swing of the sentiment of Buckeye voters on the wet-and-dry issue, for the first time in five years.

Added importance is given the contest because Ohio, one of the strongest dry communities of the union heretofore, was the birthplace of the dry movement, and still is the national headquarters of the Anti-Saloon league, and the World League Against Alcoholism, the two leading dry organizations.

The referendum, which probably will be ordered as soon as official checking of some thousands of signatures is completed and certified, is upon a state law, passed by the last legislature, known as the Marshall bill. It is designed to cure the fatal legal defects of the "fee" courts of village mayors and justices of the peace, which were outlawed by a recent decision of the United States supreme court.

Fines Were Split.

These petty courts formerly reaped a rich harvest for judges, constables, clerks and other attaches, by "splitting" enormous sums of money collected as fines for liquor law violations, the "split" being designated as "fees." The supreme court held that no judge could give defendants a fair trial, when his compensation depended entirely on the fees he obtained from fines assessed when he found the defendants guilty.

The Marshall bill plans to meet this decision by what its opponents assert is a mere subterfuge, limiting the salaries of the judges to fixed sums, but making the "salary money" come from the fines.

"Wet" opponents of the bill assert that there has been a strong reversal of opinion by many voters on the prohibition question since it became the national law, and that the election returns will reflect this. But the Marshall bill numbers not only the wets, but many "dry" among its opponents, including Senator J. H. Bender, of Cleveland a prohibition leader who has broken with the Anti-Saloon league because of what he alleges are its "corrupt political methods."

Clear Cut Issue.

The Anti-Saloon league, however, has declared the Marshall bill referendum is a clear-cut wet and dry issue, has taken active sponsorship of the fight to enact the bill, and in a sweeping public statement, has stigmatized supporters of the referendum as "bootleggers and their friends," and called upon all church members to oppose the referendum.

The issue, is further beclouded by the fact that many automobile clubs, mindful of the fact that motorists, too were preyed upon by the country squires, have actively taken up the fight against enactment of the Marshall bill.

But leaders on both sides of the fight agree that the election will be some sort of an index of the sentiment of the state on prohibition, and should reveal whether Buckeye voters are as heartily in favor of it now as they were ten years ago.

Regains Old Liquor.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—One thousand gallons of bottled, pre-war whiskey, which has been subject to numerous removals, to and from government storage spaces and the owner's home, apparently has gone back to the owner to stay.

The liquor was given back to Alexander Rieger, president of the Home Trust company, a local banking institution, after it had been under almost constant litigation in the courts since 1920, when it was seized by government agents.

The transfer was made possible by an order from Sam Haley, prohibition administrator of this district. Haley had previously refused a return order.

The owner seemingly does not trust his home since prohibition, as it is understood the liquor was moved to a private warehouse. The movement of the large cargo was shrouded in secrecy to prevent th congregation of thirsty crowds, and the possibility of its being waylaid.

Obituary

THOMAS HAROLD BRICK

Was born September 25, 1900, at Crete, Nebraska, living there until fifteen years of age, when he moved with his parents to Lincoln. He enlisted in the United States army May 25, 1917 and was discharged September 25, 1919. From 1920 to 1926 he was associated with the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph company, but about a year ago he entered the employ of the Iowa-Nebraska Power company.

He was married November 15, 1922, to Vivian Johnson, who survives him. His death occurred September 8, 1927, at the age of 26 years, 11 months and 18 days, as the result of an accident, while working.

Besides his wife he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney H. Brick, five brothers, Hobart, Melvin, Edmund, Clinton and Vernon, all of Lincoln, and five sisters, Mildred, Evelyn, Betty June, Virginia Lee and Mrs. O. E. Wittstruck of Denver, Colo.

CONTRIBUTED.

About the only compensation forthcoming for the long absence of the liquor, is its seven years of aging which is indicated should materially better its flavor.

England Growing Sober.

LONDON, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—England is growing more sober. Slowly but steadily convictions for drunkeness are decreasing, according to licensing statistics for England and Wales for 1926 issued by the home department.

Last year's total of convictions for intoxication was the lowest in seven years. The actual figure was 67,126, compared with 188,877 in 1913.

Points from the statistics show that:

Drunkeness follows prosperity. Mining areas in the north of England show a 33 per cent decrease owing to the coal strike.

Saloons have dwindled by a third since 1895, but the number of clubs licensed to sell intoxicants has doubled.

Saturday is the most drunken day Sunday, Tuesday, and Wednesday the most sober.

There is a saloon to every 489 persons, compared with one to every 370 in 1908.

Drunkeness from drinking methylated spirit has decreased by twelve per cent in the past year.

Deaths from alcoholism have dropped from 2,153 to 499 since 1913.

A fact stressed in the statistics is that drunkeness is largely dependent on social conditions. It cannot be denied, it is stated, that with an increased degree of comfort and prosperity in the industrial classes the percentage of insobriety is bound to take an upward turn.

ACE MATCHED WITH DUNDEE, OCTOBER 29

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17—(U. P.)—Joe Dundee, world's welterweight champion, will defend his title against Ace Hudkins, the "Nebraska Wildcat" in a ten-round bout at Wrigley field here Saturday night, October 29, Promoter Dick Donald announced tonight.

Both fighters agreed to weigh in at 2 p m on the day of the fight below the welter limit, 147 pounds.

Dundee will receive the biggest purse ever given a boxer in California with Hudkins working on a smaller percentage, Donald said.

POLICE ARREST TWELVE IN RAID

Eleven men and one woman were arrested in a raid early Saturday evening at 1705 N street where officers are said to have found two pints and a half gallon of alleged liquor.

The woman and ten of the men were released to appear at the police station, the woman at 9 o'clock Monday and the men at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. No formal charges have been filed.

Neighbors said that while officers were raiding the place, two women and four or five men escaped from the house by jumping off the roof of the front porch.

The raid was conducted by Lieut. Joe Rymer of the city police and Federal Agent Karl Schmitt.

LEGION PARADE TO BE MONDAY

Will Be Well Guarded Because of Communist Threats.

PARIS, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—When the American legion parade swings down the Champs Elysees Monday the members of Paris Post No. 1, bringing up the rear, will stride along with an unusual musical accompaniment, if the offer of Sedley Peck of Los Angeles, Calif., is accepted.

Peck says he'll play his accordion throughout the line of march.

Paris Post has no band—and wants one. But Peck is the only working musician available, and all he can play is the accordion.

If his offer is accepted, he'll go through with it and he declares he'll try and squeeze out some fairish strains as competition for the blare of the twenty-one legion bands that will have gone before him.

The parades will be guarded because of communist threats to retaliate for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Although the plans for sabotage were reported to have been abandoned, French authorities are taking no chances.

Marshal Foch, generallissimo of the allied armies during the war, spent a good part of today engaged in the legion's host of activities.

This afternoon General Pershing and Commander Savage paid an official call on Marshal Foch at his home, where Commander Savage voiced a glowing tribute from the members of the legion for the wartime generalissimo who is now one of the two honorary national commanders of the legion. General Pershing is the other.

Late this afternoon the mayor of Marseilles, accompanied by Pierre Coli, one-armed brother of Major Francois Coli, missing trans-Atlantic flyer, who was lost with Capt. Charles Nungesser, called on Commander Savage and expressed his thanks for the efforts the members of the American legion had made to find his brother.

American Women Go Into Business In French Cities

PARIS, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—More and more American women are establishing businesses in Paris or other parts of France.

In the narrow little street Bonaparte, now on the Rive Gauche, is a charming little shop "La Guirlande," the outgrowth of an interesting piece of work begun several years ago by Mrs. Richard E. Meyers, wife of Richard Meyers, the American composer.

Four years ago she happened upon a group of Russian emigrees who were trying to eke out a living by doing the one thing they knew—embroidering dresses and blouses in Russian style. Mr. Meyers undertook to obtain commissions here and in America and soon built up a large clientele for this special type of garment. Thirty-five women, many of whom belonged to Russian nobility, are now working for the business which has assumed large proportions.

Besides all kinds of lovely embroidered work, "La Guirlande" has a choice collection of antiquities and modern art objects, discovered among the Russian and American art colonies in Paris.

In the rue Jacob, just around the corner from "Guirlande," is "Eliza Lee's Tea-shop," a delightful little spot where Americans go to indulge in hot-cakes, waffles, ham and eggs and other American favorites. Eliza Lee came over to France with her Chinese cook and set up this little eating-house, delightfully decorated. It is difficult to find a seat on Sunday mornings, for that is when the Americans all flock in for hot waffles and biscuits.

"La Petite Cassergle" is another American woman's enterprise in Montparnasso. It is famous for its delicious hot oatmeal porridge, served in little earthen casseroles with real thick cream and powdered sugar. Devil's food, gingerbread and strawberry shortcake are also specialties of this little American corner in Paris.

SCHLEE, BROCK SAIL FOR HOME

TOKYO, Sept. 17—(U. P.)—William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, persuaded by friends to abandon their hazardous plan to fly across the Pacific, sailed today aboard the Korea Maru with the monoplane Pride of Detroit.

Brock and Schlee had reached Tokyo in an attempt to fly around the world from Harbor Grace, New Foundland, when the flight was abandoned. They were given a farewell luncheon and an enthusiastic sendoff today.

From San Francisco Brock and Schlee will fly to Detroit.

Hawaiian Village Fears Eruption as Goddess of Volcanos Makes Visit

LAHAINA, Maui, Sept. 16—(I. N. S.)—Old residents of this peaceful little Hawaiian village are agog these days over the reported appearance of Madam Pele, volcano goddess, to not less than three of their neighbors on three separate and distinct occasions.

The appearance of the fire woman, native folk declare, portends an outbreak of lava at Kileauea or somewhere else on the slopes of Mauna Loa mountain. The fact that she has appeared on the island of Maui, fifty miles across the channel from Hawaii, the volcano island, has not fooled the old inhabitants into believing that there is to be an outbreak here. In the old days, Madam Pele frequently went from island to island, they declare, but always returned to her home on the island of Hawaii.

Of the three persons to whom she appeared, Pele always asked a personal favor. The first of the three was asked to give her water, the second tobacco, and the third rest and tobacco. Old Malai, a Malayan living near Mala wharf, where the inter-island steamships tie up, was the third person visited by Pele. He had returned to his home just before dusk, he says, when a bent old woman and a small dog appeared.

Wright Beacon Lighthouse Is Memorial to Wright Brothers

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Tranquil, semi-tropical shores of Old Albemarle, from which man first learned to fly, will come into the national spotlight again one year hence.

Put off twelve months or more that it might be made a more lavish event, a gigantic celebration commemorating Orville and Wilbur Wright, the world's pioneer birdsmen who singled out this remote beginning-place of eastern civilization along the North Carolina coast for their first airplane flight, is now being planned.

The exact date of the jubilee has not been fully decided, but it is generally accepted that the celebration will be held simultaneously with the completion of the federal memorial to the Wright brothers off Kill Devil Hill.

Program Postponed.

Under tentative plans, the memorial will take the form of a towering lighthouse, to be called "The Wright Beacon." Dedication of the site of the memorial was to have taken place in August, but was postponed.

Suggestion has come from various quarters that the celebration be held along with the annual observance of the birthday of Virginia Dare, America's first native-born, whose fate, along with that of Sir Walter Raleigh's "Lost Colony," remains an enternal riddle in American history.

Quaint exercises, commemorating Virginia Dare's birth are held on Roanoke island each year, and attracts thousands of visitors. The ceremonies, on the site of old Fort Raleigh, are largely religious in character.

This tribute to the world's first flyers is in the hands of the Kill Devil memorial association, which was formed recently at a meeting in Elizabeth City. The association, which has charge of all plans for the celebration, is made up of a national council, to be named, headed by Congressman Lindsay C. Warren, and a regional council of two representatives from each of the counties surrounding Albermarle sound.

Bridge Not Ready.

One of the reasons for the postponement of the dedication of the memorial site this year was because the incompletion of a giant bridge across Roanoke sound, connecting picturesque Roanoke island with the "outside world."

The bridge is expected to be finished long before the celebration next year, and with the island easily accessible by automobile, thousands of persons are expected to be attracted to the event.

A review of the progress of aviation since it had its birth off these shores a quarter century ago, will be a part of the program, and under this plan, an attempt will be made to have the attendance and participation in the program of the country's most celebrated fliers.

Fleet Airplanes Ready to Hop Off In Big Air Derby

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—A great fleet of airplane entrants in America's most ambitious aviation event was assembling here tonight in preparation for the New York to Spokane air derby which begins Monday.

More than fifty planes, their pilots contesting for prizes totalling nearly $50,000, will be entered in the three classes of the derby. Beginning at 6 a. m., Monday, they will take off, to furnish the people in every state between New York and Washington with a thrilling air spectacle.

Thirty-three planes were being inspected by five government inspectors at Roosevelt field tonight and twenty-three more were expected to reach there before ten a. m., Sunday, when rules of the trans-continental race will be explained.

Interest is greatest in the planes entered in class C, the non-stop event.

New Heat Wave Predicted For the Middlewest

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—(U. P.)—Oppressive heat, which moderated yesterday after settling on the middlewest for four days, will return Sunday, according to Professor Henry J. Cox, U. S. meteorologist at the Chicago weather bureau. The coming hot spell will not be so protracted as the earlier heat wave, he said.

NORMAL SCHOOL LOSS IS $7,000

Money in Failed Bank Not Covered by Depository Bond.

Audit of Kearney Normal Books Completed By Sommer.

Over $7,000 belonging to the state normal school at Kearney was deposited in the failed City National bank of that city, which closed its doors on May 14, last, a report by state Accountant C. A. Sommer to the state auditor's office disclosed Saturday. This money was not covered by a depository bond, such as the state treasurer requires when he places public funds in banks that do not operate under the guaranty law of Nebraska.

The Kearney normal will, therefore, lose the money, except such portion of it as may be realized from the assets of the suspended institution, now under receivership. Proper claims have been filed with the receiver by the school authorities. The amount is $7,275, of which $6,454 belonged to the book deposit fund and $821 to other funds of the state teachers' college.

State Accountant Sommer calls attention to the fact that, while the law requires deposits of state and county funds in banks to be protected by surety bonds for double the amount deposited in each case, unless the bank is safeguarded by the guaranty fund, this provision does not extend to funds of the state university and the state normal schools.

Suggests Bonds Be Furnished.

"The reason for this probably is that the institutions are supposed to remit to the state treasury all funds coming into their hands," continues the accountant's statement.

"However, such remittances under the law are made 'from time to time'—once a month as a rule—and in the meantime the daily receipts are deposited in some bank for safekeeping, to accumulate until the monthly remittance to the state treasurer is made. Thus at times, the amount on deposit in a local bank will be quite considerable. Besides there are revolving funds, including dining room receipts and text book deposits.

"There seems no good reason why banks not under the guaranty fund should furnish security for deposits of educational funds, the same as they do for other state and county funds. In the absence of any statutory provisions, the state normal board might well require the various normal schools to exact bonds securing their deposits in local banks that do not come under the depositors' guaranty".

Fees Aggregate Large Sum.

In his audit of the Kearney normal books State Accountant Sommer found that during the last two school years, ending in August, the sum of $52,018 was collected from students as matriculation and college fees and turned into the state treasury. Of that amount, $7,274 was credited to the library cash fund and the rest went to the institution cash fund.

The legislature always appropriates receipts from these sources for the use of the normal schools, and it is paid out on vouchers and warrants passing through the regular state channels. Money lost in the bank failure was that which had not yet been remitted to the state treasurer.

A dormitory and a dining room are operated by the Kearney normal school on its campus, furnishing meals and lodging to the students at rates just about sufficient to pay the cost. Those rooming in the dormitory pay $1 to $2 a week for rooms and $5 a week for board. Non-roomers pay $5.50 a week for meals.

Total attendance during the last regular school year was 1,519, while that for the summer term this year was 1,632.

Road Conditions

Roads are in fine condition today. Heavy rains the past week around Louisville, Murdock, Tecumseh and Humboldt, have left the roads dry but rough in spots.

Gravelled roads are good. Somewhat dusty. Tourist traffic in Nebraska continues as heavy as usual.

U. S. No. 38, Omaha to Lincoln, gravelled and paved, good. West to Atlanta; good on dirt stretches to Denver. No. 3. cut-off from Culbertson to Benkleman, bad in wet weather; otherwise fairly good. Under construction in places. Good into Denver.

U. S. No. 77. Sioux City to Oakland, gravelled. Dirt to Hooper, gravelled to Lincoln, Beatrice and Wymore, good through Kansas to Oklahoma City.

State No. 81. Yankton to Norfolk, good. Gravelled south to York, excepting short stretch south of Columbus not yet completed. Good south to Wichita.

State No. 24. To Nebraska City; good excepting between Bennet and Palmyra. No. 11 to Eagle, gravelled. No. 43, south to Palmyra and No. 24 to Nebraska City, gravelled. To Union, about three miles yet to be gravelled. Road open and good.

State Nos. 73 and 75, gravelled. Omaha to Hiawatha, Kas. No. 36, east to St. Josseph, about twenty-five miles yet to be gravelled and balance paved to St. Joseph and Kansas City.

State No. 3. Auburn to Beatrice, the dirt stretches are now being gravelled. Gravelled west to Hebron. Good wst to Culbertson.

State No. 11, to Grand Island, fine. No. 2, Grand Island to Alliance, good except for stretches under construction. No. 11, Grand Island to Burwell, fine.

SUPREME COURT OPENS MONDAY

Appeals In Murder Cases to Be Heard First Week.

All Commissioners and Judges Here for Fall Session.

The fall term of the Supreme court will open Monday with all the judges and commissioners present. Chief Justice Goss, and Judges E. E. Good and W. H. Thompson have been in Lincoln for several weeks, having taken their vacations earlier in the summer. Judges William B. Rose, James R. Dean, George A. Day and George A. Eberly are back in Lincoln and ready for the first sitting Monday morning.

Some fifty motions are on file for hearing Monday. Among the cases to be heard during the week are the appeals of two men convicted of murder and sentenced to life terms in the penitentiary. One is that of Bert Davis, who was found guilty by a Red Willow county jury of poisoning his first wife while they were living at Beaver City. The other is that of Albert W. Hill who was convicted in Sheridan county of killing Neil O'Bleness. Both cases are set down for argument on Wednesday, September 21.

Another case is Byrl C. Kirk's application for a writ of habeas corpus to release him from the penitentiary where he is serving a twenty-year term for complicity in the killing of an Omaha policeman. Kirk contends that his return to the penitentiary after having been released on "furlough" was illegal and that his constitutional rights are being violated by keeping him in confinement. A number of other criminal cases are on the Supreme court's calendar.

While the Supreme court is hearing these cases, the commission will be busy with twenty-four civil actions, Frank L. Wolff of Omaha will take his seat Monday for the first time as a member of the commission. He succeeds C. E. Sandall of York who resigned.

Judge Wolff will be a member of the first division of the commission, which is presided over by Judge W. T. Thompson. The third member of this division is Judge W. W. Wilson. The second division is presided over by Judge G. W. Tibbets, and the other two members are Judge J. C. Martin and Judge Thomas F. Neighbors.

Homecoming Days Enjoyed By Many

(Special to The Star.)

BEATRICE, Neb., Sept. 17—The two days' homecoming at Liberty, which closed Saturday evening, was largely attended by persons living in southeast Gage county. The speaker Friday was Congressman J. W. Norton of Polk county and on Saturday afternoon A. J. Weaver of Falls City. One of the pleasing features of the affair was the wonderful display of grains, pumpkins and other products of Liberty and vicinity, showing what old Gage county can produce when there is a sufficient rainfall.

Legion Turns to Practical Side of Convention After a Memorial for U. S. War Dead

PARIS, Sept. 17—(United Press.)—High officials of the American legion who today renewed their pledge of remembrance to the 30,000 American soldiers, buried in turned tonight to the practical business of preparing for the opening of the largest convention of its kind ever held outside the United States.

The 1,507 American soldiers buried at Suresnes in the outskrits of Paris today received the salute of Generald Pershing, Marshal Foch, Commander Howard P. Savage of the American legion, and other notables who made a pilgrimage to the cemetery.

Foch and Pershing spoke with glowing tribute to the Americans who died. Some 200 legionnaires and French civilians accompanied the little party to the center of the grassy burial ground where the heroic dead were honored.

Taps Is Blown.

When the last word had been said, the peaceful silence which has enwrapped this resting place of warriors was gently disturbed by the mournful notes of taps.

The first official act of the day was the visit to Suresnes where Sheldon Whitehouse, counsellor of the United States embassy, presided. The cemetery is a spot of marble crosses.

Before each of them fluttered a French and an American flag. In the name of the United States and France, the pilgrims saluted the dead. In the air above two French army planes droned a monotone accompaniment to the speakers below.

"We come this morning," said Pershing, "to pay the tribute of loving remembrance to the Americans who lie buried in the cemeteries of France. These comrades of ours came to France with all the enthusiasm a man can have when he engages to defend a sacred cause. Representing a people who ever have fought for liberty and justice, they came to answer the call of their traditional friends across the seas.

Flower of Young Manhood.

"Our comrades whom we honor were the flower of young manhood. Theirs was the privilege of giving their lives for their country. As we gather here to fulfill in part the mission that brings us on our pilgrimage, our hearts are filled with pride in their achievements.

"No soldier can ask a sweeter resting place than the field of glory where he fell with people of two nations to watch over him with unceasing solitude to each of whom he has become a symbol of mutual gratitude. We who were their comrades can only ask when our work is done that we may rest as they rest here, in peace and security."

Marshal Foch emphasized the peaceful desires of America's soldiers.

"As we gather here solemnly," he said, "before the numerous tombs, what lessons arise from their impressive silence. These men so young who sleep before us their last sleep did they ever in a single instance desire, wish, or prepare for war with the atrocities that war brought? Were they threatened in their immediate interests? Were they drawn by search for glory or fortune. Nothing of the sort inspired them.

Justice, Liberty, Peace.

"But on the day they saw justice, liberty and the peace of the world menaced by violence and force, nothing stopped them. They resolutely dashed to arms. They have pointed us a duty to fill in order to remain loyal to their memory, their example, and their task. So, let us keep the faith that animated them and preserve the union which brought victory."

Savage delivered an address to the dead.

"I am addressing you, my comrades in death," he said, "as you sleep in your 30,000 graves, rather than addressing your comrades who stand here assembled today to do you honor.

"Ten years ago you were busy in the shops and farms of America, 3,000 miles away. Then you took up arms for the right. You became our buddies and we became yours. We were tested together upon the field of battle. We survived, but your our bravest and best, gave your all. Nine years ago we left you here, safe in the care of our sister nation.

Achievement and Victory.

"We have banded ourselves together in the American legion, for we have learned from you that in united strength and leadership lies achievement and victory. Today we come to commune with you and to report to you whether we have kept faith with you, carried out the trust you left us. It is for you, my comrades, to judge whether we have been worthy of the trust you placed in us. Our task is not finished, but we will struggle on. We pledge you, our silent comrades, not to give up the good fight. We greet you once again in affection. Comrades, we, your buddies from home, salute you."

Chaplain Dubel of Philadelphia pronounced the benediction and taps sounded from among the trees. Foch, Pershing and the others stood with eyes lowered before the graves.

The tremendous task of preparing for the convention was in its final stages tonight. A service of supply commensurate with the number of visiting legionnaires has been created.

Hospitals for Visitors.

There are hospitals and other facilities for the veterans. Monday, the year of work and expectation will culminate in the legion parade and the first session of the convention at the Torcadore. The headquarters of the Franco-American society were turned over to Savage today to serve as the legion general headquarters.

About 100 legionnaires or members of their families were treated at the Red Cross hospital today. There was one case of delirium tremens, hospital authorities said.

Crowds of legionnaires always were present at Salvation Army headquarters, singing old war songs and eating doughnuts. There was a lineup of 200 or more waiting for coffee and doughnuts rations.

German Veteran There.

Auguste Haucke of Council Grove, Kansas, and his son, Frank, stood at salute today in front of the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The elder Haucke was a member of the German army that captured Paris in 1871. Frank Haucke served fifteen months with the A. E. F.

"I helped France become a republic" said the elder Haucke, "and my son helped Germany become a republic."

Haucke has been a citizen of the United States for many years.

How Lincoln Boy Scout Taught Flag Etiquette at Denver

A Lincoln Boy Scout won notice in Denver recently during Col. Lindbergh's visit by putting several merchants right on the proper hanging of a flag. The boy is Bent V. Peterson of troop 43.

Following are excerpts of a story recounting his work that appeared in a Denver paper:

"It took a Boy Scout from one of Lindy's "home towns—Lincoln —to put right several Denver merchants whose ideas as to how to display the national colors were a little erroneous.

"The scout, Bent V. Peterson, who is in Denver visiting his brother, William Peterson, at 100 Broadway, was walking through the downtown district Wednesday and naturally he noticed the colorful array of flags and bunting. His eye caught some other things, too, among them the fact that many merchants had hung their flags contrary to flag etiquet.

Knowing that Colonel Lindbergh, an army man, would be acquainted with the flag regulations and fearing the visiting aviator would dislike the error, even though he realized it was unitentional, Scout Peterson set about to set things to rights.

"He went into one of the big department stores, asked for the person in charge of decorating the store, and walked up to him.

"'Howdy' greeted the Boy Scout.

"'Hello,' answered the store official.

"'Do you wish Lindy to recognize your welcome?' asked the scout.

"'Why, certainly.'

"'Then I'd like to inform you your flags are hung wrong and I'll tell you how to hang them right if you want me to,' went on Scout Peterson.

"He succeeded in accomplished his purpose there without offense and so the scout repeated the performance at every store and shop he noticed with flags hung not just right.

"And that's how Scout Bent V. Peterson of troop No. 43, Lincoln, did his good deed, Wednesday.

ANTELOPE COUNTY OFFICER RESIGNS

NELIGH, Neb., Sept. 17—D. C. McCartney, supervisor from the district composed of Clearwater, Ord, Frem ntown and Blaine townships, filed his resignation as a member of the board this week. Mr. McCartney was serving his third term on the board, having been elected last year. He resigned on account of ill health.

The board elected David McGee of near Clearwater to the place. He will hold office until the next general election in 1928. He is the son of one of the pioneers of Antelope county who in his day served several terms on the board to which the son now becomes a member.

NORTH BENDERS ARE INDIGNANT

Threaten to Boycott Fremont Account of Highway Dispute.

(Special to The Star.)

FREMONT, Neb., Sept. 17—Claiming that State Engineer Roy Cochran is in a dilemma as how to decide the Ames, North Bend Lincoln highway controversy, because of the attitude of the Dodge county board in persistently urging a decision in favor of the north route, a delegation or North Bend citizens headed by Attorney W. J. Courtright, R. A. Robinson and Fred Eason, scored the board members at a hastily called meeting of the Fremont chamber of commerce.

Four members of the board, A. W. Murphy, Swan Anderson, Carl Hollander and Oscar Widman, were accused of playing a "dog in the manger" game and of tieing up the business by refusing to give Cochran a free hand to decide the route.

Threats were made of a boycott upon Fremont and of refusal of North Bend to permit the north route highway to pass through North Bend. Members of the chamber of commerce emphasized their attitude of taking no part in the controversy except to urge a prompt decision.

More evidence of the call of the North Benders at the state engineer's office came to the supervisors today in a letter from Cochran enquiring if the board intends to take action to settle the controversy and if so when.

NEBRASKA LEADS OUTLAWING RUST

This State Foremost in West in Eradication of Wheat Smut.

Dr. Woods of Washington Lauds Preventative Measures Taken.

More has been done in Nebraska and Minnesota toward the eradication of wheat rust than in any of the other western wheat producing states, Dr. Albert F. Woods, head of the department of scientific research in Washington, told a representative of the Star Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Woods has been in Lincoln since Friday confering with W. W. Burr, acting director of the experiment station at the agriculture college, and acting Chancellor E. A. Burnett, of the University of Nebraska, on the wheat smut situation. While in Lincoln Dr. Woods is visiting at the home of Col. and Mrs. F. M. Woods, 2544 J street.

Regional co-operation between the department of agriculture and experiment stations is the object of Dr. Woods visit.

The real work necessary for the elimination of wheat rust, Dr. Woods said, is the elmination of the barberry bush on which the rust spores carry over from year to year.

Barberry Bush Destroyed.

In the eastern states and in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, wheat rust has been almost completely eliminated, Dr. Woods added, by the destroying of the barberry bush. A systematic campaign has been worked out successfully in these states, he said.

The campaign as has been carried out in Nebraska has been very successful, he continued, and a very marked increase in production has been the result. This sort of work, he added, should be continued for a number of years until the source of carry over is entirely eliminated.

The elimination of the rust constitutes a saving of a large portion of the wheat crop, according to Dr. Woods, and each year means many more million bushels of grain to the wheat producting states.

Nebraska's Danger Outside.

The source of infection in nearly two thirds of the state has been done away with, he said. Nebraska's greatest danger now lies without the borders of the state, he added, and it is now necessary to determine how far the spore can carry in the air. When this is done in Nebraska and the rest of the states, wheat rust will be practically eliminated.

Dr. Woods said that Nebraska's corn crop is far superior to that in any of the corn belt states. He has just completed a trip through Illinois, Ohio and Iowa and is very much impressed with agricultural conditions in this state.

Dr. Woods leaves Monday for Detroit where he will take part in a corn borer conference. He will return to Washington the twenty-fifth of the month.

LUTHERANS WILL BUILD HOSPITAL

FREMONT, Neb., Sept. 17—Articles of incorporation for the evangelical Lutheran hospital association, representing seventeen church congregations in eastern Nebraska, were filed today. A hospital is to be built on the Lutheran orphanage grounds on east Military avenue.

MAYWOOD FACULTY.

(Special to The Star.)

MAYWOOD, Neb., Sept. 17—The faculty of the Maywood schools, which opened on Sept. 5, consists of the following: Superintendent, Ed Evans; principal, Cecil Scofield; high school, Lela Greig, Martha Backer, Pauline Davidson; grades Lucile Meyers, primary; Mary Albro, third and fourth; Flossie Albro, fifth and sixth; Carrie Antley, seventh and eighth.

WOODMEN PLAN ENCAMPMENTS

Regional Meetings To Be Held Over State During 1928.

Will Hold Central Tournament in Honor of A. R. Talbot.

Modern Woodmen of America officials have approved a plan to hold a series of state or regional forester encampments and athletic tournaments in 1928, and Nebraska has been chosen to head the list, according to a report made to the Lancaster county Modern Woodmen promotion committee by State Deputy E. E. Kester of Lincoln. The monthly meeting of the promotion committee was held at the Lincoln hotel Friday night, at which time Mr. Kester told the committee about his conference with Woodmen officials during the recent encampment held at Sedalia, Mo., in connection with the Missouri state fair.

The associates of Head Consul A. R. Talbot, heartily endorsed the plan, which originated in this state, to hold an encampment and tournament in the head consul's home state in recognition of Mr. Talbot's silver anniversary as the society's chief executive. Encampments in other states are also contemplated, but Nebraska is to be given the center of the stage owing to the fact it is the home sttae of the head consul. The Lancaster committee unanimously decided to formulate a proposition and invitation to the Nebraska state committee in charge of encampments, urging the state committee to locate the 1928 celebration in Lincoln. The state committee contemplated holding such an encampment in this city in June of this year, but decided to wait until 1928 when the Talbot twenty-fifth anniversary idea will result in greatly augmenting the success of such an affair.

If the Lancaster committee can secure the same co-operation promised for this year, there is little doubt about the state committee accepting the local invitation, for both national and state officials feel Lincoln is the place for this encampment. It now appears that the 1928 tournament will be on a much larger scale than originally contemplated with a considerable attendance of teams and officers from other surrounding states, all of whom desire to come to Nebraska to felicitate Mr. Talbot upon the rounding out of his twenty-fifth milestone of service in the Modern Woodmen society. There will like be a meeting of th Modern Wo men state committee within next two weeks, at which time t Lincoln proposal will be submitt

Fastest Four in America Proves Its Claim to Title

Dodge Averages 67.35 miles per hour in Beating All Other Fours in Atlantic City A. A. A. Race

The Atlantic City (N.J.) Speedway Association, without Dodge Brothers instigation or knowledge, bought a Dodge Brothers Four and entered it in a Labor Day race for Four under stock cars. Four cars of other makes also competed. All were strictly stock cars as required by the rules of the association.

The race was for 25 miles—to determine which was "The Fastest Four in America."

The Dodge won.

Its average speed for the entire race, from a standing start, was 67.35 miles per hour (officially timed by A. A. A.).

Generous confirmation, to say the least, of the modest claim of "Mile-a-minute Performance!"

Even more remarkable than the speed, however, is the fact that the car had been driven only 10 days and yet was able to withstand this difficult test without once stopping.

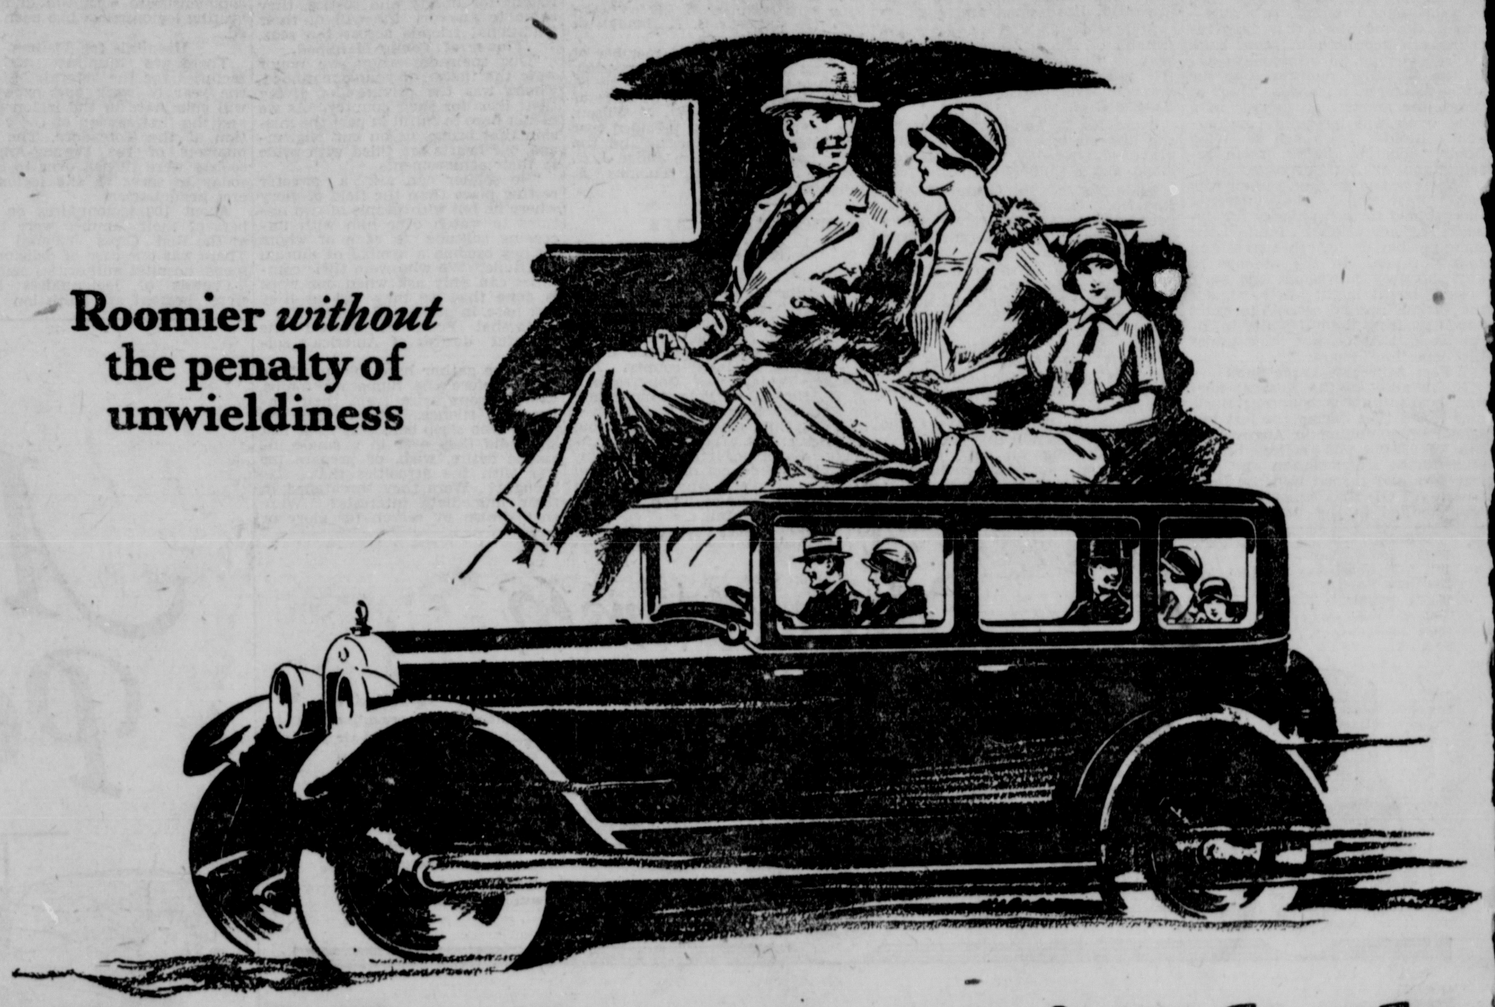

Thus the race not only offers conclusive proof of the Dodge's superiority in speed, but stands also as a glowing tribute to the rugged materials and excellent workmanship that go to make it—

Beargmen Get First Feel of Stiff Practice

Huskers Paw Dirt In First Workout

Bearg Sends Varsity Men Into Action In Scrimmage; Ten Regulars of '26 On Tentative First Team.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

Cornhusker footballers defied the blistering heat wave Saturday afternoon and buckled into their first scrimmage test of the season. Coach Bearg had the equivalent of five or more teams on the practice field and practically every red-jerseyed husky had his chance to show off during the gruelling workout.

The first-string "red" eleven which Bearg pitted against the second-string "whites" listed a letterman and 1926 regular in every station with the one exception of Richards, who was filling the tackle position vacated when Lonnie Stiner, last year's captain, passed out of the Nebraska picture via the graduation route.

"Reds" Clashed With "Whites"

Swinging into action when scrimmage was inaugurated, the "reds" were lined up as follows: Lawson and Lee, ends; Randels and Richards, tackles, McMullen and Holm, guards; James, center; Bronson, quarterback; Presnell and Oehlrich, halfbacks; Howell, fullback. The opposing "white" team lineup listed Sprague and Toms, ends; Ray and Lucas, tackles; Whitmore and Hurd, guards; Grow, center; Lindell, quarterback; Wostoupal and Wyatt, halfbacks; Toman, fullback.

That Fumbling Bugbear.

The fumbling bugbear and loose passing combined to make the "red" offensive ragged, but Bearg was bearing down in demanding improvement and the first-stringers eventually were coming through with a pile-driving attack which brought results in the form of touchdowns.

The scrimmage rehearsal included only three offensive plays, which the head coach has determined the Huskers must master before additions are made to the attacking repertoire.

Howell and Presnell.

The plunging of Blue Howell and Glenn Presnell featured the "red" attack, but later in the practice the first-stringers shifted to aerial tactics, Howell hurling a long pass to Oehlrich, who snagged the ball and sped across the "white" goal. Bud McBride and Voris later performed in the "red" backfield, plunging ahead for frequent substantial gains.

Although the "whites" were not given the ball, thus to have an opportunity to display attacking power, the "reds" did not enjoy a monopoly of the scoring, as Lewandowski, "white" end, once grabbed a "red" pass and wormed his way through to a clear field.

Coach Well Pleased.

"It was a satisfactory workout in every way," Coach Bearg said after the squad had made the return trek to the cooling showers. "Fumbling and ragged play of all sorts was to be expected the first scrimmage drill, but the offense showed power and will be going somewhere with consistent results when the attack is smoothed and polished from more practice. We skipped through the first day of stiff work without sustaining a serious injury.

"Nobody has his place cinched and every man on the squad is to have his chance, which means that it will be up to each individual whether or not he makes the team."

Saving Brown's Knee.

Captain "Jug" Brown was on the sidelines during the scrimmage. The Husker leader has a doubtful knee—a hangover from the 1926 campaign—and Bearg will continue to keep the captain out of the lineup until after "Jug" has finished a special course designed to build up the weak knee.

Prior to the scrimmaging, Bearg invoked a prolonged drill of punting and going down under kicks. Sloan, Howell and Bronson accounted for most of the toework, with Sloan getting off the longest and most consistent kicks.

Weight Statistics.

Due to the oppressive heat, practically every Husker on the squad rid himself of five pounds of avordupois. A dozen or more of the

Extend Icy Mitt To State Normals

Schools of State Conference Refuse Schedule Basketball Games With Teachers College Teams.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

The Nebraska state college conference apparently has reached the parting of the ways. Rumor of a reported break between the denominational institutions and the state normals has been floating about the conference for a year or more, but the breach did not open until Saturday afternoon, when leading church schools of the conference slapped a basketball boycott on the state teachers colleges.

Nebraska Wesleyan, Doane college, Hastings college, Midland college and Cotner college were the prime movers in giving the normal quartet the "go-by." Cotner and Doane crossed the four Normals off their slate altogether, while Wesleyan, Hastings and Midland scheduled one and two teams respectively.

Normals Empty Handed.

As a result, three of the four normal schools departed from the cage schedule meeting almost empty-handed. Peru Normal, king pin in the conference cage competition until Doane usurped the throne last winter, landed only two games outside the normal fold, none with a leading combination. Chadron Normal obtained definite assurances from three church schools and Wayne, a little more fortunate, retained relations with four of the institutions. Kearney, the fourth normal school, was not represented at the meeting.

Too Hot for Oratory.

The break at the schedule meeting was not featured by any display of forensic fireworks, the denominational coaches making clear that they had no bone to pick with the athletic mentors but rather with the normal schools themselves. They had no dates on their schedules open to normal school competition and let it go at that.

An individual, who is as close to denominational school athletics as the shirt is to his back, informed the writer that the split has been brewing for some time and that, should the normal schools care to pursue the matter, a formal break into two separate conferences will be in order at the December meeting of the conference faculty delegates.

What It's All About.

The quarrel with the normals, according to this informant, has been brought about by many situations, most important of which are alleged laxity in scholastic rating toward athletes and an alleged generous use of state funds for the promotion of athletics. The latter has been particularly chafing to the denominational schools, Chadron and Peru having monopolized the football crowns and basketball for a string of seasons, except for the Doane triumph of last winter in the cage realm.

Coaches Organize.

After the smoke of schedule-making had cleared away, the college coaches organized into a body which will be known as the Nebraska State Conference Coaches association. C. L. "Ren" Dow of Nebraska Wesleyan was elected president; Laddie Hubka of York college was chosen vice-president; and Ward Haylett of Doane college was selected secretary-treasurer.

The coaches voted to hold the first annual Nebraska college cross country run at Nebraska Wesleyan, Friday, Nov. 4. The distance will be three and one-half miles, schools entering as many harriers as desired but only three of the runners to place in the competition for the team trophy.

BOOMING SEASON AT LINCOLN HIGH

Grid Prospects Point To Winning Eleven In Capital City.

Waite and Grand Island Games High Spots of Home Campaign.

Lincoln high school's prospects for another banner year on the gridiron seem to be excellent this year. However, there are always those things that sometime bob up that prove nightmares to the coach, but Browne confessed Saturday that he thought by the end of the season he would have a pretty goo team. Due to the terrific heat, he has not been able to put his men to the usual test and what power they possess will not be determined until the weather man chooses to turn off his blow torch, and contributes the kind of weather that characterizes the normal autumn season

A line averaging 160 pounds can be sent on the field should Browne want to use that combination and the same is true of the backfield.

The crew that looks the best so far finds Suter and Kiesselbach at ends; Koster and Woodside, tackles; Capt. Austin and Schmitt, guards; Martin, center; Boulter, quarter; Packer and Armstrong, ahlves; and Tindall, full.

Perry, a letter man of last season, can easily fill in at any of the stations in the ball lugging combination and will probably see quite a little service.

The next job will be that of finding dependable reserves to fill these men's shoes should the unfortunate happen. Stone will be called upon in the backfield as will Ed Abbott.

Bidding for Line Stations.

On the line, Herman Witt and Paul Batty, members of last year's reserves, will be good men for the tackle and guard positions, and will give the boys now holding down these posts a stiff run for the money when it comes to determining the starting lineups.

The punting situation seems to be well taken care of. Berne Packer, the red-headed ace and also ice man deluxe, will be in there putting out his usual long spirals. In practice last week he was getting off boots that averaged well over 50 yards and they were spirals every time

Packer Triple-Threater.

Also Packer belongs to that club of which every coach yearns for a member, namely, the triple-threaters. He will probably by on the flipping end of most of the Red and Black's aerial attacks. However, Boulter is no slouch when it comes to tossing the pikskin.

The next detail in the kicking department to be taken care of is the finding of a try-for-point artist. Kitchen's trusty place-kicking was good for many a point last season, but to date no one has come to life to take his place. So far Boulter has been doing it 'Jug' Brown style, via the drop-kick route.

Nothing Soft On Schedule.

Getting the Gelt.
Grizzly Jim Says It.
J. Bull Next Victim.
Rasslers Only Pikers.

Developments of the past week in the situation preliminary to the gigantic plucking of sucker money, dated for next Thursday night in a Windy City arena, scarcely are calculated to promote confidence in the upstanding honesty of Mr. Rickard's extravaganza. With Frank O. Klein, Chicago investigator, boldly proclaiming in the public prints that the fight, alleged or otherwise, is "in the bag" for Dempsey and Davis Walsh writing cynically of the comedy staged at the fighters' camps in lieu of training, it is evident that the sole purpose of the actors in the farce is to get the gelt.

Jim Jeffries, grizzly bear of the fighting days of nearly 30 years ago, when ear-mangling was genuinely strenuous, but respectable because the money spoils were secondary to the battle itself, has given the tip-off to the Chicago farce. Grizzly Jim has been a camp visitor at Lincoln Fields and Fox lake during the past week and what he saw was most amazing.

"When I was a fighting man," Jeffries snorted, "it took me at least 30 days of hard work to get in shape for hard training. And when real training started, I had sparring partners who went into the ring with instructions to give me all they had. I insisted that they hit me to hurt, but I didn't try to hurt them. It was my job to do the real fighting later. That system of training put me in condition to take punishment. I'm telling nothing but the truth when I say that I did not feel the blows I took when the fight was on."

In the writer's opinion, Jim said a whole boatload. Neither Tunney nor Dempsey has trained hard or conscientiously. While one has been skipping away from camp on pink tea expeditions into the circles of Lake Forest's high society, the other has been chasing a golf ball around adjacent links. The heat wave alibi has been presented in explanation of their refusal to get down to genuine business in training, but one who falls for that excuse should be pitied for his gullibility.

If the dear boys dare not train now on account of the heat, what manner of fight can they wage if the torrid wave still is with us next Thursday night?

Still another straw shows which way the wind is blowing. There has been much talk of the "next big fight," with a London stadium as the proposed scene. The usually astute Mr. Rickard permitted himself to be interviewed on the London topic and suggested that he was very much interested.

A simpleton should know the answer; London will be "it" for the next act of the shakedown. Tunney's victory of last fall was achieved in such a way as to give Dempsey a loophole for his comeback, and there is every indication that the Chicago affair is to go over on similar lines, Dempsey being the probable winner. Standing at even tricks, the cards will be nicely stacked for an invasion of the tight little island and grab No. 3 at John Bull's dough bag.

Reams of copy have been ground out truthfully setting forth the impositions practiced by the heavyweight wrestlers, but these bone-crushing geeks are mere tyros in comparison with modern maulers of chins. It is barely possible that an occasional fist brawl may be on the level, but when the public falls so hard for a heavyweight hippodrome as to contribute three millions or more at the gate, the same public may expect that the ear-manglers will play the game one way only—which is to set up the pins for another three million grab.

CARDS LAND ON PHILS FOR WIN

St. Louis Hammer Pair Of Philly Hurlers For 18 Hits.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17— U. P.)—The St. Louis Cardinals hammered two Philly pitchers for 18 hits, while their own hurler, Reinhart, shut out the Philadelphians, 11 to 0. Pruett started for the Phils and lasted six and one-third innings. During that time he was touched for 15 hits and 8 runs. He was relieved by Willoughby. The Cards got to him for three hits and three runs.

Chick Hafey led the Cardinals' attack, with a triple, a double and a single in five times up. Frankie Frisch got a triple and two singles in four times at bat. The score.

AMES AGGIES IN WITH VET BACKS

Huskers' First Opponent Looms Up With Strong Grid Offense.

Workman's Big Problem Involves Drilling New Linemen.

BY T. F. CROCKER.

AMES, Ia., Sept. 17—A veteran backfield and a line with three, possibly four, veterans is the nucleus for this year's Iowa State college football eleven, which has been holding its first practice sessions the past three days under the torrid rays of a tropical sun.

For ten consecutive days, the thermometer at the United States government weather bureau station here registered above 90 and Coacn Noel Workman cut short his double sessions of drill. Suits were handed out Thursday morning and a brief signal and defensive drill completed the afternoon session. Coaches Frank Honaker and Harry Schmidt assisted Workman, Honaker taking the backs and ends and Schmidt the linemen in blocking practice.

Fifty Out First Day.

Fifty men were in uniform and late arrivals Friday and Saturday swelled the number of candidates for the team to 70. Development of practically a new line is the principal task facing Workman and with the opening game against Nebraska only two weeks away, the Cyclone mentor was not optimistic about plugging the holes before that time, particularly if the unseasonable weather continues much longer.

Regular linemen from last year who reported included Ayres, center; Holloway Smith, negro tackle, and Galbraith, a letter man at tackle and guard in 1924 and 1925. Kingery, tackle the last two years, was not out, although friends of the former lineman appeared certain he will arrive in a day or two.

Vacancies at Both Wings.

To take care of the wing positions, both of which were left vacant by the graduation of Captain Roland Coe and E. J. Andreson, Workman has Harry Johnson, former all-state end from Dubuque high school; Robert Burton and Don Collentine of Waterloor, Ia. and Byron Cory, Ames. If Kingery reports, he will be tried at end, where he showed marked ability last fall when moved out from his regular position at tackle.

Weiss Valley Midget.

Captain Walter Weiss, the smallest football player in the Missouri Valley conference last year, will run the team from his quarterback position. Robert Lamson, Fairfield, Ia., fullback; Allan Holman, Fairfield, John Miller, Waterloo; Harry Lindbloom, Des Moines, and Vernon Hall, Ames, all veteran halfbacks, are Workman's threat for an attack.

Other backs from last year's reserve or freshman squads include Carl Rudi, Glidden, Ia.; John Kulp, Davenport, Ia.; Sanford Hill, Story City, Ia.; Don Wilson, Waterloo, Ia.; Walter Zellers, Waterloo; and Robert Helming, Waukon, Ia.

New King On Throne In Realm of Racquet Sport

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—The national tennis championship went the way of the Davis cup today.

Rene Lacoste, the stolid Frenchman, successfully defended his title against the challenge of William T. Tilden in the finals this afternoon.

Lacoste triumphed, 11-9, 6-3, 11-9, and for the first time in 46 years a foreigner has captured the American championsnip two years in succession.

Valiantly fighting to regain the crown he held from 1920 through 1925, Tilden presented a tragic figure as he walked from the courts shorn of all tennis laurels.

At End of Great Career.

Fifteen thousand spectators seemed to sense the feeling that Tilden's career was at an end. They gave him a tribute he never knew in his greatest victory.

Tilden's task today was beyond the power of a 34-year-old veteran who has passed the peak of his game. He struggled gamely through three punishing sets, but the odds were against him too heavily.

He was opposed to a tennis automaton who functioned with machine-like precision. No matter what shot Tilden employed, the ball always seemed to come back across the net as propelled by some inhuman force.

Lacoste Invincible.

Lacoste stood adamant against the shafts of lightning that flashed off Tilden's racquet. He was unruffled by soft shots just over the net. There was nothing in Tilden's racquet that Lacoste could not handle in his mechanical way.

The courage, stamina and keen eye of the sad-visaged French youth carried him to one of his greatest victories. Not since 1919, when "Little Bill Johnston" defeated Tilden for the national title, has "Big Bill" lost a match in three sets.

Overwhelming Defeat.

Fighting back against all the disadvantages of age and mental handicaps, Tilden beat every player of note in the world this season but Lacoste. Each time he slipped a little until today he suffered perhaps his most overwhelming defeat since he became a reigning power in the tennis world.

Tilden made a fight of it all the way, but it was a desperate, losing fight by a veteran on his last legs In the fourteenth game of the first set he was within a point of victory, only to falter and allow Lacoste to pull the set out of the fire.

Bill Wild In Crisis.

Behind 7-6 in the first set and 40-love in the fourth game, Lacoste refused to give up and kept banging the ball back. Four errors by Tilden and a placement by Lacoste gave the FFrench ace the game and allowed him to go on and win the first set.

Tilden gained a lead of 31 in the second set, but collapsed in the fifth game and Lacoste clashed through the next five games with

Windy City Fight Crazy As Bout Day Approaches

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—(I N. S.)—Chicago, the windiest and wooliest city in the world, began to take on the aspect of a real fight camp today, as the vanguard of the thousands who will watch the Tunney-Dempsey heavyweight championship match, five days hence, began pouring into town through every known artery of concrete and steel rail.

Meanwhile, rumor and counter-rumor were bandied about at the camps of the champion and challenger, one of these dealing with the allegation that an impromptu bout between Chuck Wiggins, sparring partner of Tunney, and Jack Sharkey, late adversary of Dempsey, was narrowly averted at Lake Villa.

Fight Spirit In Air.

No doubt about it, the atmosphere is beginning to become belligerent when a couple of modern pugilists threaten to fight for nothing and possibly over nothing.

Another report had it that attaches at Tunney's camp had placed $5,000 on their man against $3,500, offered by a native who had seen Dempsey work two nights ago.

A third came in the form of a sub-rosa statement from Dempsey declaring that there would be no split between himself and Leo P. Flynn before the fight next Thursday night.

All Chicago Excited.

Yes, Chicago was beginning to sit up on its civic hindlegs with the greatest money-making fight in history only five days away. Last reports on the advance sale placed the intake at well over $2,000,000, which already establishes a new financial record, but the ticket sale wasn't so keen today that Tex didn't have time enough to go out for a round of golf.

The stadium, so large that today a man needed four minutes to walk rapidly from the north side entrance to the ringside, has seats to the number of 160,000, but it appeared at this writing that Rickard might have considerable trouble in disposing of all of his seats.

Crowd to Break Record.

However, it was expected that last year's attendance record of some 126,000 would be bettered without a struggle.

Challenger and champion were as ready as they will be today, particularly for a fight so brief as 10 rounds or less. It was at this distance that Tunney won the title from Dempsey in Philadelphia last year; so it wasn't surprising that the champion ruled a steady favorite at odds of 7 to 5. The price quoted on the bet made at Tunney's camp gave the Dempsey man slightly the better of the current figures.

That Gene's aides were willing to shade this price clearly indicated the frame of mind of those at Lake Villa. Here a quickening tension was in the air and the Sharkey-Wiggins incident was just a normal reflection of this feeling.

It came about when the great or-

Giants Keep Pace With Pirates By Twin Win at Cincy.

Terry's Single Breaks Up Second Game, 8 to 7.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17—Two victories over the Cincinnati Reds here today, 5 to 1 and 8 to 7, kept the Giants within 4½ games of the Pirates in the National league pennant race.

Travis Jackson made only one hit in each game, a double with the bases filled in the seventh inning to score his team's second and third runs in the first game, and a triple with the bags loaded in the sixth of the second game to put the Giants within a run of the Reds. Terry then broke up the game with a single that scored two runs in the eighth. Purdy of the Reds tripled in the second game. The scores:

HASTINGS HIGH MINUS REGULARS

HASTINGS, Neb., Sept. 17—With every regular from the Hastings high school 1926 eleven lost by graduation, the 50 or more candidates who reported to Coach Thomas for the opening practice of the coming campaign faced spirited competition for the right to fill the vacancies.

Although seven lettermen reported for duty, the most that any of them could claim for their past season's record was that they had alternated at one of the backfield positions. Edmond Johnson played half part of the 1926 season and Lyle Tower held down the quarter job in the last three games. The other lettermen are Schwabauer, center; Crabtree, guard; Hejkal, guard; Hoeppner, half, and Kresbach, ahif.

Among the new material that shows exceptional promise are Fricke, Richmond, Shields and Alspaugh, tackles; Sliger and Brown, ends, and Kealy, halfback.

Heavier Than Last Year.

The Tiger eleven will be heavier than it has been for the past two years. Indications are that the first string will average near the 150-lb. mark when the season opens.

A schedule of nine games has been slated and will keep the locals on the jump for nine straight weeks. There are no "breathers" in the lineup as every team on the schedule has already broken into print with an optimistic declaration as to the prospects for the season. The schedule:

Sept. 30—Minden at Minden.
Oct. 7—Nelson at Hastings.
Oct. 14—Aurora at Aurora.
Oct. 21—Superior at Superior.
Oct. 28—Kearney at Hastings.
Nov. 4—Crete at Crete.
Nov. 11—York at Hastings.
Nov. 18—Fairbury at Fairbury.
Nov. 23—Beatrice at Beatrice.

the loss of only six points to win the set, 6 to 3.

Last Desperate Stand.

Summoning all his remaining strength for a desperate stand in the third set, Tilden obtained a 4-1 lead, only to allow the lead to trickle from his fingers by his own unsteadiness. Leading 5-3, he was within set point of victory in the ninth game, but double faulted.

The battle went on to the twentieth game before Lacoste won, but it was only a matter of time.

The final futile effort of the slipping veteran came in the fourteenth game of the last set when he twice repelled Lacoste at match point.

Triumphant Invasion.

Lacoste's victory marked the end of a triumphant French invasion of the United States.

In a mixed doubles exhibition after the championship final, Jean Borotra of France and Kea Bouman of Holland defeated Francis Hunter and Helen Wills.

CHICAGO FANS ALL HEATED UP

ator opined that Wiggins was playing to the grandstand in an alleged attempt to show Tunney up before the assembled multitude. This message of good cheer was duly relayed to Wiggins as he stood dripping beneath his shower. Hastily donning a bathrobe he was said to have started boldly forth in search of Sharkey, but cooler heads prevailed, as they say at the club.

Tunney Disappointed.

When Tunney was apprised of the incident he was quoted as having said:

"Why didn't you let him go?"

Which merely confirmed the general notion that those tense moments known only to the eve of a big fight are in the offing.

Hotel lobbies were thronged with incoming guests; ticket scalpers had opened their human spiderwebs on some of the main thoroughfares and the only theme of social discourse was that of speculation as to the merits and condition of the principals. That Dempsey was the sentimental favorite was proved last night when thousands bootlegged their way into Lincoln field to watch him box three rounds and cheered him afterward all the way to his dressing room.

Gene Better This Time.

Professional sentiment, however, was that Tunney is even better now than he was last year. Gene, himself, was so satisfied with his condition this afternoon that he called off all boxing because of the heat, his routine having included six miles on the road this morning and a seance of shadow boxing.

Dempsey, generally thought to be a better man than the Dempsey of Philadelphia and Saratoga, also eased off in his training.

Hard Work Soon Over.

By Monday, when the referee for the fight will be chosen, both men will have finished all the hard work they intend to do and will put in the remaining days before Thursday in doing just enough exercise to keep themselves on the line

And by Monday, Rickard expected that the last-minute rush of ticket seekers would be on. The sale has bogged down during recent days because the impression had become general that all the good seats were gone, which probably was and is true.

lon champ and versatile University of Nebraska athlete, will play with the Gooch Millers as will also Barnell, Lincoln sandlot recruit who finished the Western league season with Lincoln.

Elmer Holm and Joe Reeves, a pair of Cornhusker football men, are members of the Franklins club, Holm playing at third base and Reeves in the outfield.

Black With Cleaners.

The Varsity Cleaners lists Charley Black, head Nebraska U. basketball coach; Ekstrom and Volz, former Cornhusker basketball and baseball players.

The Fisk Red Tops includes a number of former Cotner college stars.

Success of Fred Ekstrom in stopping Bennet two weeks ago may cause the Cleaners to start him on the mound today. Ekstrom held the Bennet sluggers to scattered hits. He probably will be opposed by Barney, Red Top ace, who beat the Crete Mills.

The Millers will pitch Moore or Gilliland, a pair of outstanding pitchers in local amateur circles. Recroft, Atkins or Mankamyer will draw the assignment for the Franklins.

no setups and every game is going to be worth the money. After ringing up the curtain at Columbus, the boys will have the job of proving to the skeptics in Toledo that the west plays football by duplicating their feat of last year—the defeat of Waite high school

After this supreme test at the Nebraska stadium, the Brownemen will after a year's absence renew relations with the Blue boys of York high. York has yet to place a Lincoln scalp on its victory belt, but this year may prove an exception especially since the contest comes after the Waite game and, should history repeat itself this is what may happen in view of the fact that the Red and Black boys went down to defeat after the Waite game last year.

Crete Team to Lincoln.

Then the fans will see the team in action on its own grounds when Pop Klein will bring his Crete youngsters to the capital city.

The following week, Lincoln will be the guests of a traditional foe, Beatrice, and will attempt to hang another orange pate on the L. H. S. victory belt.

On Nov. 5, the Maroon of Omaha Tech will provide the opposition for the home boys. This will take place on the metropolitan gridiron.

Norfolk and Grand Island.

Then the Red and Black will close the schedule with two home games, the first with Norfolk and the other with Grand Island. The latter will be the bunch the Lincolnites will be pointing for. The boys from the third city marred what would have been an unstained season last year and Grand Island meat will taste good in the Lincoln den.

Norfolk was a tough customer last year and probably will be in there again this season?

Turkey Day Is Open.

As yet no game has been scheduled for Thanksgiving day. Should an attractive bid present itself, Browne might accept, but it would have to be exceedingly so to even tempt the Lincoln instructor.

Saturday morning proved no exception in the practice program and Browne put his charges through a stiff drill on fundamentals, followed by a session at running signals.

Coach Overman will have charge of the reserves this season. He says that Lincoln will be out for the Greater Lincoln league trophy and intends to make a serious bid for this championship. The schedule has not been drafted yet, but will be forthcoming in another week. The reserves probably will play the Crete and Beatrice reserves, and maybe the Tech seconds, but nothing definite has been decided about these games.

The Squad Personnel.

Men comprising the first or red jerseyed squad are: John Stone, Harry Wuelser, Bruce Thorpe, Bernard Masterson, Harold Schmitt, Herman Witt, Frank Jackson, Oliver Soderland, Bob Joy, Dutch Koster, Mark Martin, Berne Packer, Art Perry, Duane Boulter, Russell Trott, Paul Batty, Ed Abbott, Bob Suter, Claude Austin, Theo. Mrs. Hertz Wins Richest Classic

BELMONT PARK RACE TRACK, New, York, Sept. 17—(U.P.)—Anita Peabody and Reigh Count, a colt and a filly, both owned by Mrs. J. D. Hertz, swept into juvenile turf fame today when they finished a nose apart, first and second, in the rich Belmont futurity.

Half a length back of Reigh Count was H. P. Whitney's Victorian, first to finish of the four great Whitney two-year-olds that had been installed favorite at 13 to 10.

The victory netted Mrs. Hertz $102,390, of which was first money and $10,600 for place. Victorian received $5,800 for third money and Petee Wrack $1000 for fourth, making the total value of the stake $109,190. It was the richest prize ever offered in the history of the turf.

Nebraska HORSES and HORSEMEN by "Columbus"

Tennyson's "Brook" goes on forever and it would seem that some Nebraska-bred horses keep on racing long after their supposed value as money winners has passed. We were just reading of Captain Dale, 2:12¼, by Archdale 37304, which is being tried again this year by Chris. Christianson of Minden, better known as the "Big" Dane or "Big" Swede, either way going with Chris. Captain Dale started racing in 1916 as a two-year-old and readers of The Star may recall that splendid field of two-year-old trotters turning around for the word at the Nebraska state fair in the year mentioned—a field that was referred to in an earlier issue of The Star. Captain Dale has been retired from racing upon numerous occasions, only to be brought out again by some adventurous spirit with a belief that in some manner the old gelding might be patched up and made useful.

Nebraska daily papers had much to say concerning the records obtained at Aurora the last week of August, when some brilliant performances were staged by Betty Ann Maxey, Donna Cupid and Subito McKlyo. Among the things said of those Nebraska-bred fillies, Betty Ann Maxey and Subito McKlyo, was the statement that Betty Ann Maxey now holds the world's record for a three-year-old trotting filly over a half-mile track. The mile in 2:09¼ by Betty Ann Maxey at Aurora, Neb., only equaled the race record for age, sex and gait over a half-mile track, which was really a brilliance performance.

By and large and in all lines of sport, there is too much loose talk indulged in regarding records and, in the end, "the whole works" are "gummed up." Following are the official records for three-year-old trotters over a half-mile track:

Fastest colt—Peter Maltby, by Peter Volo, (1926), 2:08¾.

Fastest filly—Minia Dillon, by Dillon Axworthy, (1924), 2:08.

Fastest gelding, Doane, by The Extract, (1927), 2:07¾.

Fastest two-heat race by three-year-old trotters—Cub Ortolan, by Ortolan Axworthy, (1926), 2:09¼, 2:08¼.

Fastest three-heat race by three year-old trotters—Tippie Volo, by Peter Volo,(1926), 2:11¼, 2:13¼, 2:11¼.

Fastest three-heat race by three-year-old trotters, divided heats—Cinema, by Belwin, winning first and third heats; Peter Hayes, by Chestnut Peter, winning second heat, (1926), 2:09¼, 2:09¼, 2:09¾.

The mile in 2:09¼ at Aurora by Betty Ann Maxey did equal the world's record for fillies of that age racing over a half-mile track, which length of track is referred in all records given above. In 1924, Clara Dillon, by Dillon Axworthy, established a new record for three-year-old trotting fillies racing over a half-mile track by winning a heat in 2:09¼. In 1926, Cinema, by Belwin, equalled that record in a race, and in 1927 Betty Ann Maxey also equaled it. That should be glory enough for Nebraska.

It was also stated that Donna Cupid, when she won a heat at Aurora in 2:07¼, equaled the state record for pacers racing over a half-mile track. That was not true, as the state record for length of track named is 2:04½, and stands to the credit of Ben Earl, which won the free-for-all pace at Benson, a suburb of Omaha, Aug. 21, 1917. Ben Earl won all three heats of that event and the time was 2:06¾, 2:04½ and 2:08¼.

The mile at Aurora by Donna Cupid equalled the track record at Lincoln as Helen Chimes, Maud C., Prince Pachuta, Red Herr and Atwood each paced miles over the state fair track in 2:07¼. However, Donna Cupid is the youngest pacer to negotiate a mile in time named over a Nebraska half-mile track, as that daughter of Peter O'Donna, 2:08, is only four years old. She is a stoutly bred mare, her sire being a speed producing son of Peter The Great, her dam, Betty Mobel, being by Mobel 2:10¼, also a sire of extreme speed, while her grandam, Cupid's Bow, was dam of Red Lancelot, p. 2:02½, and Cupid's Albingen, 2:03¼, the latter the fastest trotter ever racing at Lincoln. Breeding does count.

The mile of Subito McKlyo in 2:08¼ at Aurora possibly may be the race record for three-year-old pacing fillies over a half-mile track. As the performances of 1927 are not available at present it would be presumptuous to state off-hand that Subito McKlyo was champion of her age and sex in a race over a halfmile track, but the chances are that such is true. At any rate, Aurora put on some most remarkable performances during its fair of 1927.

Nebraska has added another 2:10 trotter to its long list of such performances in the bay gelding Trilee, by The Triumph, 2:08 1-4, which gained a race record of 2:07 1-4 at Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 29. Trilee bred at Davey, Neb., and owned by Father O'Connor of Havelock until sold earlier in the year to W. L. Hill, Oshkosh, Wis., was developed by Billy Stantz, dean of Lincoln trainers, and raced by Bob Steele and Roy Owen, both training at Lincoln. The dam of Trilee, 2:0 1-4 was Jenny Lee, p., 2:21 3-4 by Superintendent, 2:21, and the latter horse was raced by Billy Stantz many years ago for a Lincoln owner.

The amount received for a trotter in a public does not always represent the true value of the animal disposed of. That fact was demonstrated at the Chicago sale of 1926, held in early November when Nick Silk, 3, 2:11 1-4, sold for $1,800 and Edna McKlyo, 4, 2:16 1-4, brought only $450, both trotters being consigned by Midway Farm, Kearney, Neb.

So far this season, Nick Silk has raced indifferently and never showing the speed he did last season. As

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—Feverish interest in the activities of young men who specialize in performing plastic surgery with fists, is ebbing.

This statement, spoken as 160,000 Americans are about to establish a new record by paying around $3,000,000 to see two complexion transformers at work, may sound droll—and much else.

But the future will prove it to be true.

The crowning achievement of Tex Rickard's promotional life-time is this Dempsey-Tunney fight in Chicago. But even as it crowns Tex with glory and plenty of cash, it will serve as a crown of thorns upon the dome of the fight racket.

Fight Fans Groggy Now.

The public has been high priced into a groggy condition year after year. It has stood it for a long time — while it was still under the spell that was cast upon it. But this particular brawl is certain to serve as a dash of icy water in its effect of awakening humans from a normal stupor.

Tunney stands to make about $1,100,000 out of this shindig — perhaps more. Dempsey will get about $425,000. Rickard will get around $700,000. And the vast portion of the public will get nothing but a $40 seat labeled "ringside" which is actually located about a night's aeroplane journey from the ring itself.

Revolt Looms Ahead.

When a promoter sells around 40,000 seats for $40 each, calls them "ringside," and when the actual first row ringside seats total only 114 seats — well, there's certain to be a revolt.

Bit by bit, here, there and everywhere, the almost fanatical interest in fight proceedings is skidding. Once upon a time the stellar battles in every division, from flyweight to heavyweight, attracted huge crowds.

Only a few years ago a flyweight championship affair drew a crowd of 65,000 and a gate of nearly $200,000. An open air tilt for the lightweight crown hauled close to $500,000 into the promotional coffers. A middleweight battle provoked a house around $250,000 and the featherweight title holders lured $200,00 to $300,000 worth of customers into the arenas.

"Blah, Blah" the Answer.

How now?

And the answer is "Blah."

Within the last two or three seasons, the biggest house for flyweights has not gone much beyond $25,000. The most recent middleweight championship bout was indoors and drew little more than $75,000. There has been talk of an outdoor battle for middleweight honors.

But none has happened, because the promoters realize that interest in this class of pugs is almost null and void — and an outdoor show would be a loss.

A promoter could toss all the present active lightweights into the same ring on the same night—and not influence more than $75,000 to $100,000 into the box office.

Lean Year For Fighters.

The actual truth is that fighters in every class from flyweights up to light heavies, haven't made enough money this year — nor for several seasons — to make it necessary for them to file income tax returns.

For a while there was a flurry in light heavy circles—in indoor arenas. The Delaneys, Berlenbachs, Striblings, Loughrans, McTigues and the others drew good indoor houses—good houses—and that's all. But they aren't doing it anymore.

"All the real interest in fight proceedings now is centered in the heavies," was the conclusion months ago.

And that was true.

Gotham Loses Interest.

New York was all excited about them—for a while. Enthusiasm was rampant during Rickard's heavyweight elimination tournament. It reached its peak with the Dempsey-Sharkey fight. And immediately afterward—

Well, the folks who earlier had sworn off the smaller divisions, one by one, and could become "steamed up" only over the heavies, suddenly discovered that they had seen about all the fistic fireworks they cared to see this season at from $5 to $27.50 per view.

Tex Takes a Tumble.

None was quicker to recognize that indifference than Rickard. He knew that attempting to put on the Tunney-Dempsey show in New York was fraught with the hazard of failure; that Gotham and its near neighbors had been served with about all the fight food they cared for just now—and for a while into the future.

So Rickard made the shift to Chicago, where he will catch the fistic devotees of the Illinois metropolis, draw in a mob from the middlewest and also get the "fight regulars" in New York. And so, the new record is about to be made in the way of attendance and receipts for fight shows.

No More Golden Eggs.

But after that will come the deluge of apathy. The geese which have been laying the golden eggs for Rickard and his fist throwing astellites, have been overworked—and will revolt against the heavyweights, just as they revolted against turning out en masse at big prices when the smaller men displayed their wares.

The day of the million dollar gate is over on September 22—and when a couple of the knckle-tossing gentry can make $1,000,000 or so in one or two fights ends with Tunney and Dempsey—and this particular fight.

WOMEN GOLFERS HAVE "BUG" NOW

BY AL DEMAREE.

One has only to note the wide interest and large number of entrants in the woman's national championship at Cherry Valley, L. I., to realize the progress women's golf has made in this country in the last twenty years.

Twenty years ago the number of entrants for the championship did not number as many as the qualifiers do today.

Last year at Philadelphia on a rain-soaked course, twelve of the twenty-two women who qualified scored under 90, and this on a tough 6,100-yard course.

Looking back at the lady golfers of 20 years ago, with their tight corsets, funny hats and long trailing skirts, the miracle was that they could hit the ball at all. much less break a 100 on a good course.

HERE AND THERE IN BASEBALL

Outfielder Mizeur of the Petio club was an outstanding performer in offensive play in the Three-Eye league in 1927. He led in number of games played, runs scored, hits made and was tied for number of triples and home runs.

J. Walker was the best runner in the Three-Eye league this season. At least he had the greatest number of stolen bases, 31. He performed for the Danville champions.

The Indianapolis club has grabbed a live young infielder in opinion of Three-Eye league experts when it bought Shorpston Warstler of the Quincy club. He finished the season with a batting average of .351. He hit 33 doubles and stole 30 bases.

Red Russell will lead the American association in batting this year, barring a most unexpected slump in the closing games. The figures of the past week showed him to have .392, and his closest rival, Grimes of Toledo, .379.

The veteran Bobby Veach, who was a great hitter for Detroit for so many years, still knows how to smack the ball. His average last week with the Toledo club was .362.

Fred Maguire, Toledo second baseman, who is to have another chance in the big league next year with the Chicago Cubs, will make good this time, according to his boosters. At present he is hitting .323. There never was any question about his fielding. It is of big league caliber. McGraw tried him about four years ago and let him go because of weak hitting.

Joe Rabbit of the Omaha club was a star performer in the Western league this year. He led the league in runs scored with 172. He led in number of hits with 251 and in total bases with 399, having 36 doubles, 26 triples and 20 homers. He was far in front in stolen bases, with 49.

Elton Langford, the leading hitter of the Western league, who has been bought by Cleveland and now is finishing the season with the big leaguers, apparently is making good. The other day he hit a home run and beat the Yankees.

John "Shano" Collins, former star with the White Sox and Boston in the American league but manager of Des Moines for the last two years, has been a strong performer in the Western league even if he is around the 40-year-old mark. He hit .331 for the season, playing in 102 games. He had 27 doubles, eight triples and 11 home runs.

One of the strong hitters in the Piedmont league this season was Long of the Durham club, who played in 131 games and had a batting average of .320. However, at the same time, he led the league in fanning out, having whiffed 60 times during the season.

There was a great contest for batting honors in the Cotton States league this season between First Baseman Gibson of the Hattiesburg club and Granade of the Monroe outfit. Gibson won with .358 and Granade was second with .350. Granade led the league in stolen bases with 55.

Where Will You Sit at the Big Fight?

Ringside or Bleachers?

It Depends on the Radio You Own

DON'T fool yourself. There's as much difference in radio receivers as there is in fight seats. Listening in by radio, you may "just get it", as if you sat in the back rows at Soldiers Field a mile or so away from the canvas—or you may be right under the corner posts in the full blaze of the flood light, hearing every grunt as the blows sink home, listening to the whisper of the fast shifting feet, wild with the thrill of being right next to the big fight—close as the referee—closer than a hundred thousand ticket holders—in ringside seats. It all depends on the radio you own. If you're lucky enough to go to the Dempsey-Tunney fight by Day-Fan Radio, you sit at the ringside, and duck your head when the water flies in the corner. You're there. You deserve to be. You had sense enough to buy a Day-Fan.

You don't need to worry about batteries, for Day-Fan eliminates them in two ways, both by A. C. tubes and by the entirely new method of a motor and generator. Your Day-Fan won't go blooey on you in the ninth round.

You don't have to worry about clarity, for Day-Fan is so clear that the great broadcasting stations themselves, use it to listen to their own programs.

You don't have to worry about volume, for Day-Fan will flood your whole house, if you ask it to, and nearly blow your windows out with the roar of the crowd.

Be wise in time. Get a Day-Fan today. The big fight will be broadcasted from forty-four stations, one of them near you. Graham McNamee is to be at the "mike" talking through the biggest hook-up in the history of the world.

There is a Day-Fan dealer near you. Write us for his name. Remember, you are going to this fight in the comfort of your home armchair, and the comfort of your pocketbook, by Day-Fan—because this great radio sits at the ringside.

You can buy a six tube Day-Fan Radio Receiver for as little as $65.00! Among the many Day-Fan models some are battery powered. Some are light-socket sets with A. C. tubes. Some eliminate all batteries by the new, wonderful, and exclusive method of a motor and generator. GENE CONFIDENT RETAINING TITLE

Tunney In Pink and Sure Of His Ability To Keep Crown.

Champion Bigger, Better Than When Ascended To Fist Throne.

BY CLARK B. KELSY.

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—If ever an athlete was trained to perfection for a 10-round boxing match, that athlete is Gene Tunney.

There may have been more rugged heavyweights than Tunney. Jack Dempsey in his prime pernaps was a stronger figure. But Tunney has the glow of youth, spring and vitality in his actions and the supreme confidence of a man who knows he is "right." Those are some attributes that Dempsey is struggling hard to affect, but which it is plain he lacks.

This writer is not ready to predict Tunney will win, but he is certain Tunney will have all the natural advantages of physical excellence. In addition, he has found in Tunney's palatial training quarters a feeling of absolute confidence which is missing at the Dempsey camp.

Gene Good at Socking.

Perhaps the outstanding thing in Tunney's favor is the fact that his youthful co-ordination and rhythm makes it possible for him to land his punches with more deadly accuracy than Dempsey. It is true he may not hit so hard—but he hits.

Tunney insists he could go into the ring tonight and he looks as though he needed no more work. There have been some exaggerated reports on the condition of his right eye, but it really isn't very bad and there is no reason to believe it will hamper him next Thursday night unless Dempsey can reopen the cut early in the fight.

Has Had Year's Training.

As for the criticism which has been going the rounds that Tunney has done too much loafing since he came to Chicago, Gene points out that he has been in training almost continuously for more than a year and that he had to box twice and four rounds every day when he was serving out his vaudeville contract.

"I think I know what I'm doing," he said. "I have a set routine of training and when I don't feel like a heavy schedule I don't work.

"That is one reason I do not like to charge admission to my training bouts. The spectators feel they are entitled to a fight for the money and I may no be inclined to work that hard."

Bigger and Better Physically.

It is almost impossible to get a so-called "expert analysis of Tunney's fighting form because he never has been a highly impressive gym worker. But he looks a little bigger than last year and he certainly has double the confidence.

Gene never has inherited the real, rich robes of the champion, but he has a sort of regal demeanor and is doing very well in the role of a champion. His chief weakness lies in an obvious embarrassment which leads him to be overly sociable on occasions and to seek seclusion as much as possible because he knows he does not make a favorable impression on the "newspaper boys."

The "heavy book stuff" that he is supposed to be so fond of has Gene irritated to the point of exasperation. There aren't very many books around his camp now—or if there are they are carefully hidden away.

The champion also has been disturbed about the "fixed fight" rumors.

"I think Dempsey and I have established reputations for integrity," he said.

Everybody Confident.

The Tunney camp, with a heavy representation of wealth and the social elite, is subdued and restrained. It is unlike the Dempsey camp with its horse play and easy affability. But there is something about the atmosphere of Gene's quarters that gives the impression that everybody is confident.

Tunney has brought a new kind of training to the fight business and it is going to be interesting to see how successfully it works.

TULSA ACE TOO MUCH FOR WACO

Blaeholder Hurls Fine Game and Oilers Win, 7-3.

TULSA, Okla., Spt. 17—(I. N. S.)—Tulsa of the Western league won from the Waco Cubs, runners-up in the Texas League, 7 to 3. George Blaeholder, pitching ace of the Western circuit, held the Texans to seven hits and one run until the ninth. By innings:

Bucs, Yankees Likely to Mix World Series

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—A world's series between the New York Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates appeared almost certain today when the Pirates took two games of a doubleheader from the Brooklyn Robins by scores of 2 to 1 and 6 to 0. With the Yankees already "in," the Pittsburgh team maintained its lead of four and one-half games over the second place New York Giants.

The standings of the first division clubs in the National league following today's games were:

	W	L	Pct.
Pittsburgh	87	53	.621
New York	83	58	.586
St. Louis	81	59	.579
Chicago	80	62	.563

Only Fight Involves Second.

All the clubs in the upper half of the National league won today, but it seemed that the Giants, the Cardinals and the Cubs practically are eliminated from the race, and the contest now is to collect second place money.

If the Yanks and Bucaneers do tangle in the world's series, it will be a fight between a team which dominated its league because of tremendous batting power against a team which won the pennant on strong pitching.

The Yankees have one of the strongest batting clubs in baseball history, while the Pirates have been given excellent pitching by Lee Meadows, Ray Kremer, Carmen Hill and Vic Aldridge.

Warner's Indian Warriors Fooled By Smart Penn Play

BY SOL METZGER.

The story of Pop Warner fooling Harvard's 1903 eleven on the kick-off by reason of his quarterback, Johnson, slipping the ball under his sweater and running over the Harvard goal-line unmolested for a touchdown, is known to every dyed-in-the-wool football fan — and always will be. At that Pop didn't invent this then legal trick. It cropped out a season or so earlier in a Penn State-Cornell battle. Penn State conceiving the stunt.

But few remember the day when Dr. Carl Williams' University of Pennsylvania team fooled Pop's Carlysle Indians just as badly. Carl was Penn's first graduate coach. Having played under him, I can vouch for the fact he had a fertile brain.

It was back in 1907 that Carl figured out this classic, back in the days when a forward pass could be thrown from any old place. You didn't have to move back over five yards behind the line of scrimmage, as you do now, to toss an aerial. Any spot was O. K., and officials in those times scarcely earned their pay, there were so few restrictions, though most of them may have merited the censure they received.

To get down to cases, Penn was playing Pop Warner's tricky Indians and having much the same trouble that Gen. Custer encountered previously with their fathers. Having the ball some 40 yards from the Red Men's goal and with ample ground to gain, Penn dropped into a punt formation and uncorked her masterpiece, Big Dexter Draper was at left tackle for the Red and Blue, an All-American, too. He's the gent represented by the black dot in the diagram above.

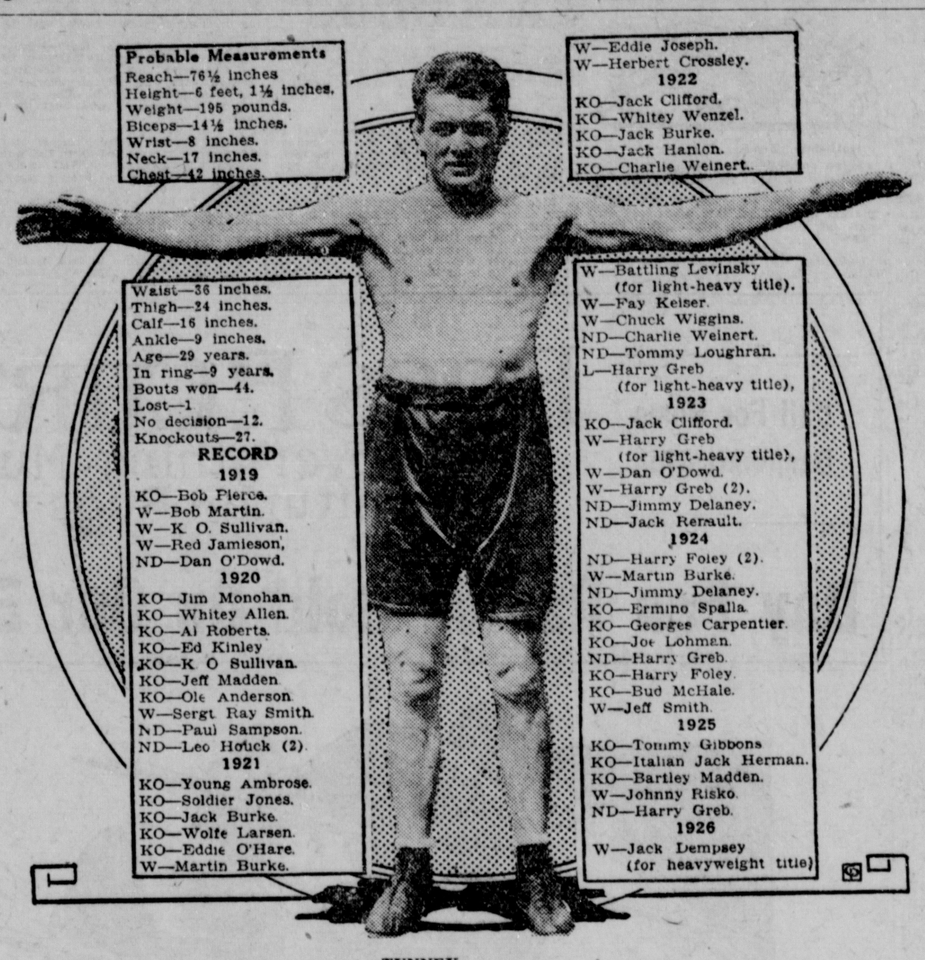

Odd how perplexing are the most simple things of this world and of football, too. When the ball was snapped Draper merely pivoted in his tracks. The Indian tackle playing opposite him and a bit wider, went charging by like a wild bull, bent on laying low everybody and anything that got in his way. And as he went whizzing by, Penn's quarter, who had received the ball from his center, handed it forward to Draper. Draper then completed his full turn and started straight ahead through the hole in the line he had just vacated. Not a redskin saw him.

Why? Well, Carl Williams, Penn's coach, had doped it all out in advance. In order to distract their attention from Draper, Carl had his four backs rush at top speed around the opposite side of the line, as though off on an end run. In consequence every Indian back tore madly over to stop any possible calamity in that direction. Of course the Indian line didn't see the play. The one who might have done so, their right tackle, had swallowed the whole parsphernalia, and had been fooled completely.

Whereupon, some 20,000 paid admissions, a big crowd in those days, were gleddened or disgruntled according to their sympathies or their bets, by the sight of Penn's big tackleambling serenely some 40 yard down one side of the gridiron for a touchdown while eleven Indians from the Carlisle Indian Training School tore wildly to the opposite side of the field without so much as taking a glance at Draper, who had received what will always stand as a world's record for the shortest forward pass ever made.

DEMPSEY.

The Gene Tunney who faces Jack Dempsey in Chicago, Sept. 22, will be a bigger Tunney. The former's admirers add that he will be a better Tunney as well, but that's another story.

When Gene Tunney entered the heavyweight ranks he was a light heavyweight, fighting around 178 pounds. Against Dempsey a year ago Tunney had rounded into a full fledged heavyweight but had not attained the fully developed torso, shoulders and back that he now boasts. He will enter the ring against the former champion weighing some pounds more than he did in the Sesquicentennial battle last September.

Tunney has filled out these places in the year he has kept in condition for his future battles. This filling out process was not only natural because of his youth, but, barring a possible lessening of his blows, due to the added development of his shoulder and arm muscles, probably improved him as a heavyweight.

Tunney could not knock out Dempsey in their last meeting. It took the champ many rounds of fighting to floor Carpentier and Gibbons, neither of whom has ever been considered the rugged, bulldog type of fighter Dempsey is.

Tunney apparently lacked force behind blows.

This maturity of build should give him greater strength mainly because of the added weight he can throw behind his punches.

Dempsey has changed little in build since his fight with Tunney, and certainly not much since his fight with Sharkey. He did, however, add two or three pounds, distributed generally over his frame, between the time of weighing in for Tunney and his battle with Sharkey. This, mainly for the reason that nervousness and poor condition in general cost him some poundage in the days preceding the bout in which he lost his title.

Increased weight, at Dempsey's age, would be a severe handicap. The new poundage, in Tunney's case, probably makes him a more formidable foe, as far as strength and endurance are concerned.

PIRATES ANNEX ELEVEN IN ROW

Pittsburgh Walks Over Dodgers For Twin Victories.

Kremer and Aldridge Turn Trick With Double Win.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 17—Playing championship ball, the Pirates this afternoon extended tehir winning streak to 11 straight games, taking toe first two of the Brooklyn series, 2 to 1, and 6 to 0.

The first encounter, a close affair, was a pitcher's battle between Vic Aldridge and Jess Petty. The Pirates shoved across their runs in the fifth with four hits and two sacrifices. The Robins threw a scare into the local camp in the ninth, but Aldridge was able to pull out of a hole, allowing only one run.

In the second game Ray Kremer, ace of the Pittsburgh pitching staff, held the Dodgers to three hits while his teammates tallied thirteen hits, one of them a homer by Glenn Wright. It was Kremer's sixteenth victory of the season. The scores:

Big Talk By Flynn; His Subject: Tunney

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—"Once upon a time I outlined a plan that made Gene Tunney look like a ham and egg fighter—and on September 22, I'll do it again," spoke up Leo Post-Mortem Flynn, the present pilot of Jack Dempsey's pawheaving destiny.

"It isn't at all difficult," added Flynn, who then lapsed into the reminiscent to explain the whys and the wherefores.

"It happened in 1923 when I sent my man, Jack Renault, up against this alleged fierce and savage man who is now referred to as the champeen of the world.

Brands Gene as Dude.

"I knew all about Tunney then—as I do now. This bird Tunney never carried a fight to any man in his whole career. That isn't his racket. Although he is paid to FIGHT, that dude never has done anything but let the other fellow do the fighting while he played the waiting and the counter game.

"Renault was a rather aggressive type of ringman who usually tore into his man and tried to start things—and finish them, too. I knew that such a style of fighting was just the kind that would have suited Tunney to perfection. So, as the advisor for Renault, I decided to outsmart Tunney a bit—and beat him at his own game.

"I told Renault:

When Tunney Hit Floor.

"'Nix on the rushing in stuff. Keep close to him, keep crowding him—but do not lead to him. D'ya understand?'

"Renault nooded, the bell rang and they went into action. But Renault saw an early chance for Tunney's chin—he let go—and when the punch landed, Tunney hit the floor. He climbed up and got a bicycle.

"When Renault came back after the first round, he expected praise for having floored Tunney. He didn't get it. I had given orders—but he hadn't followed them.

Renault Obeyed Orders.

"'Crowd Tunney—but don't do any more leading,' I told Renault, 'wait for him to lead and let's see how long that is.

"Renault followed orders absolutely in the second round—and did not lead. Tunney followed his cautious instinct and he did not lead. If a punch was swung in that round, much less a punch landed it fails to be in my memory.

"The third round was the same way. Renault was getting nervous from doing nothing—but Tunney was calm and unruffled. It was all the usual thing for Tunney. Renault wanted me to let him open up with the start of the fourth. I saw no reason why Renault should START the fighting. So I said 'nix.'

Referee Stopped It.

"And in the fourth round the referee stopped the fight, called it 'no-contest' and tossed both men out of the ring.

"I am not saying that I'll issue the same orders to Dempsey that I did to Renault. But I do say that if Tunney doesn't volunteer to make a fight of it, and earn some of that $1,000,000 he'll get, then I may order Dempsey to do as Renault did that night. After which, we will see what kind of a fighting champion this Tunney really is.

"There may be some criticism of a plan like that—that is, criticism of Dempsey and of me. But why?

Played Into Gene's Hands.

Dempsey, long ago, proved to the world that he was an amazingly aggressive fighter, throwing everything he had into every minute of every round so as to provide action and give the crowd its money's worth.

"He did that last September. He carried the fight to Tunney all the way. And because he did, and he wasn't right that night, he played right into Tunney's hands. That plan of Dempsey being the aggressor and Tunney countering, lost the title for Dempsey—and gained it for Tunney.

Jack Also Can Wait.

"Is there any reason why Dempsey cant do as Tunney does—and just merely wait—and wait?"

Asked if he thought Tunney would mix it with Dempsey and let it be the survival of the best punches, Flynn answered:

"It's 100 to 1 that Tunney won't do that. But if he does—well, you can name the spot now where Tunney will flop. For if it ever comes to toe-to-toe work, Dempsey will annihilate Tunney.

Dempsey Harder Hitter.

"Dempsey hits harder, can take it better—and I have a well defined notion that Tunney's refined spirit will simply crumple up and die if the going gets rough.

"What do I think about the outcome? Why, it's a cinch for Dempsey—an absolute copper-riveted cinch for him to win. I figure he'll stop Tunney, but if Tunney should be on his feet at the end of ten rounds, you'll see a worse looking wreck than Dempsey was a year ago in Philadelphia."

Hubbard Hangs Up New Jump Record

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17—(U. P.)—With a leap of 26 feet, 2 1-4 inches, Dehart Hubbard, negro Olympic champion, today broke his own world broad jump record of 25 feet, 10 7-8 inches. The A. A. U. expected to accept the mark, which was made public at the public recreation commission's meet.

Hubbard also tied the world's 100-yard dash record of 9 3-5 seconds.

SHIFT FORESEEN IN BETTING ODDS

Dempsey Looks So Nifty That Even Money Will Soon Be Offered.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL.

LINCOLN FIELDS, Ill., Sept. 17—(U. P.)—Through what seems to have been a studiously planned and religiously executed system of training, Jack Dempsey has reached such impressive form that he may be an even money choice when he attempts to regain his heavyweight championship from Gene Tunney next Thursday night.

When Tex Rickard matched the champion and the former champion, Tunney was a two to one favorite in the betting, despite Dempsey's showing in beating Jack Sharkey. The odds quoted around here now are seven to five on Tunney, with very little money posted.

Dempsey the Crowd Hero.

Popular sentiment, of course, controls these odds and a lot of Dempsey money is being offered by customers not classed as experts. The "important money," from the so-called insiders, still is leaning heavily to Tunney.

But the fact still remains that Dempsey is impressing every one who sees him work out. He seems to be a good 50 per cent better, both physically and mentally, than he was in Philadelphia last year. Tunney will have to show a proportionate improvement if he can hope to win.

The improvement in Dempsey's physical and mental condition is credited to a number of sources.

No Law Suits to Bother.

Tex Rickard says Dempsey hasn't had so many law suits and other troubles; that he has a hard fight (Sharkey) under his belt, and that he hasn't the burden which ecery champion must carry into the ring. Tex says Jack is back where he was in Toledo in 1919. He has everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Some of the boxing fraternity give the credit to Leo Flynn, the former champion's manager.

Late Visitors Barred.

There are some who criticise Flynn because he is keeping Dempsey in so much seclusion, but Flynn is smart enough to know that a fighter going into a $3,000,000 contest cannot make himself accessible at any hour of the day or night to photographers, newly arrived sports writers or women feature writers.

Dempsey, under the stern orders of Flynn, is having more time to himself than he ever enjoyed under Jack Kearns' management. He trains and he rests.

Different System Now.

The difference in the system that Flynn instituted was plain at Saratoga when Dempsey was training for Sharkey and it is still plainer out here.

There has been a lot of that talk about Flynn changing Jack's entire style. There is nothing to it. Dempsey has only one style and he could never change it without ruining himself. Flynn may have told him to get down off his toes to save his legs and shorten his punches, but that's all.

Jack Better Physically.

Jack's work in training shows these slight changes in distance and punching and his physical appearance shows the benefit of some good advice from some one. Dempsey would kill himself in the gymnasium and on the road if he had no boss around and everyone gives Flynn credit for forcing Jack to save himself.

Dempsey's plans never are announced until the last minute, but it is probable that his last real workout for Thursday night's fight will be Sunday.

While most of Chicago is speculating about the seriousness of Tunney's eye injury, the Dempsey camp isn't being led astray.

"I have been in this racket a long time," Flynn said. "We're training Dempsey for that fight. Tunney will have to train himself."

OFFICIALS MEET MONDAY EVENING

A meeting of Lincoln football officials has been called for Monday, 7:30 p. m. at the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce. The meeting is called to discuss football rules, preliminary to the meeting with Coach Henry F. Schulte later in the week.

GRIDDERS BUSY LOCAL SUBURBS

Havelock and University Place Squads Grind Away at Practice.

Squads of record-breaking size were making the spare time count Saturday morning at both the Havelock and University Place high football camps. At the Boilermakers camp there were enough players to compose exactly five elevens, and the University Place school had 50.

Out at the shoptown the boys were limbering themselves up to take out the kinks caused by a stiff scrimmage held Friday night. Coach Walter Black's Havelock horde has put in a hard week and coach wants no let-down, lest they lose their stride.

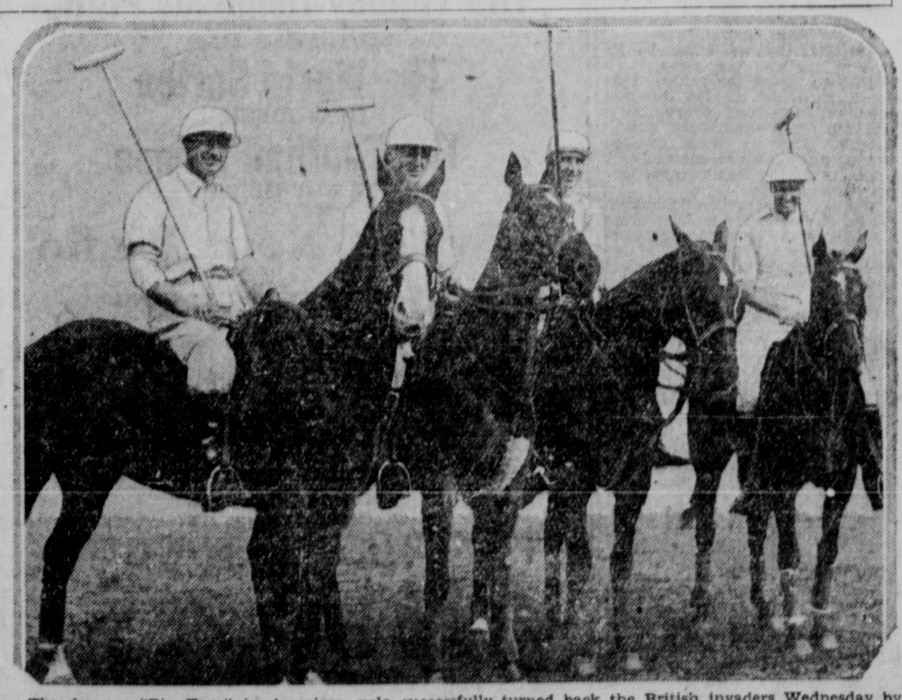

Offense Looks Good.

Early practice points to a rampaging offense for the suburbanites. There are several backfield men who have been performing better than the average. Among these are the brothers Warga, Shel at fullback and Wayne at half, Robinson and Finning at the other half, and Barrett and Kling at the quarterback corner.

Haverlan, Boilermaker captain and star end, has looked sweet at his flank position, and unless all reasonable predictions are upset, Havelock opponents will be charged with many blocked punts this fall. Bowers at the other end, Hurburt at tackle and Frueauf at guard have made good accounts of themselves thus far.

The young Methodists took their last signal drill preliminary to the bearing down beginning Monday for the last week before the big Crete game.

"Big Four" Beat British.

The famous "Big Four" in American polo successfully turned back the British invaders Wednesday by scoring a second victory in the international cup series.

Members of the American team are Devereux Milburn, Malcolm Stevenson, Tommy Hitchcock and J. Watson Webb.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Bearish Canadian wheat figures, issued last Monday, depressed the market throughout the week and today December and March sold at the lowest point of the season. At the close wheat was 1¾c to 2¾c lower for the day and 5⅛c to 6¾c lower for the week. Corn ended up ¼c to 1⅝c lower for the day and 8c to 9⅛c lower for the week. Oats closed ⅝c to 1¾c lower for the week and ⅝c higher to 1⅛c lower for the day.

During the week commission houses have been selling freely as a result of the certainty that the Canadia wheat crop would be far larger than estimates and shorts took profits on the way down. Little support was in evidence at any time.

High temperatures over the corn belt continue to force the growth of the crop and with little likelihood of frost in the immediate future, indications are for a large crop and prices have acted accordingly. Stop-loss orders as prices dropped during the week further weakened the market.

Oats followed wheat to some extent, although indications that the Canadian government figures were too high resulted in checking the decline, which followed their publication.

CHICAGO DUMPS LOSING STREAK

McCarthy's Bruins Win Two at Expense Of Boston Club.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17— U. P.)—The Cubs broke a losing streak here this afternoon at the expense of the Boston Braves, copping both parts of a twin bill. The nightcap was won in regulation time, 5 to 3, but, it required 13 innings to win the opener, 3 to 2.

DO YOU WANT TO SELL YOUR FARM—

If so, don't sit and wait. The old method of waiting for someone to come and buy it for more than it would sell for, is as far behind time, as a hunter at the opening season to sit and wait for the game to come to him. He may if he sits long enough, get some game what the active hunter crippled or missed, so may the former get a lame duck if he lives long enough, but the active men in both cases will reap the cream of the season. The season is now opened on water fowls and land sales, those using the best method will be the winners at the end. Land sales at auction is the last word of progress in selling farms. Our method of selling farms at auction is a top price geter. Posted on land sales and values. 25 years' of experience in auctions and land sales, in five different states, selling over half a million dollars' worth of property, are the reasons for our success. SALES OF BUICKS BREAK RECORDS

Deliveries of Cars in July and August Number 58,800.

FLINT, Mich., Sept. 17—Buick sales for July and August, 1927, shattered all records in Buick history, C. W. Churchill, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Co., announced Saturday. Deliveries are still acceerating at a rate which taxes the production cpacity of the Buick factories, Mr. Churchill added.

Buick deliveries for July and August far outstripped the past's highest total for a corresponding period. They numbered 58,800, as compared with 44,811 in July and August, 1926, an increase of 13,989 deliveries over the corresponding 1926 period.

"Our dealers' principal concern since the introduction of Buick for 1928 seems to be assuring themselves of enough cars to meet their customers' demands," said Mr. Churchill. "In light of the enthusiastic comment reflected in dealers' messages to the factory, the statement that the new Buick struck a responsive chord is conservative. It is making a record conquest of public favor.

"Aside from the gratification we feel at such a whole-hearted reception of Buick's latest product, is evidence of general good business in all lines throughout the country which such a remarkable demand portends. We have been greatly pleased to note that this heightened demand is not emanating from only a few sections of the United States, but is coming from everywhere in like volume."

Mr. Churchill said that dealer comment indicated Buick's stylish low lines, its entirely new interior decorative scheme, its amazing performance and its riding ease, achieved by hydraulic shock absorbers front and rear on all models, are the outstanding reasons behind its immediate acceptance by the public.

DODGE FOUR WINS STOCK CAR RACE AT ATLANTIC CITY

A Dodge sport roadster piloted by Earl Vance walked away with the honors in the stock car race for four cylinder cars at the Atlantic City speedway on Labor day, taking first place with an average speed of 67.35 miles per hour for the 25-mile grind.

Five different American makes of four cylinder cars were entered in the event.

It is of particular interest that although every car entered in the race was a stock car the Dodge was not entered by the Dodge Brothers factory or by a Dodge Brothers dealer. It was entered by the Speedway association, having been purchased for the purpose only ten days before the race and the only limbering up it had was during that interval. Earl Vance, the driver, was chosen by the Speedway association.

The Dodge was powered with the famous "124" motor which was first introduced last May. This motor was developed especially for the present Dodge four chassis and bodies which were introduced in July. It is this most recent series of Dodge fours which have been advertised as the fastest fours in America.

In winning the race the Dodge four clearly established its claim to the distinction of being the fastest four in America and as the race was run under the auspices of the contest board of the American Automobile association the speed of 67.35 miles per hour established a new official record.

The rules under which the race was run required that the windshield, fenders, running boards and shields be removed from all cars.

Auto Notes

Rules for Easy Driving

Less weariness in the body and fewer aches in the legs will be experienced if the following suggestions are carried out when driving on an extended tour;

Use the hand brake occasionally so as to use the right foot.

Hold eyelids closer together when the road is wide and the sun glaring.

Feed gas with the hand throttle control now and again instead of with the foot.

Run slower over rough roads rather than hurry, and try to steer around bumps.

Grip the steering wheel at different points and thus change the position of the arms.

Always shift to neutral when stopping for traffic rather than remaining in gear and holding the clutch out.

Oil or grease on the soles of shoes may cause the foot to slip off the brake pedal. Wipe the shoes before getting into the car.

Wise motorists always keep the best tires on the front wheels. Little difficulty will be experienced in hilding the car on the road until it can be stopped if a rear tire blows out.

Most of the glare that comes from headlights is due to improper focusing. When the lamps are properly focused they give off very little glare. Keep the lense clean and more light may be had with less glare.

The right way to get out of a rut, especially on a muddy road is to back out, with the front wheels steered toward the left. Thus the least effort is put on the engine and there is no strain on the wheel spokes and the front axle.

Nearly all the tire difficulties met by the motorist may be laid to neglect. Tires should be inspected at least once a week for cuts in the sidewalls and treads. At the same time the pressures should be tested. Do not guess at inflation pressures.

CHRYSLER'S NEW ENGINE POPULAR

"Red-Head" Strong Factor in Heavy Sales Officials Declare.

Popularity of the newly developed Chrysler high compression engine has been so great since its announcement late in July, according to advices received from company officials by Murphy Motors, 1724 O street that in spite of exceptional activity in factory production they are unable to keep pace with the orders pouring in on them.

All three of the new Chrysler models introduced in August, the '52', '62' and '72,' are meeting with an overwhelming public demand. the officials say, and the tenor of urgent requests coming from every part of the country for increased dealer allotments of cars equipped with the "Red-Head" proves to them that the remarkable performance of this high compression engine has made a profound impression on the motoring public.

A large proportion of the orders being received ask for 100 per cent "Red-head" equipment on cars now wanted, the officials state. The new high compression engine is standard on all Chrysler roadsters, including the Imperial "80" and the three new models just put on the market and is optional on all other cars of Chrysler production. All owners of six-cylinder Chryslers produced since July, 1925, are also given the opportunity of installing the new "red-head" equipment on their present engines.

Better Fields Available.

"Automobile engineers have long wanted o build engines of higher compression but have been held back partly because of inadequate national distribution of high compression gasoline and partly because to use a high compression motor meant to build a car able to stand additional strains," said J. W. Frazer, Chrysler sales manager, in discussing his company's new engine development.

"Now that high compression fuels are available practically everywhere we are going to see the adoption of high compression engines generally throughout the industry. Naturally, the Chrysler corporation is pleased that it was the first to announce production of a motor of the new type.

"Chrysler engineers, however, anticipated the coming of the automobile era now opening. Looking forward to the day when high compression gasoline would have a nationwide distribution, they set about building a car strong enough to meet the demands of a high compression engine. For example, the Chrysler is built with an unusually powerful, bridgelike crankcase webbing, with a staunch firmly supported crankshaft — seven bearings in all sixes—and with special alloy steel valves suitable for use with high compression fuels.

DR. FRANK CRANE HAS STUDEBAKER

Noted Editorial Writer Drives About Hollywood in 'President.'

"Comfort is purely an American institution. If you would get the most out of life—look to your comfort."

This rather pointed bit of philosophy comes from no less an authority than Dr. Frank Crane, whose philosophical advice is broadcast daily to more than 20,000,000 Americans through the medium of 120 of the nation's most prominent newspapers.

And, Dr. Crane is one philosopher who follows his own advice. He has a home in Hollywood, within fivecent telephone local toll distance of a dozen or more homes of internationally famous screen stars, and in the garage back of that home is stabled a new Studebaker President.

"Now, I don't need anything else," Dr. Crane commented in his typically humorous manner, when interviewed. "I'm going to do nothing except dictate enough words every day to keep my newspaper articles going, and ride around in the Studebaker."

The celebrated preacher of optimism and success incidentally takes occasion to poke a bit of sly fun at the city and section which he has chosen for his permanent home.

"Don't think, though, that I am a real Hollywooder in all ways," he smiled. "I have just one wife. Some of the boys out here seem to have 'em in relays. And this new home of mine—it's just like every other Southern California house; it's for sale. Do you know anybody that wants to buy it?"

Dr. Crane will discuss anything—always with the humorous slant of his mellowed years. He even had a word or two to say about the flappers.

"I have reached the age where young girls kiss me, and never bat an eye," he asserted, "which shows I am not dangrous any more. I never get over enjoying it, however, and any candidates for this honor may jot down the address, 546 McCadden Place, Hollywood, California. Line forms to the east. Now is the time to subscribe."

Timely Tire Tips

Practically every motorist knows the importance of proper inflation, care of cuts and avoiding running against the curb or in ruts, but few realize what an important part the brakes play in the life of the tires. Poorly adjusted brakes are the cause of many tire failures. When brakes are not properly adjusted the wheel having the tightest brake band locks first when the brake is applied. The locked wheel slides along the road, grinding off the tire tread. Continued driving with brakes unevenly adjusted wears one tire out all too soon. Often the driver is unaware that his brakes are not adjusted correctly until the tire shows wear. To be sure brakes are in good adjustment, they should undergo a careful inspection.

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

Mounting Tight Rim

Every motorist has experienced trouble in mounting rims. The rim seems suddenly to have shrunk so that the joint persists in striking the wheel felloe. A small screw jack placed in position on the hub can be used to spring the joint of the rim outward far enough to permit the rim to be slipped into place.

Starting Motor Easily Ruined by Careless Handling.

Do not press the button which connects the starting motor in a half-hearted manner; press it all the way down. Insufficient pressure not only damages the contacts of the starting switch, by causing arcing, but sometimes injures the starting motor by causing the drive to jam.

A Useful Accessory.

One of the most useful things to carry in the car on tours is 25 feet of half-inch manila rope, which has almost endless uses. In the first place it is an admirable tow rope. It can be wrapped around axle and spring after some of the spring leaves have been broken, to get home without breaking the rest of the leaves. It can be cut in two and wrapped around the rear tires to give traction in some mud hole where it would be impossible to fasten the chains. The rope can even be used as a tire, when the last spare has blown out and will save the rim on the journey home.

Grease Retainers Protect Brakes

Leaky grease retainers allow the grease to find its way to the braking surface, causing a wide variation in brake performance and even brake failure. New felt grease retainers and the use of a grease that does not flow freely at increased temperatures will usually remedy these conditions. When grease melts, due to heat, to the point that it will flow almost as freely as water, it will be readily discharged from the bearings to the brakes by the spinning action of the wheel, the surge toward the side as the car rounds a curve or when standing or moving on the side of a well-crowned road. The so-called brake lining glaze is often due to greasy linings. When the grease is cold and pasty, the brakes hold very well. After a number of stops are made in traffic, the grease becomes warm, thins, and forms a film between the lining and drum and, since the lining cannot touch the drum, due to the film of grease between it and the drum, the lining cannot efficiently retard the drum and wheel and brakes and hence the car. If the flow of grease to barkes is stopped, as mentioned above, even though brake linings have become saturated, the grease will often evaporate, due to brake heat, and the full brake efficiency will return. This grease-cleaning process can be hastened by washing the linings with gasoline and brushing them with a wire-bristled or coarse-bristled brush.

It's not merely what they'll do —but the way they do it

—that makes friends for the Wolverine

Crowd them a little and most of the cars that you're likely to buy will give you more speed than you're likely to need.

But you never need to crowd a Wolverine. It does its job easily, smoothly, willingly.

Try one yourself and see the way it goes through its paces. Watch how quickly it gathers speed—no straining, no rumbling, no laboring. Hold it at forty or fifty for awhile—that will tell you how easily it will carry you fast hour after hour, mile after mile. Push it a little faster than you think you dare over a road that's half holes and half bumps—you'll know then what comfort means to the owner of a Wolverine.

If you like a car that's so quick to respond to your every wish, that you can forget the car in the joy of going—you'll find the Wolverine is the kind of car you'll like to own.

Weddings Will be Solemnized Nearly Every October Day

October's "bright blue weather" is finding increasing popularity among those whose days are filled with plans for trousseaux, wedding gowns and filmy bridal veils. Earthquakes and Riots Intrude on Pleasures of Lincoln Woman and Son During Stay in Vienna

To few vacationists comes the thrill and the adventure of starting out to the usually peaceful, pleasure-loving city of Vienna and ending with seeing it rocked to its foundations, during the second week of July, by riots, which for a time, threatened to engulf the Austrian republic in civil war.

Such was the experience of Mrs. Arthur L. Smith and her young son, Arthur jr., who left Lincoln early in June for a quiet summer of study, of beautiful places to see, exquisite music to hear and a glimpse of the best that the world offers in scientific research, for one is told that in no city in the world can such a glimpse be had, as in the city of Vienna.

All well and good to pass through the riots unharmed, but to have an earthquake come upon you just three days later is enough of a thrill to please even the most adventurous of American boys.

"I was fighting for my home"

© 1927 The Selby Shoe Co.

SUPPOSE you suddenly realized that your home depended entirely upon you, and you simply didn't feel equal to the responsibility?

Such a predicament faced this young widow of Cincinnati.

"When my husband passed on I realized that we had spent our money as fast as he had earned it. There was very little left.

"At first I was confused, and bewildered. But soon I found courage. I had heard of so many women who had gone to work and had succeeded. I believed I could do the same thing. I secured a position.

"Soon I began to feel tired and worn. My days seemed so slow and tedious. I knew I was becoming less and less efficient—and, oh, how I tried!

"Finally my employer told me frankly that I should have to do better or let some one else have my place. Can you understand how I felt? I was fighting for my home — and I was losing.

"Jumpy nerves, weariness beyond description, foot aches — it seemed I could hardly move around! It was then, in one of my most hopeless moments, that I read one of your advertisements. The idea of a shoe helping me seemed preposterous, yet I couldn't afford to overlook anything.

"These Arch Preserver Shoes of mine saved my position; they have made my life happy — and safe!

"I now go through the busiest day without thinking of my feet. I'm writing this to express my thanks."

When things must be done, then you realize the necessity of active feet.

Yet it is so easy to have vigorous, comfortable feet all through the day and evening. Simply wear correct shoes that provide a natural walking base, that protect your feet against straining and pinching.

The Arch Preserver Shoe today is a correct shoe. It answers every requirement of the human foot. It is different in practically every feature from ordinary abusive shoes.

A full width, permanently shaped to the foot, built-in arch bridge prevents the slightest tendency toward sagging and straining of the long arch of the foot, and also keeps the foot from rotating over sideways; a flat inner sole, crosswise, prevents pinching; a special modeling of the inside gives the necessary support to the metatarsal arch; and finally, a new scientific fitting system assures just the right size for utmost comfort and smartest appearance.

These and many other exclusive, patented features account for the superiority of the Arch Preserver Shoe. Comfort has been concealed — this is a correct, natural shoe. And beauty is revealed — the patented features do not interfere with the style.

Correct styles for all occasions are created by the Selby New York Studio with a Paris Correspondent.

Fall Fashion Exhibition

STYLE DICTA

The uneven hemline is one of the outstanding style notes of the season. It adds grace and distinction to the wearer, particularly where used in the development of evening gowns.

Neckline—

Because of its chic appearance and smart simplicity, Parisiennes favor the new high neck line which is so well defined in the latest style creations.

The Flare—

Is one of the favorite styles of the season, accepted everywhere by the smartest dressers. Comfort and grace lend much to its attractiveness.

Tunic—

A garment which does not have a tunic flare, seems to be out of place this season. It is a very popular style feature.

Sleeve—

Popular opinion seems to be in accord as far as the tie sleeve is concerned. If the garment has a tie sleeve it is correct.

Waistline—

Fashion insists upon the high waist line for both evening and afternoon wear and makes it plain that this important style feature should not be overlooked.

PARIS IMPORTATIONS—

BEADED GOWNS, Parisienne imports of daring creations, lavish in detail and gorgeous in their soft colorings and charming necklines. Versatile fashions for the smart diversions of fall. Each garment personally selected by Mr. Mullowney in smart individual models. Be the first to view these lovely creations now displayed in our ready to wear Salon.

We Cordially Invite You to See Fashion At Its Loveliest!

Earthquakes and Riots Intrude On Pleasures of Lincoln Woman

woke up hearing the thumping of feet and the angry voices of crowds of men beneath my window," writes Mrs. Smith in her diary. "A few minutes later the little housemaid, Mitzi, came to my door to tell me that men were being killed in the ring, the shops were all closed, the street cars stopped and the telephones out of order.

"At noon I went out for lunch. That, however, was my last venture out for three days as a number of innocent bystanders like myself, never lived to go home and tell the tale. Heavy shutters were hung over the shops, guns were heard in the distance and the sky was filled with smoke. Where I usually got off the cars, machine guns were in action and men were going about the street wearing red flags."

For three days the city was in a state of chaos. Scores were killed in street clashes, hundreds were badly wounded, police headquarters were wrecked, the Ministry of Justice building was burned, valuable records destroyed and business was completely paralyzed by a general strike. Only food trains were running in and out of the city. Women were as prevalent in the fighting as men. Armed with boards into which huge nails had been driven, they dragged a policeman off his horse, hung his clothes on a post and proceeded to murder him in the most barbarous manner possible.

Cause of Riot.

The cause of all this disturbance was the accquittal on July 14 of three Austrian fascists who had bene accused of the murder of two socialists—a war cripple and his young son—in a fight in the Burgenland last February. Throughout Austria the opinion prevailed that the accused were guilty, and the verdict therefore was greeted by a storm of protest, especially in Vienna, where the socialists stand 78 to 42 in the city government.

Later the socialists blamed the Vienna uprising on the communists (Russian socialists in radical form) and it is said to have been proven that the whole thing was engineered by a Russian woman.

Not content with a mere three days rioting, on July 18 Vienna offered for the entertainment of her guests an earthquake.

"I was lying in bed reading," said Mrs. Smith, "when suddenly I felt a decided movement of my bed. My first thought was that the communists had blown up the arsenal. For some unknown reason Doctor Flings training in evidence, 'verify your impressions', flashed through my mind and I turned to see the water in my night glass moving from side to side and the fringe of my lamp shade swaying. I knew then that it was an earthquake."

Having already filled in the allotted space in her diary for that day, Mrs. Smith's only comment was scrawled in no a corner, "An earthquake just occurred, 9:50 p. m."

Perhaps it is just as well that "Line O Day" diaries do not let one dwell too long on either the pleasant or unpleasant experiences of summer vacations. In years to come, down a generation or two, the short, scrawled sentence in the little diary may cause the eyes of some youngster to grow big with excitement and his imagination to travel far faster than any amount of detail writen in the diary on that memorable night might allow.

And Much Pleasure.

But the whole summer was not be filled completely with riots and earthquakes, even if it did suit the love of adventure of young Mr. Arthur. Directed by a letter from Mrs. Stephen Perutz, formerly of Lincoln, the Smiths were met in Vienna by Frauline Trude Reitler, the German translator for H. G. Wells, well known English writer. Through her they were established for the summer in the home of Frau Doctor Hilda Roos who was their hostess during the whole vacation. There they lived the life of a real Viennese family, something that the average American tourist who always wanders from one spot of Europe to another, it not privileged to do.

Who wouldn't love the luxury of having one's bath drawn every morning (they are horrified if you suggest doing it for wourself) and one's breakfast served on a small table in the bedroom overlooking a beautiful range of mountains? Perhaps our American homes might be run on the same order if our Mitzi's had only to be paid nine dollars a month, worked ten and eleven hours a day with only a short time off on Sunday afternoon.

One of the little maid's first morning tasks was going out for Arthur's glass of milk for his breakfast. Austrian children do not drink milk as do our American youngsters and as a consequence one doctor from this state says that he saw more cases of tuberculosis in one day in a Vienna hospital than he has seen in twenty-five years in practice in the state of Nebraska.

What devotee of music in Lincoln wouldn't love the chance to pay only fifty to ninety cents for a seat under the trees in the Burg Garten, the former front play ground of the children of the court, and there listen to some of the world's loveliest music? Or in case of a shower, to be rushed out of the gardens and into the beautiful Fest Saal, exquisite in its white marble and gold inlay.

One wonders how an American youngster would enjoy himself for a whole summer among children who neither understood him nor whom he could understand. In the family where the Smiths made their home was a small boy named Herbert. He could neither speak nor understand English. Arthur could neither speak nor understand any German. According to Arthur's mother, however, it was a very short time before each could make the other understand perfectly what was meant by ice cream, new swimming balls, "trikes" what were used for street cars, and castles to build in the "Kinder Zimmer."

Arthur's birthday is perhaps one of the most pleasant memories that either Arthur or his mother have brought home with them. On arising, a delightful breakfast on a very small flower laden table was brought to their room and heaped upon it the gifts from all of the good friends they had made during their visit. A bowl of bright gold fish, huge, gaily colored swimming balls, everything that these friendly people could think of to make a child happy who was spending his birthday so far from his own home and native land. Later in the day came a trip to Diana Bad, a group of lovely baths.

Losing sight of the young chap for a bit Mrs. Smith went to find him and saw him at a distance chattering away with another small youngster. Her first impression was that Arthur's German was certainly improving from the rate he was talknig, although she could not hear what he was saying. What really happened however, was that another lad of about the same age, spied Arthur from a distance and came rushing over. "Sprechen Sie Deutsch?" he asked. "A little, but I'd rather talk English" replied Arthur in his native tongue.

At that a gleam of pleasure broke over the strange lad's face and he replied in perfect English and a decided American accent, "Gee, I saw you had on a 'whole' bathing suit and I thought you almost had to be an American."

Now a "whole" bathing suit is the regular American boy's one-piece suit but according to Mrs. Smith they are models of propriety in comparison with the suits worn by the people of Vienna. At any rate the episode of the "whole" bathing suit and the bringing together of two American youngsters was the perfect ending of a happy birthday.

The Fourth of July brought another interesting day to Mrs. Smith and Arthur when they were the guests of the American Medical association on an excursion to Semmering in the Raxalpe, a range of beautiful mountanis southeast of Vienna. While Lincoln was melting going tothe track meet, the party from Vienna was wearing all of the clothes it could get on and playing in a snow storm.

Francly Broke.

An interesting slant on money as an unstable quantity in France, was found by Mrs. Smith on her return trip. Going to the bank too late to cash a check she and Arthur left Lucerne for Paris, atwelve hour's trip, with only two dollars and twenty cents. Arriving in Paris and having to make the most of what was left until she could reach the National City Bank of New York, France, as it is called there, she went up to a little exchange and offered them her gold one franc Swiss for which they in return gave her four francs French. Then handing them her last coin, a five franc piece Swiss, not gold however, they gave her the same amount as for the one franc piece. In other words they offered her about sixteen cents for the five franc piece.

Just as things were beginning to look a bit bad for the two Lincoln people along came a German speaking portier who was more than willing to give twenty francs French for the five franc Swiss, just five times as much as the exchange had offered. He certainly saved the day, for a twelve hour trip, three meals for two people, one of them a perfect specimen of American boyhood wtih an appetite that goes with it, it no joke when you are making it on two dollars and twenty cents.

"The only thing that is cheap in Europe is a Paris taxi-cab," says Mrs. Smith, and Notre Dame was a "dingy disappointment" according to young Arthur.

The trip home was made in the same gale on the Atlantic that brought the planes down. The writing in the diary is ample proof of the state of the weather, and no doubt only the pleasure of a seat at the captain's table made up for nine solid hours at two minute intervals of the eternal bellowing of the fog horn.

Sister of Buffalo Bill, Lincoln Visitor, Tells of Childhood on Kansas Prairies

Three score and ten years ago, little Julia Cody and her brother, "Willie," as she calls him, rode their ponies across the sweep of the Kansas prairies.

The state was a "dark and bloody ground" in those days, but the little boy loved the free western life, the dangers to those who did not believe as their neighbors, the infinity of the plains, the recklessness and daring of the new country, and the little girl rejoiced in it because he did.

The little girl grew up and became Mrs. Julia Cody Goodman.

The boy was later known as William F. Cody, the noted plainsman and western showman, Buffalo Bill.

Today, Mrs. Goodman, the last surviving member of her own family, is visiting in Lincoln, the guest of her cousin, Mrs. J. E. Craig, 3245 S street. The brother and the sisters of the long ago days in Kansas have gone but Mrs. Goodman remains.

"I do not know the reason I've been spared so long. The Lord must have some purpose," she says.

To perpetuate her brother's memory in historical record and to have him given all the honors that are his due are her own desires. Her only brother, she does not want his name to be lost in the mists of the past.

This alert, active woman, who has made three transcontinental trips in the last ten years, and who plans a Honolulu trip at Christmas, was always her brother's close companion. One volume she has written tells of his life, others planned will have him as the central character, as she has kept accurate mental record of her brother's life in her amazingly retentive memory.

The Isaac Cody family moved from Iowa, near Davenport, to Kansas, entering the state June 10, 1854. Her father was the first white settler in he state after the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill.

Those were the days of the border warfare, and Mr. Cody, a Free soil man, was harassed by the slavery people. He was stabbed, knocked down, shot at many times by those opposing his principles.

Scouted For Enemies.

It was in those days that Julia Cody and her brother, William, scouted for enemies in the vicinity of their home. Seated on their ponies, the little eight-year-old boy and the eleven - year - old girl watched for men lurking about their home, seeking to save their father, and they also accompanied him when he went out.

One day, Mrs. Goodman was in the kitchen of the Cody home, when a man came, demanded dinner, and showed a long knife, saying it was for "Cody's heart, wherever he is." The mother told the little girl to take the children to the attic to play, and there was the father, who had heard the stranger's remark. He gave the girl an ax and William Cody a gun for defense, had the man come up the stairs.

The Cody family had the first large log house in Leavenworth county, Kas., four miles west of Fort Leavenworth. However, her father often took refuge at the then Grasshopper falls, thirty miles west of the fort, and there he started the first saw mill.

From Lincoln, Mrs. Goodman is going to return to Grasshopper falls, only that the name has been changed to Valley falls, to collect data on the border trouble. She expects to do extensive research work among records for a volume she hopes to publish within the year.

Of it, she recalls a great deal from experience. She remembers the troubles of her father, who died in 1857, but who in the mean time had been a member of the first Kansas legislature. She remembers the tales of William Cody, who started out as a scout as a lad of twelve.

When that book is completed, Mrs. Goodman hopes to write a final volume, "Buffalo Bill as a Boy Scout." Her present book, "Just Cody," in which Buffalo Bill figures prominently, is a family biography, and is now in the hands of her publishers.

Would Move Body.

Of even greater interest to her is the removal of her brothers body from Lookout mountain, where she feels the spot is being commercialized, to Arlington. She has attended two Cody family reunions, attende by about 100 members, and it is the feeling of the family that he should lie in the national cemetery. Mrs. Goodman and Josephine Cody Bentley of Chicago, a cousin, who was the first Gold Star mother, are arranging for the change. At the present time, Mrs. Goodman has letters from officials in Washington who approve of taking the remains there.

Mrs. Goodman feels that Nebraska will be interested in this movement, as William F. Cody spent many of his most prominent days here. He was made chief of scouts at Fort McPherson, he entertained the Grand Duke Alexis there and in North Platte, and he went there at the time of Custer's death. Buffalo Bill organized his first theatrical venture at the fort in 1868 and he undertook his wild west show in North Platte in 1883, when he left the stage.

With Buffalo Bill at the time of his death in Denver, Mrs. Goodman knows that he would like to lie in Arlington. She spent six weeks with him there before he died, and the two renewed a companionship that had only been possible at intervals in the years.

Mrs. Julia Cody Goodman, sister of William F. Cody, Buffalo Bill, and biographer of the family of which her brother was a noted member. Mrs. Goodman, who has been a guest in Lincoln for several days, has herself enjoyed an interesting life and travels extensively in spite of her four score years.

Cody, to Mrs. Goodman, is home at this time, although she has not been there for five years. She delights in California, but so energetic and eager is she for new scenes and new vistas that she does not care to remain indefinitely any one place.

"I travel much alone, but I do not mind it all. People are always so pleasant to me," said this woman who might drop a score of her years without being questioned.

Lived In Lincoln.

Mrs. Goodman lived in Lincoln for some time, when her youngest son, Walter, attended school here. He married a Lincoln girl, Miss Clarice Breese, and he now lives in Honolulu.

They resided in Lincoln in 1908, 1910, 1911, and 1912. For some time, they made their home at Twenty-sixth and P streets, across from the Second Presbyterian church, where they had their church letters.

When persons question Mrs. Goodman about her brother, she answers that he used to say: "Yes, I am a Presbyterian. I have four Presbyterian sisters."

He lived according to the Ten Commandments, Mrs. Goodman says, tents his mother taught him. For years he wrote repeatedly to Mrs. Goodman, asking where they might be found in the Bible, as he would fail to remember. Finally she took the twentieth chapter of Exodus out of the Bible and sent it to him. He carried that in his pocket.

Was Spiritual Man.

"He was a spiritual man, even though people wonder about it, being a western showman, as he was. Many times he has written me, saying he wanted to come back to the mountains, where he felt close to God."

After the death of Mrs. Goodman's father, she remained in Kansas, caring for her mother, who was an invalid, and younger sisters. Her marriage took place there, and her children, six sons and one daughter, were born there. The children are now scattered from New York to Honolulu.

In 1885, Mr. and Mrs. Goodman came to North Platte, where they made their home on Scout's Rest, the ranch owned by Buffalo Bill. They remained there until a couple of years before Mr. Goodman's death in 1901.

"Those were beautiful days," Mrs. Goodman says.

"We entertained every one from royalty to cow boys. The Grand Duke Alexis came there, as well as many other members of royalty, the army, and persons famous in many walks of life. I could not begin to recall all the noted people who visited at Scout's Rest."

In Kansas, Mr. Goodman and Mrs. Goodman were guardians of the Cody children, after the death of the mother a few years after that of Isaac Cody. Mr. Goodman signed the papers permitting William F. Cody to enter the army at the time of the Civil war, as he was not eighteen.

One year after Mr. Goodman's death, Buffalo Bill persuaded his sister to go to Cody, Wyo., which he really organized and which is named in his honor. In Cody, Mrs. Goodman was proprietor of the Irma hotel, a hostelry of sixty rooms ,one of her brother's projects.

If you can run Scout's Rest, you can certainly run a hotel," he encouraged her.

William Cody helped to build the First Presbyterian church of Cody. On several occasions, he invited the first minister, Rev. W. O. Harper, who later held a pastorate in Nebraska, to travel with him for a vacation.

In 1922, Walter Goodman, then a captain in the army and stationed in California, sent for his mother to come to the coast. Since that time, she has not been in Cody.

After he was sent to Honolulu, where he resigned his commission and entered business, Mrs. Goodman remained in California. Two years ago she accepted the position of house mother for the Oneonta Military school at South Pasadena, and she can return to the work at any time she desires.

Before taking up the work, she went to Pittsburgh for six weeks to visit a cousin of her mother's, whom she met in the west. After spending the winter in the west, she returned to Cleveland for the Cody reunion, and since that time has spent most of her days traveling. Florida a couple of times, Iowa, Illinois, Ohio, New York, Detroit, for another reunion, and several other points have been on her itinerary for the last couple of years.

But now she is returning to her work. She wants to give all the real facts of the life of William F. Cody to the world, without fancy, exaggeration, or imagination. She was not satisfied with "The Last of the Scouts," and she hopes her books will provide a true biography of his life.

Wesleyan Notes

Chancellor I. B. Schrenckengast addressed the students of Nebraska Wesleyan university at the first convocation of the year last Wednesday morning in the Wesleyan auditorium at 10 o'clock. He emphasized the fact that no one has the right to seek larger truth unless he is willing to build his life on a larger line. "We should want enlargement and enrichment in our lives. Put yourselves in the right relation to great fundamental values and adjust yourselves to them. There are duties to be performed, important social relationships must be made. Take fundamental values first and then let others come along in their proper proportion." The chancellor introduced each new faculty member to the student body.

Dr. M. E. Gilbert has returned from an extensive trip into Wyoming. While on this trip he spoke in the Methodist churches of Scottsbluff, Gehring, Gordon, and Valentine.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Bogle and Harold Barnett of Pawnee City was a recent event in University Place at the home of the bride's parents. Chancellor I. B. Schreckengast performed the marriage ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Barnett have each attended Wesleyan and received their degrees, Mrs. Barnett receiving hers in 1924 and Mr. Barnett receiving his in 1925. Mrs. Barnett recently received an A. M. from the University of Nebraska, and Mr. Barnett has received an A. M. in science from the University of Minnesota where he was a graduate assistant in the division of biochemistry. Mr. and Mrs. Barnett will make their home in Valparaiso, Indiana, where Mr. Barnett is to be an instructor in the chemistry department at Valparaiso university.

Miss Mildred Krouch, '27, is teaching history in the Jackson high school at University Place.

The first football game of the season at Nebraska Wesleyan will take place September 24 with St. Regis college at Denver.

John Aikman, '17, a former professor of biology at Nebraska Wesleyan, has gone to Ames, Iowa, where he is a plant ecologist at the Iowa state agricultural college. Professor H. E. Alder, who was connected with the psychology department, will now be an instructor only in biology.

Dr. Harry A. Taylor, '05, returned to Lincoln after having attended the national convention of Phi Kappa Tau, which was held in Toronto, Canada, at "Big Win Inn," a national resort. He was re-elected grand president of the fraternity for the third consecutive year. In recognition of his efficient administration the fraternity presented him with a $250 watch. Roy Haggerty, '27, was a delgate of Upsilon chapter at Wesleyan.

Professor C. D. Rose left for Brockton, Mass., last week where week where he will make his home with his son Walter Rose. "Daddy" Rose had been connected with Nebraska Wesleyan for thirty-seven years. He was granted the title of professor emeritus in mathematics last spring by the trustees.

Professor G. A. Barringer, head of the department of history at Nebraska Wesleyan Wesleyan university, completed his graduate study at the University of Indiana at Bloomington, Indiana, this summer and has been awarded the degree doctor of pholosophy.

Goodies Are Barred To the Fat

Excess fat causes many constant self denials. Every day brings a new fight and only a small percentage gain in those ways what they seek. The real cause is left uncorrected.

Over 20 years ago medical science discovered a great cause of excess fat. It lies in lack of a substance which controls nutrition. A factor which Nature employs to turn food into fuel and energy rather than into fat.

Then that factor was embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. Now people have used them for two decades—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others. Today everyone can see that excess fat is nowhere near as common as it was. In almost every circle slenderness prevails.

The use of Marmola requires no abnormal exercise or diet, though moderation helps. Users simply take four tablets daily until they correct the cause. They know what they are taking, and why. The formula is given in every box, also the reasons for all results. Every user knows why the benefits come, and why they involve no harm.

You should try Marmola. Consider what it has done for so long, for so many. Watch what it brings to you in new beauty, new health and vitality. Learn the easy, pleasant, right way to a normal figure. As long as you live you may be glad that you found this scientific method. Order now—before you forget it. Do not wait.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

"LOVE"

Love is precious, Love is Divine,
God's gift to man is Live.
If Love is returned, the sunbeams shine
Just another Gift from Above.

Mistaken Love or one that is spurned
Breaks a heart that cannot heal.
Oh—if true Love were always returned,
No heartaches would we feel.

But it's uncertain, the best of us fall
A victim of gloom and despair.
I would like to sound a warning to all
"Sometimes it seems unfair."

It's the greatest thing there is on earth,
Quite treacherous it may be.
There is no way to value its worth,
'Though it's made a wreck of me.

Misfortune's come. There's no one to blame,
We should take it with a grin.
But advice is free, it's tough just the same
When I think "What might have been."

Yet what I lose is another man's gain,
Some one worthy than I.
I hope that he won't share my pain,
And their Love may never die,

There's a wound in my heart that will never heal,
The fondest hopes I've cherished,
Make former dreams now seem unreal,
My highest ideal have perished.

I hope that I may never care
For another. Then I'll know
That future heartaches I won't share,
Alone through life I'll go.

And when I'm gone no loved ones leave,
I will not love again.
Just friend, and they should never grieve,
The loss of another friend.

Many of the new frocks for Autumn and winter, display the one-sided effect in drapery as well as in neckline.

While the front drapery is possibly in the lead, some very distinctive gowns have a way of attining to both the front fullness and that of the one-sided siuhouette, the fullness of a set-on flounce across the front of the skirt furnishing the former, while elongated drapery adds the latter touch.

Art Element Essential in Home Decoration Says Mrs. Peterson

Mrs. A. O. Peterson of Omaha, art chairman for the Nebraska Federation of Women's clubs, has compiled the following article on "The Art of The Home":

"There are many people who have not, as yet, realized the value of art in relation to the home and the well-being of the family. To associate the word art with fine paintings and sculpture only is a common error. It may be related to everything that contributes to the physical or mental welfare of the family.

"A small income is no excuse for overlooking the art element. The simplest of homemade rugs on a painted or even a scrupulously clean, unpainted floor, a common table, a wooden rocker, dainty fresh curtains at the window and a bright bouquet of wild flowers may produce a more artistic effect than an effort to create an illusion of grandeur with cheap, ornate rugs and flashy overstuffed furniture.

"The art of the home means both interior and exterior decoration. Unlike Topsy, it will not 'just grow' but is the result of conscious, earnest, painstaking effort. Fortunately we live in an age when books and pamphlets offering good advice on these subjects may be had for little or no expense so that prospective homemakers need not depend upon their own untrained judgment. This is especially fortunate for the residents of rural communities and for farmers.

"On many of our Nebraska farms today there are homes as attractively designed and as charmingly landscaped as our city homes but there are still too many examples of the well-to-do farmer who gives more thought and consideration to the housing of his stock than to the housing of his family.

"Who has not seen farms where fine barns and out-buildings are given choice locations while the farm house is placed upon some bit of ground that is unsuitable or inconvenient for other purposes? This does not imply that this man loves his family less than the man who lives in the pretty house among the trees on the next farm, but it is a safe bet that the young folks congregate at the attractive home and that the boys and girls from the unattractive one leave home as soon as they are able to shift for themselves.

"If only for this reason, is not the art of the home worth while? The exterior may be almost a replica of every other house in the neighborhood but with careful thought and consideration, the interior may be as different as the hollyhock and the rose.

Create Artistic Interior.

"Perhaps the first and most important consideration in the creation of an artistic interior is that of the backgrounds—the walls and the floors. If economy must be practiced, let it be in the movable furnishings and not in these more permanent ones. The canvassed and painted wall is by far the most satisfactory and in the end the cheapest. It will not show cracks, will not fade and may be easily cleaned. By either glazing or stippling, beautiful effects may be obtained. If papers are used, let them be in plain effects as these are the most suitable for picture-hanging and contribute to the general effect of rest and quiet. Medium light colors in neutral tones of gray and tan are quite satisfactory. Floral stripes in bedrooms serve to establish color schemes and are both dainty and pleasing.

"Rooms which open together such as the living-room and dining-room if done alike will give a more spacious effect and a feeling of unity. This effect may be furthered by using the same curtains and draperies and the same rug designs. Dark papers are cramping in effect and are gloomy and depressing. The floors, being low, should be darker than the side walls, and vice versa; the ceilings, being high, should be lighter.

"With the walls and floors thus carefully planned, one may be allowed a wide latitude in the selection of the furniture. It is a mistake to try to furnish a house all at once. Plan carefully and select piece by piece. If possible, try each piece in the home befor buying. Oftn a piece most charming in the store may be a misfit in the environment of your home. The attractive, livable home suggests rest, peace and variety. It also suggests suitability. Fit the home to your family rather than the family to the home. Let simplicity, sincerity and suitability be the foundation upon which your decorative scheme is based, and you cannot go far astray, for these are the guiding principles of all great art."

Big Fund to Save Old 'Constitution' Reaches $424,000

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 16—(I. N. S.)—The campaign for funds for the "saving" of the Constitution, famous old Revolutionary war frigate, has passed the half way mark.

With a receipt of a check for $25,142.52 from the Chicago "Mayor Thompson committee to collect money to rebuild the Constitution," the fund reached a total of more than $424,000.

According to officials between three and four hundred thousand dollars more are still needed to restore the Constitution to her original condition.

When the work on the Constitution is completed the plans are for towing her about the Atlantic, Pacific and gulf coast.

The latest statement issued by the Constitution campaign fund committee read:

"Rear Admiral Andrews, chairman of the Constitution campaign fund committee, received a check for $25,142.52 from Chicago from "Mayor Thompson committee to collect money to rebuild the Constitution." This movement was an independent one started by Mayor Thompson and carried on by sale of Constitution buttons and donations.

"This check is the largest single amount towards fund and raises the total amount of money donated to over $424,000. This sum is insuffient and the sale of the Constitution pictures is still going on. Between $300,000 and $400,000 is still needed as the cost of restoring the Constitution to her original condition, with all masts, rigging and sails, furniture and all equipment is about $745,000.

"She will then be a seaworthy, sound ship, able to go anywhere with perfect safety. The plan still holds of towing her about the Atlantic, Pacific and gulf coast; and to the Great lakes after her rebuilding is completed."

Martel Banker Stops Argument Over School By Building New $5,000 Structure Himself

William H. Moore's way of "stopping an argument" was to erect this $5,000 school house on land purchased by himself and donate it to District 22.

And now that it is finished and occupied by 29 pupils and their teacher, Mr. Moore would drop entirely out of the picture.

"It is just a community affair," he explains to a questioner. "Lots of people furnished material and labor."

His reticence, in fact, would not allow him to sit for a newspaper photographer, and the portrait shown here was produced by Mrs. Moore.

The spick and span little structure pictured above is known simply as "Martel 22." The old school house in district 22 is now known as "Centerville 22." The latter is also in operation and has about 27 pupils. Both are managed and owned by the same school disrtict.

The old school house, at the other end of the district from Martel, had been crowded for some time. Fifty-three pupils attended there last year and that was too many for one teacher to handle. Talk of a new school naturally started. And naturally the residents at either end of the large district wanted the school near them.

Then Mr. Moore stepped in. He pledged $3,500 for the erection of a new building. By a vote of 99 to 42 the residents of the district agreed to accept his offer.

In just six weeks the new building was finished. It was modeled after another of similar type. Many persons, as Mr. Moore said, gave time and material. Earnest Frye of the school board was especially active in superintending operations and laboring. Mr. Moore's neighbors believe he has spent much more than his pledge.

The site is at the northwest corner of Martel. The grounds include one and a third acre purchased from Harvey Werger. Children from five farm homes attend there, as well as the children of Martel.

As a country school, the building is modern in every way. It has a full basement with furnace. Play equipment probably will be installed there. There is one main school room. Excellent light is furnished by northern windows. Along the south side are cloak rooms and a store room. The floors are of oak.

Mr. Moore was a founder of the Martel State bank twenty years ago and is now actively in charge as president and cashier.

John H. Brandt is chairman of the District 22 school board and Clarence Krueger is the other member. Miss Louise Horning teaches at the Martel school. Miss Charlotte Alexander, the county superintendent attended exercises at the school recently and spoke.

Beauty Preparations High In Russia as Government Increases Luxury Incomes

MOSCOW, Sept. 16—(INS)—Eau de Cologne at $100 a bottle retail, $50 for five ounces of ordinary perfume, lipsticks at $10 each, and $25 for a box of face powder—sounds like precious relics buried for centuries in the tomb of an Egyptian princess, but it's simply the price which a Russian beauty has to pay if she prefers to powder and paint a la Parisienne.

That doesn't mean that perfume and lipstick are unknown in Moscow. On the contrary, beauty aides of Russian manufacture are sold everywhere, and it might be added, liberally and effectively used, though communists frown upon personal adornment as "bourgeois" and the government encourages only factories manufacturing necessities of life.

Every once in a while some enterprising foreign manufacturer attempts to develop the Russian market. Two perfume salesmen from Milan blew into Moscow recently with a beautifully arranged, ten tray sample trunk containing all the luxurious toilet preparations which grace the dressing tables of modern American women, and for which many Russian women still long.

The customs official selected first a half-liter bottle of eau de Cologne and weighed it—125 rubles (87.50) import duty. The salesmen gasped and sputtered in Italian, French and Russian. They explained that the bottle usually retailed for around $2. That didn't mean anything to the customs officials who next took a small bottle of perfume—duty according to weight 85 rubles. Before he was half-way through the first tray the Italians abandoned hope, packed up their samples and sent them back home.

The soviet government stands firm against the importation of luxuries and the consequent expenditure of money outside the country. Nevertheless, French perfumes and powders actually are on sale in the shops, but the Russian women gaze longingly at the famous products they love so well, and then content themselves with the home manufactured.

Smoking by Women Booms Manufacture Of British Cigarets

NOTTINGHAM, Eng., Sept. 16—(I. N. S.)—Cigaret smoking by women is said to be responsible for the great increase in the output of cigarets by big Nottingham tobacco firms.

The increase amounts to millions of cigarets a week, and one result is that workers in the factories are on full time for the first time for years.

Does your daughter attend school regularly?

MANY GIRLS are absent from school for a few days each month because of illness. In many cases this is unnecessary because young girls — as well as older women — can be strengthened by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Girls suffering from run-down condition, sleeplessness, nervousness, and loss of appetite, should gain new strength and vigor from this Vegetable Compound.

The following testimonials show what the Compound has done for other schoolgirls.

NERVOUS AND DIZZY

Charleston, Illinois:— "I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She was nervous, weak and dizzy. At last she was so bad off that she was out of school for four months. The Vegetable Compound has improved her in every way and she has gone back to school. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be." Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

Remember this package. None genuine without the signature of Lydia E. Pinkham.

SICK AND WEAK

Camden, New Jersey:—"When my daughter was twelve years old she was hurt at the play-ground. She was sick and weak for some time after that and was not able to go to school regularly. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her wonderfully, and she now goes to school every day. She has gained in weight and has a better appetite than she had before taking it." Independence Gives Modern Women a Wide Choice In Life — One Man Believes the Elimination of Married Women Would Help Make Jobs Go Around.

The Protective Male.

"Does womankind want the love and protection of honest men? Do they want that love that has caused men to lay down their lives for home and family? Do they any longer cherish that love that has made men brave the hardships on prairia and desert?"

Those questions are asked by "Just Plain Jim," and I admit that he riles my sweet disposition. How about those women who braved the hardships on prairie and desert and bore children besides? And when it comes to laying down their lives — women have done their share of that. The only thing women are not seeking is "protection" that "Just Plain Jim" thinks mankind should offer. Human nature is the same. Women are learning two jobs these days—that of breadwinner as well as home maker. In the "good old days" of man's protection the wife and children were strictly up against it when death or accident removed their "protection." And now? Woman's efficiency enables her to be independent instead of the ward of the state, or forced to seek the protection of some male relative.

The woman of today scorned by "Just Plain Jim" has just one attribute her sisters of yesterday lacked — independence — and that is what hurts the protective male.

As for me, I proudly take my stand for that independence. It gives my sex a wider choice in life. It enables her to pick and choose among the men she meets instead of looking only for her bread and butter. And it gives her promise of earning her own way if need be. Oh yes, I'm for the independent business woman of the year 1927—whether "Just Plain Jim" likes it or not.

Let's have some other opinions.

Dear Minerva: May I say a few words? I am interested in this business woman's mess and women working in general.

I say let the women run the business. God knows that is all most of them are fit for. I for one man can say surely that modern women have lost the feminin appeal so deeply cherished by men for so many, many years. But why grieve over it? We men just have to buck up and meet them at their own game.

Does womankind want the love and protection of honest men? Do they want that love that has caused men to lay down their lives for home and family? Do they any longer cherish that love that has made men brave the hardships on prairie and desert. Do they any longer appreciate that love that makes men give their lives by inches at hard work every day toil that he might have a home and loved ones to go to at the end of the day? No, a thousand times, no. Women scorn the true, honest love and devotion of men. Look at the numbers of women who have written of "the best husband in the world, but I want to be free to do as I please." Womankind has permitted the libertine to cross the sacred threshold of man's home even where pictures of the most High and Holy hang on the wall.

The old romantic mystery is flaunted before the eyes of men in the same manner as the fine points are pointed out by the auctioneer who is selling thoroughbreds off the block. If Grandma wants to know anything about real life that in all her years she has been in ignorance of, she can obtain knowledge from any fifteen-year-old girl Talk about women nowadays caring about the love, the fine, true, proper lasting love of men, I'd say not and yet men, you may as well get reconciled to the fact. The only reason nowadays that women seek or permit, as the case might be, the companionship of men, is that nature gave unto them the desire for mating, a desire that unto themselves alone they cannot gratify. Hence they seek the companionship of men. Of course to the older and worldly wise, inasmuch as they have no self consciousness anyway, they have nothing to lose, but the younger ones who are not as wise as they imagine, get into trouble. But why worry about that?

So summing it all up, I say to all of womankind, go to it, make your money anyway you please and blow it on yourselves. Make fools out of all the men who are boobs enough to let you, but let me ask of you, please, you who are so great and powerful with good fat jobs, don't be so cruel to your less fortunate sisters. Let me tell you what happened to me only a few days ago. I had been looking for work, had not found any and had turned homeward. It was about eleven in the morning. I noticed a young girl standing on the curb ahead of me. She was watching the cars pass and why she approached me I do not know as there was a woman driving alone in the car ahead of me. But she beckoned for me to stop. I saw it was not that come-hither glance we men get almost on every hand so I stopped the car. She was carrying a suitcase and a bundle of other things besides. She said, "Please, mister, won't you let me ride? You are going the way I want to go and I am completely exhausted and it must be a long ways yet." I asked her where she was going and she gave me a street number about fifty blocks from there, so I said "Get in and I will take you." Her story was that she had lost her job, was broke, couldn't pay her room rent and the landlady had dumped her out. She told me she had walked constantly for two days and hadn't had a bite to eat, only three bnanas that a fruit peddler had given her that were spoiled on one end so he could-not sell them. She said she had a mother and a step-father in Omaha but they were both out of work and couldn't help her. The street number she was seeking was of some woman who had advertised for a maid and she was going to try her luck there. She was a girl with a good education too, had had two years in college and a complete business course in a good business college. I tried to give her some money but she wouldn't take it. I persuaded her to let me wait until she had applied for her job and at least take her back to town so she consented to that. She got the promise of a job there to go to work the next day, so I persuaded her to go to my mother's for the night and a good square meal. We found her a very interesting, worth while sort of girl as well as a beautiful one. She said that all the jobs were held down by married women and it was almost impossible to break in. She was very happy over getting even housework to do for a while, though she had never been reduced to that before. Isn't that a pretty mess? Just PLAIN JIM.

A. All honor to you for your sympathy and understanding of the plight of the unfortunate girl and your kindness to her. She needed a boost and you gave it to her. May she soon find the kind of work she is equipped for, the opportunity she wants and needs and deserves.

Elimination Might Help.

When "Just Plain Jim" stated his case from a "protective" standpoint, my disposition was not the sweetest, but when "Herbert" talks against the married woman in the business field, I understand his stand. He is seeking for a way to make the jobs go around and thinks the elimination of the well-to-do married women will help. However, I want to say just this. I see a great number of married women working, but it is because necessity drives them. I think those who are seeking easy pin money are in the minority.

Dear Minerva: Under the competitive system under which we live, labor is bought and sold like any other commodity. To carry on this system it is necessary to have a large reserve supply of unemployed labor at all times in order to compel them to sell their labor as cheaply as possible.

But is the present state of affairs the best that mankind can evolve? The competitive system with its resultant evils is with us to stay a long time, but we have not reached the apex of reform in our efforts to cure or alleviate the most exasperating features that deform the face of our present industrial ogre. Just as surely as the characteristics of the ape and the tiger are being bred out of the human race, just so surely will those features that mar our industrial and social life be cast into the limbo of forgotten things.

It might come as a shock to a few of the more thoughtful of the married ladies who have families and will persist in working away from home that I have been told recently by an official that seventy-five per cent of the trouble of children brought in for correction can be traced directly to the fact that mothers cannot devote the necessary attention to their children and work for somebody else at the same time. Herbert.

Interested In Church.

Dear Minerva: May I direct a few words through you to "A Seeker of Truth."

Your ideas on religion interest me. I am looking forward to the time when a number of us may get acquainted and form some sort of a "church," such as John Burrough and Luther Burbank, also Huxley, Darwin and others dreamed of. I would be pleased to hear from you. F. H. O.

A. If "Seeker of Truth" will send a self addressed envelope, I will be happy to forward him your address.

The Modern Eves.

Dear Minerva: I have been reading your Mail for the past few months and like it very much. You give such good answers.

So I am coming to you for an answer to my question. When a couple returns from a dance should the girl remain in the car until the boy makes the move to go home or should she get out of the car? My idea is she should let the boy make the motion to leave first. Am I right or am I wrong?

If a boy just asks for a date for one night and doesn't come back is it correct for the girl to ask him back? Or do you think if he wanted to come back he would ask for another date? Just Peaches.

A. It is the girl's privilege to fix the hour of separation after spending the evening with a boy. It is not good form to sit out in the car talking after reaching home. If it is early and you want to visit, ask the young man into your home, or at least on your porch.

If the boy desires a return engagement he will doubtless ask for it. But it is quite all right for the girl to mention that she hopes he will call again, if she does. I cannot quite reconcile myself to the modern method of the modern Eves asking the boys to take them out. I don't like it and neither does the average boy care for it. But to ask a boy to call, or to attend an evening party at her home is quite as it should be.

THIRD BIRTHDAY

Dale, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Markel, 4311 Baldwin avenue, celebrated his third birthday anniversary Sunday, September 4.

HASTINGS NOTES

A gift og $1.000 was recently donated to the college by a friend in California. The money will be used toward defraying the cost of the summer's campus improvements, which amounted to more than $10,000.

For the first time in the history of the school the 1927-28 freshman class held their election along with the other class elections without being molested by upper classmen. Formerly the freshmen election was a secret affair traditionally interrupted by upper classmen who attempted to prevent a quorum from congregating. The quietness of the election is the result of action taken last spring by the college council, a governing body of student and faculty representatives.

Upper classmen were victorious over the freshmen in the first annual Hastings college flag rush held Tuesday afternoon on the football practice field. The termination of the twenty minute fray marked the last chance for upper classmen to haul freshmen into the country for long walks back to the city, a form of initiation prevalent here during the first week of school.

Registrations have continued to the extent that the total number enrolled may yet reach 550, according to Registrar Gertrude Glassey. Last year's total enrollment, the largest previous to this year, was 539.

Election of cheer leader was to have been held Friday. Candidates whose petition had received the required number of signatures for nomination are: Ross Pyle, '30, Pawnee City; Herchel Jones, '30, Hastings, and Merwin Foote, '30, Hastings.

Attractive New Sorority and Fraternity Houses Are Added to Those Built within the Last Three Years on Nebraska Campus

ATTRACTIVE NEW HOME OF SIGMA NU FRATERNITY. - BUCKLIN.

LEFT: THIS DELIGHTFUL HOUSE WILL BE THE PERMANENT HOME OF THE ALPHA PHI SORORITY. - BUCKLIN.

BY LULU MAE COE.

The men and the women who spent their college days studying at rough pine tables with quaking legs, who clattered up and down squeaking stairs, and who scrambled for possession of a single antique porch swing are helping to provide those who come after them with English Windsor furniture, carpeting with the proper sort of lining, and tile terraces and loggias.

The financial support of the new homes of the fraternity and sorority groups at the university is divided between the active and the alumni chapters. The general plans are approved by both groups, but it is the group who lived in the house, even a very few years ago who supervises plasterers and painters, decorators, masons, electricians, plumbers, and carpenters, because it is that group who understands just what place a more comfortable home for the university students will mean to them.

Within the past year, about $260,000 has been spent for new permanent homes by the Greek organizations on the campus. That amount is in addition to an even larger sum expended for fraternity and sorority houses within the last three years. Of the houses that are new this year, three are now being occupied, one is under construction and will be occupied at Christmas, one is being remodelled, and the sixth will be started within a few weeks.

Three Houses In Use.

The Alpha Phi, Gamma Phi Beta, and Delta Zeta houses are in use at this time. The Sigma Nu house will be ready for use within four months, the Delta Chi house is being remodelled, and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity begins construction so that its house can be occupied by the second semester.

The Alpha Phi house has an interesting loggia, a new departure in fraternity houses, opening on a red tile terrace. The house, in the Georgian style, will face Fifteenth street, when it is opened, and is located at 1531 S street. Built of rough brick, the second and third floors are shuttered. French doors opening out of one living room balance the arches of the logia, and between the two is a stone seat with the sorority crest carved on the white stone panel above.

The entrance hall, with its blue and buff tile floor extends for two stories, and above each of the three arched doors opening into the living room are carved panels. The second floor space is broken with three Juliet windows, each with its gay little flower box. The open stairway leads from the hall to the second floor.

Walls of Georgian Green.

In the two living rooms, the paneled walls are of Georgian green. The light fixtures are of silver and gold gilt, the silver circle of the fixture edged with the gilt and hold a circle of lights, with a chain of prisms dropping from the silver tripod of the support. In the smaller of the two rooms, the north room, is a large fire place with travertine arch and back.

Opening out of the entrance hall is the cloak room for guests at house parties, with mirrors and lavatory accessories, and the telephone booth. Leading out of the east living room is a corridor, opening on the stairs for the basement and upper floors and the house mother's and guest rooms, with the adjoining bath done in Georgian green. On the first floor is the serving room for informal parties, with the dumb waiter coming from the kitchen.

The same blue and buff floor is used in the ground floor dining room and the chintz hangings carry out a similar color design. Off the dining room is the chapter room, which will also be used as a freshmen study hall. It has built-in book cases and a fire place. The laundry for the girls' small washings, the pantry, with capacious cupboards, kitchens, trunk room with double trunk racks, store room, maid's room with bath, and furnace room complete this floor.

Sixteen Bed Rooms.

The second floor has seven bed rooms and the third nine. The furniture on the second floor is walnut wiped with yellow and on the third walnut wiped with green. The beds and dressing tables are all alike, and each room has a built-in wardrobe, with closet space and drawers for each girl.

In each bath are steel lockers for each girl's toilet articles. The rooms have black and white tile floors, with gray tiled walls.

On the second floor is the upper class study room, with built-in tables. The floor also has an interesting features, the upstairs lounge. It is furnished in bright wicker, and provides a recreation place on the second floor for the girls outside of their rooms.

The new Gamma Phi Beta house, 415 North Sixteenth street provides accommodations for forty girls. It is typically Georgian colonial in its interior and exterior architecture. Its austere lines in rough brick have as their only decoration the wooden shutters, with the sorority crest cut in them on the first floor, and the half circle stoop, topped by an iron railing and upheld by four slim columns.

Interesting Fireplace.

Opening out of the small vestibule is the square entrance hall, with wrought-iron lighting fixture. From the hall, the visitor may look into the large living room, the wicker room, or through the French doors of the latter on to the terrace.

King's blue is the predominating color of the first floor drapes and hangings, and the curtains are of buff theatrical gauze. The texture walls are in old ivory. In the living room is an interesting Georgian fireplace with the black marble arch and ivory background.

A small tea room opens off the wicker room, which is an informal living room. It has comfortable chairs and a tea table for service. The woodwork is in walnut.

On the same floor, a short corridor leads to the matron's and the guest rooms. The latter is done in orchid and cream, and has its own bath.

The rooms on the second floor are done in the pastel shades of rose, green, lavender and yellow, and they are reached by a lovely Georgian staircase, with its wrought iron hand rail. The Gamma Phi house has no dormitory system, but the larger bedrooms, since no space is taken off for a dormitory system, are used for study and for sleeping. Each room is provided with twin beds.

Guests' Cloak Room.

The bath on each floor is tiled. Each one is provided with bowels, tubs and showers. In common with the new house construction, each floor is provided with its own telephone room, and the buzzer system is used.

At the head of the stairway leading to the ground floor is the cloak room for guests. On this floor is the chapter room and the dining room, done in green and gold, with the furniture enameled in the Georgian green. The pantries, double kitchens and attendant rooms are on this floor.

In the new Delta Zeta house, 626 North Sixteenth street, the entrance hall opens into an informal living room, furnished in taupe, which overlooks the east yard, and the formal living room, at the front of the house. The motif of the latter room is burgundy or grape. Heavy floor length drapes of burgundy hang over gold glass curtains. This room has a white stone fireplace.

On the south of this room is the music room, where the piano is placed in a bay window. This room is also furnished so that it may serve as an extra living room in case of need. All the rooms on the first floor have Tiffany blend walls, an old ivory background with a pastel mixture spread.

From the formal living room, one goes into a corridor leading to the upper floors' stairs and those for the ground floor and to the house mother's room. This room has a private bath and is furnished in walnut.

Room for 36 Girls.

The dormitories are on the second and third floors, and provide for thirty-six girls. The second floor is done in walnut and the third in green and white enamel. Each study room has two closets and ample drawer space for the members. The bath on each floor has two showers and a tub and the room is finished in white tile.

A lounging room, in yellow and blue, with glazed chintz hangings, is provided on the second floor. On the same floor is the president's room, a large room, with walnut furniture and a chaise longue. All the walls upstairs are in cream plaster, and the lighting fixtures are English, in the wrought iron. The guest room of the Delta Zeta house is on the second floor, and it has walnut furniture.

Above the third floor, which has one room for four girls, directly over that of the president's, is a large attic. The girls can put their hand luggage here, and can store many fraternity articles that are used only occasionally.

In the dining room on the ground floor, walnut Windsor furniture has been provided. The glazed chintz curtains are in green, and a piano

Mississippi May Be Controlled to Relieve Flood And Drouths Declares Prof. Mickey

"Mississippi river runoff can be controlled to provide water for agricultural production in a part of the arid and semi-arid great plains, provide water for power, sanitation, navigation of the Mississippi and its main tributaries, and at the same time relieve the lower Mississippi river valley of damaging flood conditions."

The above opinion that the two problems of drouth and flood control are naturally correlated is expressed by Prof. Clark B. Mickey, chairman of the civil engineering department of the University of the University of Nebraska.

Prof. Mickey has just prepared a statement in regard to drouth and flood control in response to a request of Congressman Willis G. Sears, who is also chairman of the Missouri-Arkansas Valley Congressional association.

Prof. Mickey's reply indicates that he thinks it is practical as an engineering propositionto control the Mississippi in such a way as to bring into production semi-arid soils, to utilize electric energy, provide navigation and lessen flood dangers. He says that such a project is too great an undertaking for any state or group of states and favors immediate adoption of a national policy of development of water resources.

Congressman Sears' Letter.

Congressman Sears' letter to Prof. Mickey, which is given below gives his views on drouth and flood control:

I am writing you this letter with the view of getting your opinion as a practical and an eminent engineer, on the subject of drouth and flood control.

For several years, I have been an enthusiastic believer in the withdrawing of as much water as possible from all of the streams across the semi-arid soil east of the Rocky mountains and placing it in those soils.

I have believed that in so doing the drouth of that semi-arid district would cease and the quantity of water so withdrawn would be an immense factor in controlling flood conditions of the southern Mississippi river. I have believed also that there would be a great stabilization of the rivers, resulting in less of flood flow and less of low water, so stopping the erosion of our soils and making navigation a practical thing on the affected rivers. I have believed with the drop to the east and south of the table lands and rivers—which is a number of feet to the mile—that engineeringly it is practical to throw the waters after being placed in reservoirs onto our table lands. I have believed that there are ample reservoir sites east of the mountains at which places dams could be built and all of the high waters be withdrawn and held back.

I wish you would give an opinion from your standpoint, as to whether these engineering features are practical and whether if put into perfected operation there would be a result of great aid to drouth and flood control.

I desire to use your letter for publication and present your views to interested ones of the entire territory affected by drouths and floods.

Statement By Mickey.

Prof. Mickey's reply follows:

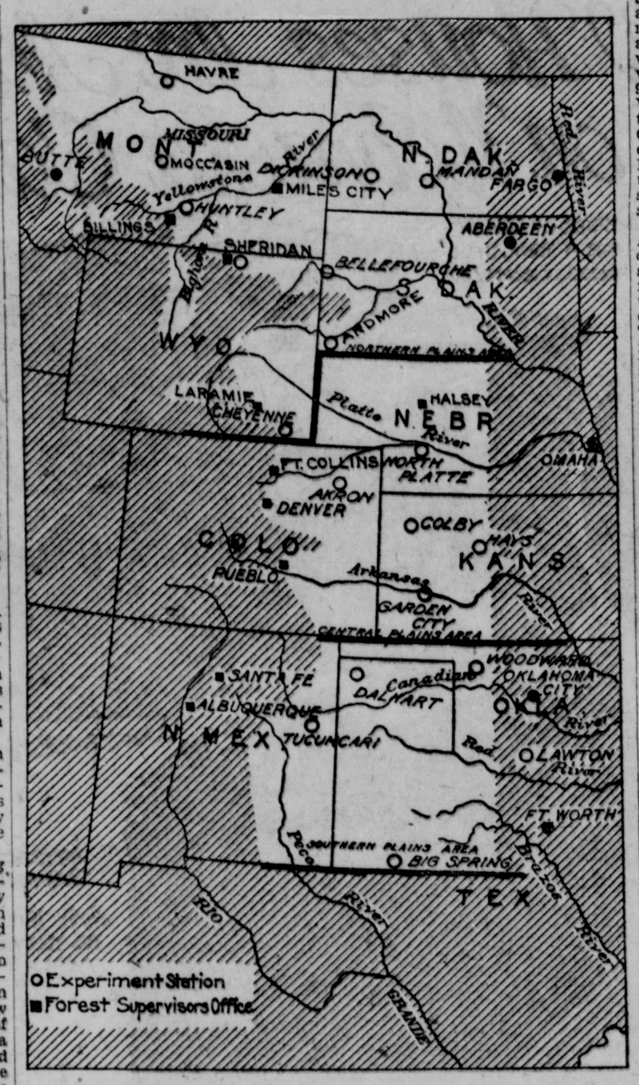

This nation, in fact the entire world, should be vitally concerned with our basic sources of wealth, land and water. These two sources of wealth, with the energy received from the sun and other planets, furnish each nation as well as each individual with the material things that have to do with our prosperity and sustenance—food, water, clothing, heat, comfort, etc. They are not only essential to our very existence, but are taken for granted by the average person as he goes about in his daily routine of work and play, until suddenly a catastrophe occurs, such as the recent floods in the Missouri-Mississippi drainage basin, resulting in so great a loss of life and property that the people are stirred to action. Then we as a nation and as individuals realize that one of our great sources of wealth suddenly served, utilized and controlled would continue to be a great asset in place of causing a natural series of floods happening at more or less regular intervals of time.

If we wish to "cure a river of flood conditions," we must of necessity diagnose the causes which result in devastating flood damages to life and property. The earth's surface is composed of approximately 75 per cent of water and 25 per cent of land. More than one-half of the land surface is either too cold or too rocky to support agricultural plant growth. A major portion of the remaining 12½ per cent is so humid and tropical that it cannot be used at present, while a great portion is too arid for profitable agriculture. With these things in mind, it becomes very evident that water is our greatest resource, and that this resource must be properly conserved, or put to work, if we expect to continue to improve and develop our natural resources so essential to our material progress as a nation.

In Nebraska we are more vitally concerned with the Missouri-Mississippi drainage basin. The problems which we must solve in developing agriculture, industry and transportation in this great drainage area are not local in their aspect. This basin is drained by the Mississippi river and its tributaries and comprises that area in the United States bounded on the east by the Appalachian divide, on the north by Canada and the Great lakes, and on the west by the Rocky Mountain divide. It provides drainage for a large portion or all of the following twenty-six states, Montana, North Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, North Carolina, Missouri, Alabama, and Kansas. The problems relating to the development of this drainage basin are national as well as local in their influence and benefits. They are national in that the development of the features of water supply, sanitation, power, irrigation, navigation, flood control, etc., are correlated in such a way that people living outside of those developments are actually benefited. These indirect benefits accrue through financing, reduced cost of living, food supplies, transportation, power, etc.

Area Thought Inhabitable.

In studying the history of this Great basin, we find that Lieut. Z. M. Pike in 1805 and 1807, in speaking of the "Great American desert" bounded on the east by the Missouri river, stated that "From these immense prairies may be derived one great advantage to the United States; namely, the restriction of our population to some certain limits, and thereby a continuation of the union. Our citizens being so prone to rambling and extending themselves on the frontier, will, through necessity, be constrained to limit their movements to the west to the borders of the Missouri and the Mississippi, while they leave the prairies, incapable of cultivation, to the wandering and uncivilized aborigines of the country.

The great plains region shown in map above could all be made very productive by proper utilization of the Mississippi river run-diff according to Prof. C. E. Mickey. This drouth prevention would also help a great deal in solving the Mississippi river flood problem.

But since Lieut. Pike and others of equal prominence made statements similar to the above, a portion of the great plains region has been brought into agricultural production by means of "dry farming" methods, and in some instances by adding irrigation water to supplement the meager rainfall. The Missouri-Mississippi basin contains great possibilities for further agricultural development and increased production, providing we store, utilize and control our water resources. Its location, climate, and natural conditions are ideal for an agricultural country. If we properly husband and utilize its precipitation, runoff, and fertile soil, it is destined to become one of the "granaries of the world."

The runoff or water discharge in any drainage basin results from precipitation of moisture within the basin. In other words, it is the precipitation which falls in the basin less the loss from transpiration and evaporation. This runoff or water discharge is continually flowing from the higher elevations to the lower elevations, until it arrives at the ocean level through the mouth of the stream draining the basin. It is therefore evident that the amount of water drained, and the rate of water drained, or the runoff from a basin by a stream depends upon climate, character of precipitation, topography, soil, etc. Steeper slopes drain more rapidly than shallow slopes. Rocky soil has a greater runoff and less loss by evaporation than level agricultural land. Higher precipitation causes greater runoff. Great intensities of precipitation cause more runoff than the same amount of precipitation over a longer period of time.

Causes of Floods.

Flood conditions in the Mississippi river valley are the result of:

1. Draining of the melted snowfall from the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains and the western slope of the Allegheny mountains, which causes a maximum discharge during the early summer months; and,

2. By heavy precipitation, largely confined to that part of the basin drained by the upper Mississippi, Ohio, and Arkansas rivers. This precipitation occurs during the summer months.

When conditions are such that runoff due to the two above causes is greater than can be accommodated by the natural channel, we have a condition of flood. This is not an ideal condition. If a curve were plotted showing as ordinates the rate of discharge or runoff in cubic feet per second and the month of the year for abscissao, one would observe that the major portion of water passing down these rivers runs off during the months of May, June and July. During the remaining months, there is not sufficient water to keep the channels properly supplied.

It is my opinion that to control and utilize the runoff or discharge of the Mississippi river, we must control the discharge of each of its tributaries, i. e., the upper Mississippi, the Ohio, the Missouri, the Arkansas and the Red rivers. In order to so regulate the discharge of those tributaries that there shall be no flood conditions in the valleys we must retard the flow of the water where the slopes are greatest and at the same time sped up or increase the carrying capacity of the channels in the lower part of the valley where the slopes are small. This would mean

1. The building of reservoirs and diversions to store water in the upper valleys, and

2. Channel improvements resulting from artificial lining, levees, and straightening in the lower portion of the valley.

To Regulate Stream Flow.

The building of great reservoirs for the storage of water in the upper part of valleys would provide means for regulating stream flow, and at the same time provide water storage for the development of power, and for use in sanitation, water supply and irrigation. If the great plains region west of the Missouri river could be irrigated, the irrigation itself would provide a large natural soil reservoir, tending to equalize the natural flow of the Missouri river. In fact, the flow of the Platte river has shown a tendency to become more uniform since the installation of the Cheesman dam on the South Platte river, and the Pathfinder and Guernsey dams on the North Platte river, and the irrigation made possible by these improvements. There are a large number of possible sites for suitable reservoir capacity which could be used to control the discharge of the Missouri and its tributaries. This would prevent the present May, June and July heavy discharges of the Missouri river. It would not only stabilize the flow of the Missouri river, but it would make possible the development of irrigation to supplement the 10 to 20 inches of annual rainfall over the vast, fertile great plains area. This would bring into annual and stabilized agricultural production a vast area of fertile soil now yielding one full crop in five to twelve-year periods. It will also make possible the development of electric energy, navigable inland waterways, as well as providing the means for reclamation and flood control.

It is my opinion that it is practical as an engineering proposition to control the discharge of the Mississippi river in such a way as to bring into production a vast area of semi-arid soil, and at the same time utilize electric energy, provide navigation in the channels, and flood control. It is therefore evident that a large percentage of the improvements necessary to control the flow of the Mississippi river, thus preventing flood conditions in its valleys, can also serve the great plains country, by providing water for irrigation, power, navigation, water supply, etc. In other words, these improvements would result in mutual advantages to all the states within the Missouri-Mississippi drainage basin. Such a project would be too great an undertaking for any locality, state or small group of states to successfully solve. The water appropriations, the economics, ownership, financing, benefits, etc., are national in their character.

I am firmly of the opinion that it is imperative that the United States should not only adopt but should initiate and carry out a national policy for the development of our water resources if we expect to maintain our agricultural and industrial position with reference to the other world powers. It is true that our progress as a nation has been marked with success, but the time has come when we must increase our agricultural and industrial growth. The density of our population as well as our relation to the other powers is such that we must plan to put our great resources to work. Some of the things which make this imperative at the present time are an expected increase in our own population of 45,000,000 in the next twenty-five years; economic distortions in agriculture and industry due to variation in rainfall and runoff, changes in freight rates and other means of land transportation, etc. Our land must produce more food, our industries must produce more commodities, and our inland transportation must have developed waterways in conjunction with highway and railway transportation.

National Policy Imperative.

As a nation, it is our imperative duty to adopt a national policy for developing our water resources in each of our drainage basins. At present, we have 11,000,000 horse power developed with a possible 55,000,000 horse power in our streams and rivers. Of our 25,000 miles of possible inland waterways, probably less than 7,000 are really modernized or connected in such a way as to result in the greatest benefit. We also have 30,000,000 acres of fertile soil which can be reclaimed by irrigation and drainage. The Mississippi system itself will provide a modern inland waterway transportation system of some 9,000 miles, serving twenty states. We could have a north and south trunk line from Duluth through Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico, and east and west from Pittsburgh to Kansas City, as well as connecting the channels of the upper Mississippi, Cumberland, and Arkansas streams.

Russia, Germany, Switzerland, Austria and France are examples of European countries making rapid strides in controlling their water resources. They are each working under a national policy or plan, extending over a period of years. Their ultimate aim is to control the flow of their streams, attempting to produce a regular discharge throughout the year. They are providing large reservoirs in the headwaters of their streams, and channel improvements in the lower valleys. The reservoirs are used for irrigation, water supply, power and river control.

Finally, it is my personal opinion that the Mississippi river runoff can be controlled in such a way as to provide water for agricultural production in a part of the arid and semi-arid great plains, provide water for power, sanitation, navigation of the Mississippi and its main tributaries, and at the same time relieve the lower Mississippi river valley of damaging flood conditions. These two problems of drouth and flood control are not only inseparable, but they are naturally correlated.

NEW HOMES OF GREEK SOCIETIES

stands in one corner of the room. On this floor are the chapter room, serving room, a light green tinted blue, maid's room, storage room, trunk room, and kitchen.

Curving Flagstone Walk.

The Delta Zeta house is of English construction. The first story is of rough gray-tan stone, and the second is half-timbered on tan stucco. A curving flagstone walk leads to the house, which has an entrance stoop. On one side is the sorority crest and on the other a typical English lantern.

A different type of house is that of Sigma Nu, which has selected the Italian Renaissance. It is built of light colored face brick, with Carthage stone trim. Arches predominate in the front elevation, and they are trimmed with stone tile. Topping the front is the fraternity crest in carved stone. The house, for which George Spooner of Council Bluffs is architect, and John Alexander is contractor, has a red tile roof. The house is fireproof, with steel frame and casement windows.

Entrance into the living hall is made through a loggia, with a brown quarried tile floor. An arched opening, with a wrought-iron grill on each side, divides the living hall from the living room.

The living room, 21 by 30 feet in size, has a mauve concrete beamed ceiling, and a large stone mantel. On the same floor is the library, 15 by 32 feet in size, the commander's room, a bath, and a porte cochere entrance hall.

Room for Forty Men.

On the ground floor is the chapter room ,with a small stage. The kitchens, dining room, boiler room, servants' quarters, storage rooms, trunk rooms, and trophy hall are on the same level.

The house is suitable for forty men. The dormitories are on the second and third floors. On each floor are ten double study rooms.

The stairway to the second floor opens out of the living hall. It is a Keramik stairway, with a wrought-iron hand rail. The first floor is done in oak.

For the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house, for which Miller and Craig are architects, the sturdy English style will be used. The new huose, to be erected at Sixteenth and U streets, will have skinteled brick work, a novelty in this vicinity, and rough half timbering. It will be in the square style of the English construction, with variagated slate roof.

Slate Terraces Planned.

Over the entrance will be hand-carved verge boards, and it will be trimmed with Mankato stone. The crest will be carved in a wooden beam above the door, and it will also be topped by a row of grotesques. The windows on each side of the door will be of leaded glass with amber rondels. Slate terraces are planned for the front and rear of the house.

In the living room will be a huge fireplace, with a carved oaken beam. The ceiling will be plaster board. The stairs, leading from the living room to the upstairs floors, will have a carved oak balustrade. The library, the house matron's room, guest room, coat room, and a bath will also be features of the first floor.

The second and third floors are planned for twenty-eight men, with fourteen double study rooms on each floor. Dormitories are used, and there is one on the south side of each floor. Each room has a tiled lavoratory. A private telephone booth will be installed on the second and the third floors.

On the ground floor are the dining room and kitchens. The dining room ,21 by 33 feet in size, will have a fireplace, tile floor, and rough wooden beam ceiling. The storage rooms, pantries, and servants' quarters will be arranged here.

Members of Delta Chi fraternity purchased the John B. Wright home at 1421 H street, and have remodeled it for their use. The work is being done by the B. J. Jobst building company.

The old front porch and the largest portion of the rear porch have been removed, and a terrace has been added at the front. The entire exterior has been scraped, the bricks repointed, and it is to be painted an ivory cream.

A two story addition has been erected on the east side, 20 by 20 feet in size. It increases the size of the living room, which has the lovely arched ceiling and a large stone fire place. New floors will be laid in the living room, music room, and dining room. The latter room has also been enlarged.

On the second floor, three study rooms and a large dormitory have been added. The dormitory is supported by steel columns and beams. New showers and lavoratory facilities have been added on this floor.

University Notes

The Memorial Hall, to be a part of the northeast section of the campus, will be laid out this year, Chancellor Burnett announced in his radio address. The last of the northeast section of the campus, will be laid out this year, Chancellor Burnett announced in his radio address. The last of the small frame dwellings near Thirteenth and U streets is to be removed, and the Mall will be laid out from the stadium east to Fourteenth street. The next new building to be erected on the city campus will be a structure to house the college of dentistry, the department of modern languages, and the department of English. The Dental college, which is now in rooms in a downtown building at Thirteenth and P streets, will occupy the entire third floor of the new campus structure.

Two new instructors have joined the staff of the department of physical education for women. Miss Beatrice Richardson, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and a pupil of Marjorie D'Houbler, will be in charge of creative dancing, succeeding Miss Dorothy Simpson, who will do post graduate work this year at the University of Wisconsin. The vacancy in the department left by the resignation of Miss Mary Wheeler will be filled by Miss Kerstin Thorin, a graduate of the Royal Gymnastic Institute of Stockholm, Sweden, and a pupil of Nils Bukh of Ollerup, Denmark. Miss Thorin came to this country two years ago, and taught at the University of Illinois before coming here. Miss Wheeler will be director of the department of physical education for girls in one of the Chicago high schools.

Two hundred and fifty freshmen in the college of engineering were taken on a tour of the downtown and agricultural compuses Wednesday. They visited places of interest on both campuses and had lunch at the agricultural college student activities building. Six chartered busses transported the freshmen from the city campus to the farm.

A new member of the college of engineering faculty is Paul A. Cushman, who takes over the work of Prof. L. S. Eaton as associate professor of mechanical engineering. Mr. Cushman comes from the University of Arkansas. Professor Eaton has returned to the Philiipine Islands as professor in the University of Manila.

Miss Elizabeth Woodbury, who was graduated from the dramatic department of the school of fine arts in June, has been appointed head of the dramatic department at Virginia college in the Blue Ridge mountains.

Miss Mariel Jones, an accredited teachers of music affiliated with the school of fine arts, will study in Europe this fall.

Dr. Winifred Hyde of the philosophy department was expected to return to Lincoln Saturday or Sunday from a motor trip through the East. She was delayed at Stratford, Wis., by the death of her aunt.

Joy Paul Guilford, a graduate of the philosophy department, was married September 8 to Miss Ruth Sheridan Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Burke of South Bend, Ind. Mr. Guilford received his doctor's degree at Cornell University and was an instructor in psychology there and at the University of Illinois before ac accepting a position this year at the University of Kansas. He was graduated from Nebraska in 1922.

The university museum has one specimen which came to Morrill hall of its own power. It is a tiny prairie cottontail rabbit which was found dead in the museum library Monday. The animal was mounted and placed in a showcase.

A motion picture descriptive of Holland will be shown at the museum lecture room, lower floor of will be completely mounted in a few days. A composition representation of the animal as it probably appeared will be placed behind the fossil skelton, so the visitor may observe all details of the animal's anatomy.

All of the members of the department of political science taught or were engaged in research work during the summer. Dean Herman G. James, chairman of the department taught at Northwestern University, and afterwards motored to Washington, D. C. and to his former home at Austin, Tex. Prof. L. E. Aylsworth taught during the first session of summer school at the University of Wyoming, and second session at Nebraska. Dr. Norman L. Hill taught here during the first term and then did research work in libraries at Chicago and Cleveland, preparing several articles on international law for publication. Dr. J. P. Senning attended the Commonwealth Conference at Iowa City where questions of municipal administration were considered, and also attended the meeting of the national executive council of the American Political Science association. Later he motored through northern Minnesota and the national forests to Port Arthur.

Dr. C. M. Kneier is a new member of the department of political science, as assistant professor. He was granted the degree of doctor of philosophy at the University of Illinois, where he taught for three years. He taught last year at the University of Texas. He is the author of a book, "State Regulation of Public Utilities in Illinois," published by the University of Illinois press.

With a normal registration of approximately 200 students, classes in the teachers college high school will start Monday. The new principal and director of teacher training is W. H. Morton, formerly superintendent of schools at Beatrice. The high school serves as a laboratory for university students in the teachers college, and is accredited in all colleges in the North Central association, which embraces the Missouri Valley.

W. P. Riddlesparger, who took a master's degree in political science here in the summer of 1926 and who taught in the department last year, has been appointed instructor in political science at the Ogden state agricultural college.

Gordon D. Shipman and George Bowers have been appointed fellows Morrill hall, Sunday afternoon.

Miss Elizabeth Dolan, New York artist who is doing the mural paintings for backgrounds of museum specimens, will go to Ainsworth this week to make sketches of the landscape which will be her working models for the murals. Miss Dolan has completed three panels of the murals in Elephant Hall, where the museum's largest specimens will be mounted. One of the smaller specimens, a two-horned rhinoceros, in the department of political science, and Lawrence L. Durisch has been appointed to a scholarship. All are of Lincoln.

The full semester summer teaching schedule for senior students at the college of medicine in Omaha has been pronounced a success by Dean J. Jay Keegan after its first trial this year. Twenty-eight students were enrolled in the summer session, which began May 30 and ended September 17. This schedule allows the senior students to complete their work in February, 1928, instead of June.

"It may sometimes appear that outside affairs are consuming the university students' attention, but that is only because they are more spectacular," declared Acting Chancellor E. A. Burnett in a radio address over the university's broadcasting station through KFAB Friday afternoon. "A student in the University of Nebraska must study or he cannot remain in the institution," Chancellor Burnett continued. "There are just as many fine high-minded young people as ever."

Hastings to Dedicate Airport.

Hastings is making plans to have an airport and to help guide airplanes that may pass over the city or land at the field. To this end signs are to be placed on the tops of the larger buildings by Alder-Allyn post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The photo shows the marker in place on top of one of the large stores. It is shaped like the roof of a house with a one-half pitch, 12 feet wide and 36 feet long, the letters being 4 feet by 8 feet. It is estimated they can be seen at 3000 feet. A large arrow painted white against the black background of the sign points the direction. It is 14 inches wide and 10 feet long.

Hastings is going after an airport and hopes to have it ready to dedicate in late October, with Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh a guest of honor and giving the dedicatory address. Efforts already are under way to have the distinguished flier visit the Adams county seat while he is a guest here, after finishing his tour of the states.

Members of the Adler-Allyn post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the junior division of the chamber of commerce are placing signs on top of the buildings, preparatory to establishing the field. The post also is sponsoring the setting up of the airport. The signs are financed by the Hastings chamber of commrce as will be the airport.

In pushing the airport for Hastings the V. F. W. has adopted the slogan: "Hastings in the air, Hastings Everywhere."

During the past week a committee was in Lincoln, conferring with aviation promoters concerning the establishment of the airport. While here they visited the two airplane factories, and the landing fields. Assistance of the manufacturers will be asked in selecting a site in Hastings.

Now Comes CORN — Bringing Renewed Prosperity

Out in the country now, any direction, anywhere in the Lincoln territory—

CORN!—
—miles and miles of money-bearing corn stalks—
—bringing to farmers relief from accumulated loans and debts, and putting money in the banks—
—meaning relief and prosperity to the banker and town retailer—
—and, trickling in through regular channels of business, this money finds its way to Lincoln and other important cities of Nebraska great South Platte territory
—Corn, the pinch hitter of 1927!

Let These Facts Speak for Themselves

CORN PRODUCTION

State—	1926 Yield.	1927 Yield.
Kansas	57,299,000	171,693,000
Nebraska	139,470,000	261,446,000
Oklahoma	61,178,000	78,000,000
Missouri	176,011,000	158,058,000
Iowa	435,000,000	341,272,000
	868,958,000	1,010,466,000

The 1926 crop brought the equivalent of much less than $1 per bushel, while indications now promise $1 or more average for the 1927 crop.

When is the corn crop marketed?

Government figures give this distribution of corn marketing over the fall and winter months:

September	6.9%	December	12.7%
October	6 %	January	13.4%
November	7.4%	February	11.6%

Now comes CORN bringing renewed prosperity

CORN money from a now promising mammoth crop will soon start pouring into Lincoln and other Nebraska trading centers.

While other corn producing sections are lagging in production and the total corn belt yield seemingly the lowest in fifteen years....with corn prices thirty cents or more higher than a year ago....the Lincoln territory and Nebraska enters September with the promise of one of the big corn yields of history's mammoth crop! A mammoth value!

Look right around us. Just now we are beginning to realize the facts of our 1927 farm situation, the combination of varied farm incomes in the Tenth Federal Reserve District will make the fall and winter one of the most prosperous seasons since the war.

Says a Chicago forecaster closely in touch with farming and livestock conditions: It is probable that farm trade during the coming winter will be the best since 1919-1920.

Nebraska almost doubled its wheat production this year over last, and sold it at a higher price. It is producing 218 million bushels of corn as against 139 million bushels last year....and will get a better price for it. Nebraska farmers are experiencing a degree of prosperity not known for many years.

Corn is the great stabilizer, the supply of which afects prices of all other important farm products, notably livestock.

Now comes corn bringing renewed prosperity to Nebraska....a wonderful crop that has created from the soil hundreds of millions of dollars of new wealth....provider of a a new prosperity that during the fall and winter will affect the welfare of every manufacturer, every wholesaler, every retail merchant, and professional man.

Now comes corn!

M'ADOO'S WITHDRAWAL.

Announcement by William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury under Woodrow Wilson, and a candidate for the democratic nomination for president in 1924, that he would not again seek the honor in the convention struggle of 1928 will do much to clarify the political situation in his party.

It was a wise and sensible move on Mr. McAdoo's part.

Granted that he might have commanded a formidable following among the delegates to the national convention, there is not the remotest possibility that he could win the nomination. Throughout that long and exhausting struggle in 1924, Mr. McAdoo had his maximum strength. If anything he would be weaker now than he was then, because a very large element of the democratic party feels the McAdoo feud has gone far enough, and included in this are democrats who were not openly hostile to the former secretary of the treasury three years ago.

To conduct a primary campaign on a nation-wide scale, as it would be necessary for Mr. McAdoo to do, if he expected to get anyplace at all, would require a large expenditure of money. And then the labor involved in perfecting an organization, and in assuming leadership of that organization, imposes a most severe physical strain upon one. For his troubles Mr. McAdoo certainly recognized that he would take a beating, and at the same time create a condition, which, as he says, would insure continued impotency of the party to which he owes allegiance.

This voluntary retirement of Mr. McAdoo from the list of potential presidential candidates is the most hopeful development which has taken place in the muddled and confused affairs of the party since the debacle of 1920, which was repeated in 1924.

There was more to the struggle between the McAdoo and Smith forces in the last democratic convention than a difference upon fundamental issues. Mr. McAdoo, it is true, represented the so-called "dry" wing of the party and Al Smith was supposed to be the leader of the "wets."

The fight between these two men developed into personalities.

There was an implacable, unyielding, irreconcilable hostility on the part of the McAdoo men to anything that smacked of Al Smith and the same deep-seated, bitter, uncompromising determination to sacrifice party and issues for the sake of defeating McAdoo on the part of the Smith faction. No angel of conciliation and peace could have stamped out the hatreds which had been engendered. John W. Davis, the compromise nominee, made a brave, courageous attempt but he was doomed to failure before he started, and the vote demonstrated how impossible was his task. The passing of three years has not healed these sores in anyway. The wounds are as bad as they were in the heat of battle, and the injection of McAdoo's personality in the 1928 campaign would have doomed whatever faint hopes the democrats may have.

Mr. McAdoo's decision was as patriotic as it was intelligent.

His action in removing himself from the contest is a distinct step toward restoring harmony within the party.

What may be Governor Smith's mind in connection with his candidacy remains yet to be revealed. There have been hints that Smith would likewise announce that he would not actively seek the nomination. At the same time it must be recognized that the Smith candidacy comes before the country again in an entirely new light as a result of developments in the last few days. The statement by United States Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska that he, a dry republican, would prefer Smith to a dry conservative republican, has done much to draw the spotlight to Smith's accomplishments in the line of sane, progressive government. It is not the first time that Norris has been aligned with Smith in fighting the reactionary faction of the republican party. The Nebraskan joined with Senator Walsh, ex-Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and Smith in waging war upon the power trust in New York.

This amazingly strange partnership of Smith and Norris is prophetic with respect to future political developments. Both men regard the power issue of supreme importance.

For the time being this much is of consequence. The democrats have gotten rid of one of the sore spots. Their next concern should be to prepare a sane and intelligent program to present to the voters. A campaign of negation and criticism cannot win elections in the face of business conditions. It is time the democrats adopted a recognized constructive attitude toward the problems which perplex the nation instead of snapping at the heels of the republican party.

UNITED STATES IN THE LEAD.

The people of the United States have been led to believe within the past year or two that the countries of Europe are away ahead of this one in the matter of commercial aviation. As a matter of fact, however, the United States is in advance of any European country in this branch of human endeavor, provided of course, the term "commercial aviation" means the navigation of the air on a paying basis.

To be sure the countries across the Atlantic have been carrying passengers, freight and express in greater numbers and quantities than we have, but they have not been carrying on a commercial business as that term is understood here. Luft-Hanza, the great German air corporation, only derives from its traffic half of the cost of operation, the government making up the deficit. The British Imperial Air service receives from its government $50 subsidy for every passenger it carries.

Contrast these conditions with those existing in the United States. The government established the air mail service, extending from coast to coast and demonstrated its feasibility. Then, with the business a "going concern," it has let the mail contracts to responsible corporations, which are in position to take on the passenger and express business, and which have done so.

Subsidies are strictly out of favor with the people of the United States and instead of providing them the government supplies landing fields, lighted airways, weather reports and air regulation, just as it has from the beginning provided harbors, lighthouse service and regulation for water traffic. If those who desire to engage in the business cannot make it pay with such assistance as this they will be compelled to give way to others or the country will do without the service. If it is not sufficiently popular to make it remunerative, there is no crying demand for it.

But there is every indication that it will pay. Europe is subsidizing its air service so that it may always have a supply of pilots available in case they should be needed for war or other purposes, but it is improbable that there will ever be a shortage in this country. The commercial flying schools are doing good work along this line, as are the army, the navy and the reserves. That these men are the peers of any in the world, has been amply demonstrated.

Americans would seem to be fully justified in considering their method the best.

CORN PRICES.

Although corn prices have suffered a sharp setback in the last week, they are still much above the level of last spring.

On the Chicago cash market, March 15, No. 3 yellow, sold for 69½ cents and No. 4 yellow for 63 to 65 cents a bushel. On the Chicago market Thursday, No. 3 yellow was quoted at 93 to 93½ cents a bushel. That is 24 cents a bushel more than the farmers received for their corn in Chicago five months ago.

Continued favorable weather for the development of corn in the great corn-raising states will probably precipitate a still further decline in prices. How much this drop will be no one can say but should frost hold off until prospects in Iowa and Illinois, which have been most dismal, should improve most appreciably, it is likely to be considerable. And yet, if the agricultural authorities of the two states are to be believed, there is no possibility of a normal crop in either Iowa or Illinois. It is said upon authority there is corn in both states which will not mature regardless of what weather conditions prevail. That furnishes the basis for the assurance that the farmer will receive a good price for his corn during the winter months.

In that event Nebraska farmers will be most fortunate for it is certain this state will harvest one of the largest, if not the largest crop of corn ever raised in the state.

FOXY MR. HOWELL.

For once in his long political career, United States Senator R. B Howell of Omaha finds himself in the position of the gentleman who worked his way out on a limb and then proceeded to saw it off.

In his customary pose of a friend of the people, Mr. Howell came back from Washington and became involved in the street car fight which is underway in Omaha over the question of renewing the franchise of the public utilities' corporation which operates the street car system. That has been "duck soup" for Mr. Howell in the past. He liked nothing better than an opportunity to lambast the corporations in the interest of the downtrodden and the oppressed. So Mr. Howell took the position of opposing the renewal of the franchise although admittedly it would precipitate a most serious situation for the company which furnishes Omaha street car service.

With its bonds maturing at the same time its franchise expires, the Omaha company must secure a renewal of its rights to the streets in order to refinance itself. When it was suggested that failure might force the company into a receivership, Mr. Howell brushed that aside with the declaration the receivership could be operated more economically since it would not be necessary to pay dividends upon the outstanding stock. That is where he stirred up the hornet's nest. A great deal of the stock is owned locally in Omaha in small blocks. And Mr. Howell's indifference to the interests of the stockholders raised a mighty howl from many who had been his devoted followers.

Mr. Howell has not succeeded in squaring himself to date.

He has been trying to make people forget but he has not been conspicuously successful. Then to heap coals on the fire his advocacy of a free bridge is not exactly a ten-strike with many of the property owners who are now claiming taxes are too high. Altogether Mr. Howell could have spent a much more satisfactory vacation far from the scene of his initial triumphs.

THE MODERN EVANGELINE.

Longfellow told of a maiden, who was wondrously gentle and fair, but then, it must be admitted, he was writing of another generation than 1927.

How would America's beloved poet have extolled the maidenly charm of that young girl, who, visiting New York City last week on a vacation trip, lost $1,800 in cash and jewels to two young men, but, undismayed, visited the tenderloin district and the night clubs in company with detectives until she had apprehended those who had made off with her valuables?

That was an epic of the modern Evangeline. She may not be so gentle, she may not have ever blushed or dropped her eyes before the steady stare of some handsome Don Juan but she knows how to take care of herself. She is sufficient unto herself where the Evangeline of Longfellow's day would have been a most distressing failure.

But granted the modern Evangeline in the practical world of affairs has it on her grandmother, think how badly she has treated the poets. Who can rhapsodize over bobbed hair? Admitted for the sake of personal safety that shortened locks are more convenient and snappy, most of us can subscribe from personal experience that short tresses are a "bust" when it comes to providing inspiration for poetic thought and utterance. Longfellow's description of Evangeline's physical charms occupied thirty-four lines. Most of it centered around her hair, and her downcast eyes. The modern Evangeline has very little hair and as for permitting her eye-lashes to fringe the delicate pink of her cheek—why it simply isn't done.

In only one particular can the job of the present-day poet be commended.

Now when it comes to short skirts, shapely ankles and dimpled knees it is apparent that Longfellow was handicapped. What words he might have put in his hero's mouth, is beyond the depth of the prosaic male of today. Not being a poet we can only leave it to the imagination of the gentle reader.

BOOSTING HOME LIVING.

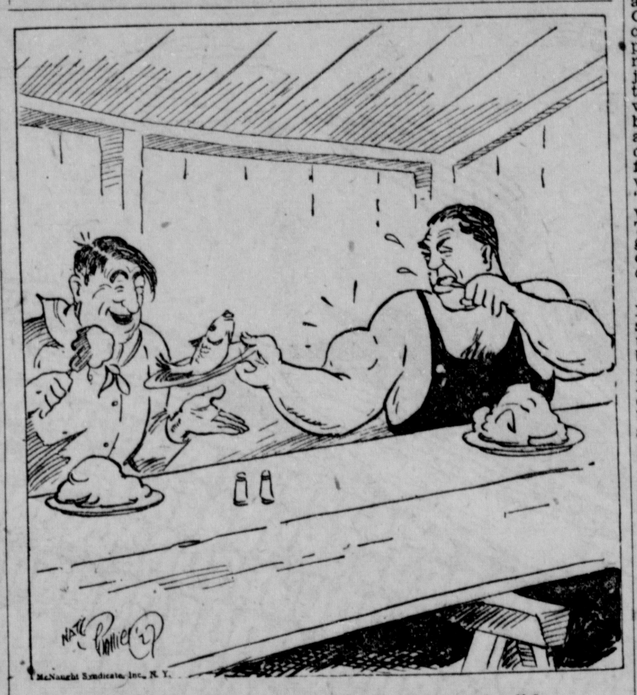

From out of the mass of material which comes to this desk is one pamphlet dealing with a subject little discussed and less thought of these days. It has to do with consideration of means of increasing interest in home living.

Strange that anyone should consider it necessary to direct attention to the increasing tendency of Americans to forsake the home.

With so many distracting and engaging attractions to draw most of us from that which we call home, it is presumptuous, perhaps, to suggest that we—meaning ourselves and our children—would be the better if we spend more time at the family circle.

The reason most of us do not spend more time at home is, putting it rather brutally, because we find more enjoyment and pleasure outside than within. Our diversions and amusements are not centered in the home. The answer is as simple and direct and as obvious to all of us as the conditions which provoke the question. To keep people within the home it must be attractive. Of course beautiful furnishings cannot accomplish all of it. But they will go a long ways towards helping. If we are spending our money for furnishings which beautify and enhance the home, it is more than likely we will not be spending it outside. Anything which lends itself towards creating a spirit of home beautification is distinctly of value to the Amercan people.

Latest Dope on Jack's Training.

His muscles stood out when he handed me the fish.

BY WILL ROGERS.

All I know is just what I read in the papers. That is that is all I did know up to a few days ago. All I could see or read in the papers was "Jack says he never felt better and will knock him out sure." "Gene says he never felt more confident in his life." Tex Rickard says, "It's Pneumonia to me what happens the night of the fight. I will have gotten mine by then, let the championship fall where it pays the best." That is what we was all having to read in the papers, so I could see that wasn't getting us anywhere, so always on the lookout for the very latest and best in what is good for my readers, I just passed through Chicago and went right out to get the real lowdown on the physical condition of Jack Dempsey.

I knew a lot of my friends were going to rely on my judgment as to how to place their money on the big modern parade. So I wanted to see for myself just the very shape he was in and how he looked in his workouts with the various sparring partners.

He is training out at a race track. I thought by that he was maby going to make a race of it that night. But I found he had gone out there on account of a high fence to keep Kerans out without any injunctions.

I had phoned out that I was coming as I wanted to see Jack train. He was awful cordial as he always is. He is one of the finest fellows to meet, (never mind what Sharkey tells you) you ever saw. I had timed it just right for lunch. He says "Come right on in, Will!" I know Jack pretty well. He is one of, or was one of my constituents out in Beverley Hills before those politicians throwed me out. There was one big room full of people eating. I thought it was Rickard feeding his audience that he expected to have the night of the fight. For I had heard he expected a record house.

We went into a private dining room, Jack, Floyd Fitzsimmons, the western promoter, and myself. They brought in some of the most wonderful fried fish, rock bass, they were just about the size of a punching bag. I think they was private that somebody had sent Jack, so when Jerry the Greek saw them come through the dining room he came in with us to eat. If you have never met Jerry the Greek you have missed one of the finest dialect lessons you ever had. I thought maby it was the rock bass that had got crossways in his throat that was causing us all not to wonder what he was saying, but even what tongue he was speking. But when the fish was finished, he got worse. I wanted to get him some more fish. I could understand him better when he was drinking water. He is a great fellow, however, and Dempsey's most loyal friend. He has been with Jack ever since Jack could buy two tickets for a drawing room. He hollers out the signals in the ring and the other side can't get them. It was the first time I had ever been to a training camp in my life, and the first time I had ever watched a fellow in training eat. The fish was so good, and things were cooked so good, I was sorry I haden't taken up a little box cuffing myself.

Condition?

Now as far as his condition in training was concerned, why he dident look as good at the table as either I or Jerry, or Fitzsimmons. We went right in wide open and never pulled our punches with either knife or fork. I thought maby they would make a boxer in training eat with his gloves on. Well we made a sucker out of him for eating. I thought they would of course talk about boxing and fighting, but all they talked about was aviation. Jack haden't done any training so far that day, outside of eating breakfast. Tunney was coming into town that day to establish his training camp.

Well the camp was all agog getting ready for the training. We all got in cars and went over about 10 miles to where a fellow really had room to train. It was my first experience seeing a fighter train, so I didn't know what to expect. Instead of boxing gloves they all got a club apiece and instead of some husky fighter or punching bag why they all took a poor little innocent white ball apiece and they started in whaling the gizzards out of it. Well they haden't trained very long before I could see the ball wasent getting much the worst of it. It was holding its own. If I could a made a bet I would have bet on the ball. Leo Flynn was training with him, and he asked me how I thought Jack looked. I told him he looked terrible on that long five-fifty hole, that his footwork was all right he was getting plenty of that going back and forth over adjoining fairways, but that his direction was terrible for a man with a fight only three weeks away.

Flynn says, "Yes but his mind is good. Nothing is worrying him." I says, "Did you see him when he got to that creek? I never saw a man so worried in my life. He tried to knock it across on the bridge. And Jimmy Hussy the comedian couldent put his ball in his pocket and carry it across. Flynn trained pretty good. He must have had a lot of leisure time in his life and never had to work for a living. After seeing Jerry the Greek play I know why Greece declined as an Athaletic Nation. Dempsey's long range punches were better than when the ball was up close to him. It's his inn fighting on the greens that he has to perfect. His approaches is wild. Once the ball got him over against the ropes in the sand and it made a sucker out of him. It looked like he was out there for awhile. Just as they counted nine he got up and out.

And Tunney.

Course on the other hand Tunney is just as liable too look bad in the sand as Jack.. Jacks judge of distance seemed to be bad, why half a dozen times he dident get up there, or the hole would duck and he would go way on past. Course I am telling you his shortcomings more than I am his good points. You are going to bet your money and I want you to know just what shape he is in. As I tell you I dident get to see Tunney work out as his clubs hadent come, but the chances are that he is just as liable to pull'em, or top his long ones as not. Course you got to figure this if Jack ever conncets with one of those swings he will "hole Mr. Tunney out in one." He will make a dodo if he lands right. Then he has a mashie punch if it gets to working along in the center of Tunneys fairway is liable to cause some trouble.

Now there is the condition that I found him in. I watched and studied every move of every bite he took, and every stroke he made. His breathing after eating was perfect, and he dident seem to tire on the Links only when he got in the sand, or a running creek. If he can get by those two things he ought to be sitting pretty. He made a 92 the day I was there. Now lay your bets according. They was giving him 32, so that made him a 60, which wasent a bad workout, 60 will win pretty near any fight, Jones can only do a 67.

He looks great. His muscles stood out like whipe cords when he was passing me some more fish. They say you can tell a fighters real condition by his color. I guess that's why Jack Johnston always fooled 'em.

He said he sleeps fine, thats what all sporting writers are supposed to ask them. If that meant anything I would be champion of the world myself. He is about five pounds over weight, but two good sand bunkers and Jerry the Greek getting to the table first for about two meals and he will take that off. Now boys I have given you the dope as I saw it, so lay your bets accordingly.

Village Planning
(Tulsa World)

City planning is a familar term, describing organized attempts to beautify, correct, reform and otherwise improve cities or to shape their growth in an orderly manner. Strangely, nothing has been said abuot village planning up to this time. But now an investigator for the division of farm population and rural life, department of agriculture, says villages must go to planning to save their lives.

A village is a trade and social center for some section of farming country. In these days of autos and telephones the physical and trade attractions of cities are sapping the small towns. The only way they can survive, says this agricultural expert, is to make themselves attractive. This is done by straightening and broadening streets and putting trees on them, creation of parks and playgrounds, attractive—even formal—entrances to the towns, clean yards and neat houses. The theory is that a village of that sort can hold trade and be a center for its territory and that a slovenly, dilapidated, nonprogressive village will fade out.

This situation is working out in real life. Small towns as a rule are going backward and that is regrettable. Village and rural life has some distinctive advantages and they should be preserved.

Practical application of this government report, which is undoubtedly sound, is possible to any small town of ordinary prosperity and enterprise. It is a city in embro; it hopes to grow into a city. Therefore, if it is to fulfill its destiny, either as a city or village, it must not let weeds, tumble-down shacks, vacant store rooms and trashy lots choke its life. People do not have to trade at the small towns; they can go to the big towns. The business of the small town is to get on the job of being a center.

The Span of Two Lives.
(The Kansas City Star.)

Sometimes we may experience just a little weariness from the oft-repeated observation that ours still is a young nation. Most of us are disposed to regard the republic as grown up. Our development has been enormous, our progress in the facilities of living unprecedented. We are inclined, then, to think of ourselves as rich in history and entitled to all the respect that age and rank should command. And so we are. But the fact remains that we are a young nation, younger than we realize as we contemplate our advancement and participate in our progress.

A few days ago a distinguished citizen of Virginia died at his home, Sherwood Forest, Charles County. He was Judge David Gardner Tyler, son of John Tyler, tenth president. He was 81 years of age. President Tyler was born in 1790 and died in 1861, aged 71. Neither life was extraordinary in length, and yet these two men, father and son, spanned almost the entire history of the United States from the achievement of independence to the present.

When President Tyler was born Washington was in his first year in the presidential office. When he died the man destined to be the tenth president was 9 years old. When the elder Tyler died his son was 15. Thus the father might have related to his son a 9-year-old boy's recollections of Washington's time. The period of our independence is relatively short when the lives of father and son, lives of not uncommon length, span almost that entire period.

Judge Tyler lived much after the Virginia tradition. He was given a good collegiate education, supplemented by post graduate studies in Europe. He entered the law and politics. He served his district in congress and later was elected to the bench. He was a man of fine dignity and commanding ability. He did not seek preferment because of his ancestry. Indeed, he rarely was heard of outside of his state after his retirement from congress, and then only when someone would write for publication the interesting and little known fact that a son of President Tyler still lived.

Indiana Fights for Freedom.
(The Chicago Tribune.)

The fight for clean government in Indiana will have the sympathy and applause of good citizens throughout the republic. We doubt if there are many Pharisees among the sisterhood of states and thoughtful men and women everywhere will realize that Indiana's fight is theirs. Our American communities differ much in some respects, but not at all in others, and there is an ebb and flow in the tide of vigorous citizenship to be observed in them all. Indiana has been passing through an experience which has come to other states and may come to others still. It is an experience which ought to be enlightening and if understood will save us all some costly errors.

Under the guise of public morals, bigotry and corruption in political alliance have demoralized Indiana's politics and government. Inevitably the high intelligence and character of such a commonwealth will revolt, though deceived for a time, and it seems now that Indiana will soon be free again. But it is not enough that corruption should be exposed and malefactors punished. That is but a passing release. It is more important that at least this generation of Americans shall learn the folly of organized bigotry and shall turn loyally again to those American principles which the regime of the klan and its ally, the Anti-Saloon league, repudiated. In the name of public morals and of fine Americanism, the klan and the league in Indiana have collaborated to produce a condition which is neither moral nor in the sense of American ideals American.

McCarl Plugs a Leak.
(The New York World.)

Another drain on the treasury's 636 million-dollar surplus has been plugged up by lynx-eyed Comptroller General McCarl, whose latest announced verdict saves the nation $2.32 by preventing Wm. Miller Collier, American ambassador at Santiago, Chili, from charging cab hire to the government.

Judge Lurtin R. Ginn, Mr. McCarl's assistant watchdog, wrote the decision which compels the ambassador to pay the money out of his own pocket, after formal exchange of letters and readjustment of accounting incidental to revising the charges.

The ambassador pointed out that one of his clerks, E. J. Sparks, had to work at the embassy until 2 or 3. o'clock several mornings. "He lived in the suburbs of Santiago," explained the ambassador, "about two miles from the embassy. Street car service was suspended about midnight. To reach his home he had to pass through a district where I can honestly say he was in peril of his life, or at least of being waylaid and robbed. There is no one acquainted with the locality who would want to go alone through that section at night on foot, unarmed."

To which the comptroller's office replied: "In so far as the legality of such expenditures is concerned, it is not material that they were incurred by overtime service."

Mr. Sparks, it is assumed in Washington, is not going to do much more night work.

Fire Unveils a Statute.
(The Minneapolis Journal.)

The bronze statue of the Marquis de Mores, founder of Medora, in the heart of the Bad Lands of North Dakota, has been unveiled, not according to program or schedule but decidedly informally.

The canvas shroud which has been wrapped about the statue for more than a year has been burned off, leaving a smoke-blackened figure upon its discolored marble base.

The Marquis de Mores, in the early eighties, spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in an attempt to bring the packing plant to the range, instead of the range cattle to the packers. He built a mamoth packing plant, at the town he named after his wife, "Medora." The chimney of the plant is the lone monument left except the 30-room rambling wooden chateau now used as a tourist headquarters.

Two years ago the Duc de Vallambrosa, son the French marquis, announced his intention of placing a monument to his father in the public square at Medora. It arrived a year ago, was set up and has since been covered with heavy wrappings of canvas. Repeated engagements made by the duke to come for the unveiling have been delayed through one cause or another.

The other night citizens of the little village county seat town were awakened by fire. Some one, impatient to see the statue, had drenched the canvas with gasoline and touched ti off.

What Dickens Saw In 1842.
(The Detroit News).

Charles Dickens visited the United States in 1842, less than a century ago. Of Pennsylvania he reported: "We have passed, both in the mountains and elsewhere, a great number of new settlements and detached log houses. Their utterly forlorn and miserable appearance baffles all description. I have not seen six cabins out of 600 where the windows have been whole. Old hats, old clothes, old board, old fragments of blanket and paper, are stuffed into the broken glass; and their air is misery and desolation. It pains the eye to see the stumps of great trees thickly strewed in every field of wheat, and never to lose the eternal swamp and dull morass, with hundreds of rotten trunks steeped in its unwholesome water."

This region is now one of the gardens of America, made so by those settlers too poor to buy glass, and by their descendants.

Of an Ohio road he wrote: "It is impossible to convey an adequate idea to you of the kind of road over which we traveled. I can only say that it was, at the best, a track through the wild forest and among the swamps, bogs and morasses of the withered bush."

This road is now U. S. highway No. 21, running through one of the richest farm lands in the world.

JUPITER

BY GARETT P. SERVISS,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Subjects of Popular Interest.

The mightiest of the planets, Jupiter, is now lord of the night. On September 22 he is "in opposition," an astronomical term applied to the outer planets when they are seen from the earth at a point in the sky opposite to the position occupied by the sun. More accurately defined, opposition occurs when a planet's longitude differs by exactly 180 degrees from that of the sun, so that the planet is on the meridian at midnight.

A moment's thought shows that a planet when in opposition must be nearer the earth than at other times, since the earth is then directly between it and the sun. Owing however, to the elliptic form of the planetary orbits the distance varies at successive oppositions. On this occasion Jupiter's distance from the earth will be about 367,500,000 miles, but on March 1, when Jupiter was in conjunction with the sun, or on the farther side from the earth, his distance was about 555,800,000 miles, being greater then by the whole diameter of the earth's orbit.

In consequence of its relative nearness and the fact that it is visible during the entire night, from sunset to sunrise, Jupiter is now very favorably placed for amateur, as well as professional, telescopic observation. Its huge disk presents to the naked eye an apparent diameter of nearly fifty seconds of arc, or five-sixths of a minute, which is considerably more than one-fortieth of the mean apparent diameter of the full moon.

So, in a telescope magnifying only 40 diameters, Jupiter now appears as large as the full moon does to the naked eye. Although this is a mathematical fact, readily proved by measurement, to the untrained observer the planet's disk will probably seem much smaller than the moon.

However, no thoughtful observer can fail to be strongly impressed with its enormous actual size as he sees the great planet glowing in his telescope. Its diameter is nearly eleven time that of the earth, so that the area of its surface is 120 times, and its bulk 1,300 times that of the earth.

If the continent of North America were expanded to Jovian dimensions the distance between New York and Chicago would become about ten thousand miles, and on the same scale Lindbergh would have had to fly some 37,000 miles to skip over the Atlantic to Paris.

But that giant world is very unlike ours. Its mean density is not very much greater than that of water. In fact, it might be mostly a liquid globe, but there is evidence that its central core is relatively much denser than the earth's, so that possibly there is a solid globe within. The smallest telescope will show you its great "belts" running parallel with its equator, on both sides. You will se how wonderfully rich they are in color, and diversified in their continually shifting forms; but only careful study with powerful instruments reveals the curious fact that the various zones into which these belts divide the planet are travelling around at different velocities. The average time of one avial rotation of the entire big planet is about 9 hours 55 minutes (against the twenty-four hours taken by our little earth,) but the central, or equatorial, zone, from 10,000 to 15,000 miles broad, travels so much faster than the zones on either side of it, that it gets round in nine hours, fifty minutes. North and south the striped and spotted surface seems to be divided into many zones, having different rates of motion, so that "well-marked features near one another on the planet's surface drift by one another, sometimes at the rate of 200 miles an hour."

If this curious surface of Jupiter could sustain inhabitants, you can imagine what their life would be on a world whose superfices were continually in complicated motion as if composed of a multiplicity of adjacent moving platforms, each having its own rate of speed, without any definite order controlling their relations to one another.

But there is not space here even to enumerate the many puzzling features of that huge and strange planet. There it is, and here we are—each equally substantial—but we do not know what the relation between us may be in the great scheme of things.

The Family Budget

The family budget and ours are alike in one particular—outgo must not exceed income if success is to be attained.

Telephone revenues must be sufficient to meet all expenses, such as taxes and wages. They also must provide a fair return on the value of the property.

Otherwise, reliable service cannot be provided to the public and additional money cannot be obtained from investors to expand the business to meet the increasing demands for service.

Your telephone needs can be met satisfactorily only when the telephone income is sufficient.

Some difference of opinion exists among educators as to the relative value of outside music instruction as is shown by Howard in answers to questionnaires recently sent out by school heads. Of 147 principals and superintendents answering the question as to whether or not, in their opinion, music taken outside of school is of equal value with regular high school subjects, ninety-five answered in the affirmative and fifty-two in the negative. One hundred and thirty-eight educators declared that high schools are justified in giving credit for out side music, while forty held that there is no justification for the practice.

The survey conducted by Howard showed that eighty per cent of the students receiving credit for out side music are carrying this work in addition to four regular school subjects which constitute a full quota for the average student, with a number of instances in which the student is carrying five subjects in addition to outside music.

If outside music is to be accepted on the same basis as regular school work it should be undertaken on the same basis. Except in rare instances according to Howard a student enrolled for four regular subjects should not be allowed to take outside music. Or to put it in another way those doing outside music for credit should not take more than three school subjects. The average high school student cannot do justice to more than four full subjects whether they are all taken in school or one outside in the form of music.

This seems to show that a considerable number of students are using outside music as an easy way to secure credits, instead of being granted credit only when the work is undertaken seriously, and in place of a regular school subject. The effect is to materially weaken the value of the high school course for these students. It is not the intention of C. A. Howard to abolish the study of music for credit, it is rather to raise the requirements for standard high schools so as to make impossible the indiscriminate granting of excess credits whether in music or other subjects.

C. A. Howard is the superintendent of public instruction in the state of Oregon and it is easy to see that he means that if a student wishes to study music seriously he should let it replace a regular high school subject. The small amount of work that can be accomplished by a student outside of school hours should not be allowed credit.

In America there is too much drifting from amateurism to professionalism in music. The student who takes up music to get easy school credits is just as liable to take up music teaching to get an easy living. The country is jammed full of just such teachers. The school credit system properly applied would help us get rid of them.

THE MORE THAN COMPLETE LETTER-WRITER
A New Manual for Up-to-Date Occasions

"If you roll me in the mud, it will create a situation that I could only view as intimately concerning my interests."

A New England professor—who ought to know; and what don't they know?—said the other day that letter writing is on the decline. Two generations ago the ability to write a courteous and elegant letter was held to be one of the aims of education. Now nobody cares. Everybody writes in a slap-dash hurried style that is copied from the scenario of the moving picture and the diction of the night lettergram.

As a consequence, we no longer see the little old manuals that used to teach people how to write letters and that had such titles as The Complete Letter-Writer or The kind of situations that arise are no longer met by the Perfect Letter Writer, and we need some new models to copy instead. I have therefore worked out and reproduced here a few samples from the More Than Complete Letter-Writer, which I hope to publish in its entirety.

INTIMATE FAMILY CORRESPONDENCE.
THE QUESTION OF A REMARRIAGE.

(Note: In these days of divorce and of changing relationships, a very special kind of correspondence is needed to announce to one's friends alterations of this sort The following letter is from a young lady to an intimate acquaintance.)

My dear Lil.

I must write to tell you the good news that there is at our house. I don't think you'd ever guess! Father is going to marry mother, and Sis and I are just delighted! Of course, we always knew that the divorce was the greatest mistake and we both felt that if father and mother could really get to know one another, they'd make a real hit with one another.

Well, about a week ago father came up to the house, and he looked so cute in his little Derby hat and speckled tie that I am sure mother fell for him at once. And since then Anne and I have asked father up twice to dinner so that he could meet mother, and last night we had a little bridge for father and mother. Father looked so nice in his little black suit, and at the end of the evening when mother asked him to marry her he just looked as happy as anything.

Mother thinks she'll marry him in July.

Yours ever

A Declaration of Love.

(Note: People who get used to sending night-lettergrams, through the telegraph companies, fall into the lettergram style of correspondence and cannot easily come out of it. In this case, the only thing to do is to adopt the "Guide to Letter-Writing" to meet the case. This is done in the following declaration of love. The young man in question is too modest to speak out in his sweetheart's presence. In the old days, therefore, he would fall back on the formal or rather stilted language of the Letter-Writer. But now it has to be revised so as to meet his needs.)

Answer to a Threatening Letter.

This form is based on the diplomatic correspondence that apparently passes between the ambassadors of the great pogers. See any book of disclosures or memoirs, or revelations about the great war.)

Sir.

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 14th ulto in which you state that if you meet me on the street you intend to roll me in the mud. In reply I feel obliged to say that if you roll me in the mud, it will create a situation that I could only view as intimately concerning my interests and in regard to which I should feel compelled to take whatever action seemed best to consort with the occasion. I observe that your communication makes a further definite expression of your intention "to bash me in the face." To this I am compelled to answer that if you do so, I shall be obliged to regard the action as unfriendly. It is proper also to refer to your third assertion of intention or purpose in regard to "Kicking me in the pants." To this, after due deliberation, I find it impossible to give my consent, and I am reluctantly compelled to say that if you proceed to kick me in the pants as per your communication (Folio 047 D.6½), I shall be compelled to take, either in my pants or out of them, whatever steps may seem good steps to take.

With the highest consideration.

Form Letter.
To Summon A Plumber In An Emergency.

Dear Old Chap.

I wonder if you could possibly find time to slip over to my house and stop a leak that has started in one of the furnace pipes? You are so terribly good at that sort of thing that I am sure you would set it right in a minute. If you can come, please don't bother to dress. Come just as you are, as there is only the matter and myself at the house. Do come like a dear old chap if you possibly can.

Yours etc.

And to these letters might be appended a few of the very useful forms of words to use in answering invitations etc. etc. Thus:—

V

Mr. and Mrs. Climber request the favor of a wedding present on behalf of their daughter, Grace Climber, who will, most likely, and unless he breaks away, be married to the Hon. Edward Quarternut, son of the second Earl Quarternut of The Bogs, Ireland, on July 1st next, or as near as they can hold him to it.

VI

A Coming-Out Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Underhand request the pleasure of your company at The Crookery, June 10th, at a coming-out party in honor of their son, Mr. Edmond Underhand, jr., who is coming out of the penitentiary on that date.

VII

Successful Application for a Hotel Room.

Dear Sirs.

I beg herewith to apply for a room for one half day at any time when it suits you in the year 1928.

Build Replica of Grant Birthplace On Old Home Site

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—There are now two "Grant's birthplaces," in Ohio.

Both "birthplaces," are partially authentic, though neither may honestly include the word "original" in their descriptions.

The cabin in which the future general and president was born is now located on the state fair grounds in Columbus, having been brought there in 1838, during the Ohio centennial, and in 1892 at the suggestion of then Governor McKinley, the state legislature appropriated sufficient funds to encase the cabin in glass. The house had been purchasd from the Grant heirs and brought to Columbus with funds donated by Henry T. Chittenden, a private citizen.

The second "birthplace," is located on the original site of the cabin at Point Pleasant, Ohio, a hamlet on the Ohio river. At the last session of legislature, the house of representatives voted an appropriation of $5,000 to have the original cabin returned to Point Pleasant where five acres have been converted into a state park. The state senate however refused to concur with the vote of the lower house and the Grant centenary committee with funds derived from the sale of Grant memorial coins, arranged for the erection of an exact replica of the original birthplace.

The old fireplace, wall paper pattern, style of flooring and the enclosing fence have been reproduced and two "birthplaces," are like as two peas.

Furniture preserved by Grant relatives has been restored in the original, while the G. A. R., has provided funds for shrubs and an old fashioned garden close and walk.

It is proposed to dedicate the "birthplace" in September when it is hoped that President Coolidge will attend. The cabin has been open for inspection since July.

Take Photo of Sun In Daylight a New Problem of Science

LONDON, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Whether or not the corona of the sun can be photographed in ordinary daylight is the problem which Dr. W. H. Steavenson, president of the British Astronomical association, has set himself to unravel.

Since discovering during the recent eclipse of the sun in England that he was able to see the mysterious flaming corona for over three minutes after totality had ended, Dr. Steavenson has given the problem his whole attention. He now proposes to take his instruments to the summit of a 10,000 feet high mountain at a point near the Italo-Swiss frontier, and attempt to photograph the corona in broad daylight.

It is conceded by British scientists that should he be successful a tremendous step forward will have been taken towards probing the secrets of the corona and of the sun itself, so far a virtual closed book to man.

Dr. Steavenson is of the opinion that, in clear air at an altitude of 10,000 feet, when the sun is high in the sky, the lowermost and brightest part of the corona should be able to be photographed if certain precautions are taken. He will use a circular disc, which will shield the plate from the sun's actual image, and he will reduce the diffuse sky-light by the use of colored light discs or filters. Further he will reduce to a minimum the diffusion of light as it passes through his photographic apparatus by employing a simply spectacle lens instead of a complicated photographic lens, and plain glass surfaces instead of silvered-glass mirrors.

Should Dr. Steavenson succeed, the study of the corona, instead of being limited to five or six minutes every few years, will be able to be carried out every fine day.

Limits to Resistors.

Resistors used in radio circuits will not always carry the current which is sent through them. They burn out. To prevent burnout ascertain the safe wattage dissipation of the resistor and then use it only within the limits.

Concerning Condensers.

Stopping condensers can only withstand a certain voltage. When this is exceeded the insulation breaks down and the condenser is useless. It is better to buy a condenser with a large margin of safety in the first place than to do it after the cheaper condenser has broken down.

Keep Charger Away from Battery Leads.

Never place a charger using a tube near an "A" or "B" battery lead, because the heat emitted by the tube will in turn heat the plates in the battery. This will buckle the plates, loosen the material in the grids of the plates and may start the solution boiling. In other words, it will have the effect of either shorting the battery or reversing the charge, both of which are injurious to the life of the battery.

To Measure Radio Waves.

The field strength of a radio wave is measured in millivolts, or microvolts, per meter. If the potential difference between two points one meter apart, one above the other, is one millivolt, the intensity of the vertical component of the wave is one millivolt per meter. An aerial 10 meters high would pick up a voltage of 10 millivolts in such a field. If the field strength were five millivolts per meter, the aerial would pick up 50 millivolts.

Aerial Not a Lightning Rod.

An aerial should not be regarded as effective protection against lightning, but on the other hand, its limited extent prevents it from becoming a menace. The aerial need not be considered as potential inviters of lightning strokes, being in a class with other metal objects normally found about buildings, such as metal gutters, down spouts and wire clothes lines. As commonly installed, it is of relatively small size, both in extent and in diameter of the wires used. If grounded, or provided with a lightning arrester, it may effect gradual drainage of electricity as well as a lightning rod, but a direct stroke is likely to fuse it or tear it from the fastenings on account of its small diameter. Moreover, the ground lead of an aerial constitutes a lightning rod having a single down conductor, whereas good lightning rod practice requires at least two down conductors electrically parallel but as widely separated as possible.

RADIO DIGEST

Too Much Service.

Much trouble in the operation of receiving sets can be traced to carrying service plans too far. Take for example, the matter of keeping the prongs of the tubes clean. Some fans file them and believe that the job is not complete until the brass shows through. This may be all right in theory, but it should be remembered that these tubes have to be put back into sockets that have not been tightened to compensate for the metal filed off the prongs. Tight contacts are important in radio and radical service on the tubes may violate this rule. It is best to clean the tube prongs with a rubber eraser.

An Interesting Fact.

A radio wave which leaves the transmitting station with the front vertical, or perpendicular to the ground, gradually topples over so that the wave front is parallel to the ground, provided that it travels faster in air than in ground. Compare the wave front with a reed which is lodged in the ground at one end and is free at the other. The wind bends it over. Also compare the wave front with water waves near shore and out at sea. No matter what the direction of the wave out at sea, near a sloping shore line, the wave front is always parallel to the shore. This is due to the fact that the velocity of the wave is slower in shallow water than it is in deep water.

For the Notebook.

A rattle in the cone speaker is sometimes an indication of a loose screw.

A receiving set must be of a very high standard to operate successfully on a loop aerial.

Home-made coils, unless they are the product of experts, are not as efficient as the manufactured types.

Large by-pass condensers can be placed across the line without reducing the higher audio notes.

So far as is known, there is no cause on record where lightning has been attracted by an inside antenna.

Small stopping condensers and low value grid leaks can be used with no decrease in the amplification of the low notes.

MELODRAMA TO STARTLE PUBLIC

Critic Labels Play As Hit Before First Night at Gotham.

"The Letter" Likely to Shame All Rivals Says Dimond.

BY BUSHNELL DIMOND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—In the flux and froth of incessant autumnal production there hovers one play that is likely to put all its rivals to shame because of one quality: excitement. This is Somerset Maugham's crisply-paced melodrama, "The Letter," and if peeps at the dress rehearsal and a twofold reading of the script mean anything, I would unhesitatingly put the piece in the hit division even before the local first night.

Maugham's contacts with the stage have been curiously erratic, sometimes brilliantly satisfying, occasionally flashes in the pan. Originally a concoctor of "smart" comediettas for Billie Burke and Marie Tempest, he turned to graver matters, masked with frivolous speech, in "The Circle," but he couldn't "see" a play in "Miss Thompson," which the wilier John Colton converted into that profane and trembling thing called "Rain."

This time Mr. Maugham has determined not to be caught dozing. In its first form a short story, "The Letter" has now been made dramatically shipshape by the author, unaided. It is as sound and "well-made" a segment of surprises, shocks and raids on the gaudier emotions as ever Sardou or Bayard Veiller turned out, and its public, I imagine, will prove to be legion unbounded.

Lesson for Melodramatists.

It is not my province to strip the conversational flesh from its skeletal structure; for there is a twist in the bones of the plot that should be witnessed, and not written about. But this twist is so deftly "planted" and its development is so rational and so racking that the best of our native melodramatists may well study the clean, sharp, hard outline of Maugham's manuscript and learn a few lessons from him.

An odd point about "The Letter," as one reads it, is that the author has been thoughtful enough to give his principal actress an easy "out," if she finds herself in deep waters. As the narrative reaches its culmination in the heroine's confession, one version permits a "fadeout," with an interlarded re-enacting of the important scene that takes place before the first act curtain rises. (Perhaps you think that is involved; it isn't, as played). The second and infinitely better ending puts the whole confession on the woman's lips; it is she who brings the house of cards tumbling over the heads of her husband, the lawyer and herself.

This speech is of terrific length, and the canniest of acting is needed to keep the breath of life in it. In London, the role of Leslie fell into the hands of Miss Gladys Cooper, a statuesque, coldly beautiful and impassive blonde. In spite of the graceful courtesy of Mr. Maugham's apology in the text, I suspect that he found Miss Cooper had bred a yawn or two in the auditorium, and so proceeded to smooth her path for her and her audiences with a movie device.

One-Woman Play.

Miss Cornell, one suspects, scarcely faces a similar difficulty. This is, in every sense, a one-woman play, and by the playing of the woman it will triumph or collapse. It is a one-woman play not only because Leslie is the only female of any consequence on the premises, but also because, up to the moment of her defeat, she plays upon all the men, like a muscular hand sweeping a harp. It offers a great chance for a great actress. I imagine you will agree that part and player have met.

The production of "The Letter" marks the entry into the managerial ranks of Messmore Kendall, a magnate whose principal theatrical contact has been through the pictures. He has assembled a cast of high merit, with emphasis on Allen Jeayes, a British actor esteemed in London, but little known here, if at all. The direction by Guthrie McClintic will please and surprise those people who associate Mr. McClintic's name chiefly with more fragile things, like "Saturday's Children." He has an unerring sense of the theater: he knows emotional values, and in "The Letter" he has evoked into being a sort of hushed and malignant tropic omen that testifies to his growing skill as an invisible craftsman of the stage.

Mary and Doug At Last To Be Cast for Roles In Same Picture - "Over the Andes"

Mary and Douglas are playing together at last. But at that, Mary is only an extra in her husband's film, "Over the Andes," once known as "The Gaucho." The role presents her as the Madonna of the shrine, and the entire plot of the Fairbanks story depends upon the conviction given the small part. And Doug thinks no one but our Mary can do it.

By the end of the month, Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes will be before the camera in "Sailors' Wives."

At last, the entire cast of "The Shepherd of the Hills." Alec Francis has the title role, and John Boles is the leading man. Molly O'Day, who has just finished playing with Richard Barthelmess in "The Patent Leather Kid," has been assigned the feminine lead. Utah is going to double for the dear old south.

This is the cast for "Drums of Love." Charles Hill Mailes will play Duke Demora and Eugenie Besserer, Sydney DeGrey, Barbara Lebozoky, William Austin, Rosemary Cooper, and Joyce Coad will have important roles. Mary Philbin, Don Alvarado, and Tully Marshall had been previously signed. It is probable Lionel Barrymore will have the role originally offered to Feodor Chaliapin, Russian Opera star.

Conrad Nagel, the model young man of the screen, who has never done anything more violent than clutch the heroine in the last film foot, is to be seen with guns, stolen jewelry, and such things. "The Girl from Chicago," which is to have a new name before you see it, ruins Conrad's record. The picture gives Conrad his first taste of being very wicked and it gives Myrna Loy her chance as a leading woman. She is the girl from the Windy City.

May Be Star.

The first of a series of roles planned for Helene Costello makes her Warner Oland's support in "Good Time Charley." While she did not create the instant furore of sister Dolores, she has done some good work, and she may make her place in the sun, even though it be at a later date.

Although Warners have just completed a black face story, Al Jolson removes his burnt cork for his first film offering, "The Jazz Singer." May McAvoy has the feminine lead, and Eugenie Besserer is the mother, for whom the boy sacrifices himself.

Corinne Griffith is persevering. She is still working on a cast for "The Garden of Eden," and she has Charles Ray for her lead now. Corinne says she wanted him in the first place. Well, everybody ought to be happy, if production ever begins.

The social register, the family tree, the boiled shirt, and the very haughty butler are slated for democratic pokes in the ribs. With neither air nor water left for fun making, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are going to ridicule society as their next. "We're in Society Now" is the name of their number.

Thelma Todd is to play opposite Richard Dix in "The Gay Defender." Thelma, once a Massachusetts school teacher, is a graduate of the Paramount school of acting.

Al St. John, famous acrobatic comedian who has been shown exclusively in two-reel comedies, has his first chance in a feature length picture in the Betty Bronson-Lane Chandler, "Open Range." He suddenly appears, inebriated, in the midst of a cattle stampede.

Marian Nixon has been cast for the feminine lead in "The Symphony." The picture is Jean Hersholt's current starring vehicle for Universal.

"The Patsy," played two years ago on the New York stage, is to be made over for the screen. Marion Davies will have the leading role.

Conway Tearle, who has been complaining that he hasn't had enough of the right kind of roles for months, is trying out another part now. He has the masculine lead in "Isle of Forgotten Women," with Dorothy Sebastian and Gibson Gowland having other important roles.

Returns to Screen.

Giving up his directing for a return to the screen, Alan Hale has acquired a satisfactory first part. He will have a remarkable chance for character portrayal in "The Blue Danube," being made at the Pathe-De Mille studios. Leatrice Joy will star and Cecil himself will supervise.

Gary Cooper has been assigned the role opposite Pola Negri in "Rachel." A new sort of casting for the erstwhile western star.

"Balaoo," a mystery play, is on the Fox schedule, with June Collyer and Edmund Lowe in the leading roles. This is June's first leading role.

"Serenade" will be the final title of Adolphe Menjou's next picture. It was originally called "The Musician." Paramount it is said has imported one who closely resembles Adolphe in manner and appearance, so that he can take the actor's place if he has any more trouble at the studio. Katherine Carver has the lead. Fay Wray was invited to participate, but she already had a date with Emil Jannings.

The cast to support Rin-Tin-Tin in "A Dog of the Regiment" is being selected. John Peters will have one of the principal roles and Tom Gallery the juvenile lead. The story is based on an incident in Rinty's own life.

"Loves of Carmen" is coming to the screen this month. Dolores Del Rio has the name part. Don Alvarado is the soldier who loses Carmen to the toreador, Victor McLaglen. Nancy Nash, Carmen Costello and others complete the cast.

Soviet Government And Soldiers Fight Over Getting Vodka

MOSCOW, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Soldiers of the Red army are fighting for vodka, but they probably won't get it. The familiar wet and dry arguments are hashed over by the troops from the stump and in the regimental press.

The wets says the army is the only institution in Russia, that has remained dry after nation-wide restruction of vodka manufacture was given up as a failure a few years ago. The drys argue that good communists and soldiers ought not crave liquor.

Private Mayseev states the case for thousands of fighters in the simple language of one who learned to read and write only a few years ago.

"The hoosegow is no place for a man after taking a drink or two of vodka," he wrote in the "Red Warrior," the Sixth army corps' weekly. "The service is sometimes very hard on us privates. Commanders sometimes mistreat their subordinates. Vodka is a mans only solace."

The commissariat of war has remained obstinate in its refusal to include the favorite vodka, which is about 60 percent alcohol, in the rations.

Screen Siftings

Valentino's Guns.—Two of Valentino's most prized possessions will make their screen appearance with Bebe Daniels in "She's a Sheik." They are a brace of Arab pistols said to be the finest of their kind in the world, which Mr. Valentino carried during the making of his screen success, "The Sheik." Miss Daniels bought the weapons at the auction sale of the late star's effects.

Has "Paris" Role.—Ricardo Cortez has been added to the cast of First National's "The Private Life of Helen of Troy." Mr. Cortez will take the part of Paris, the man who stole Helen away from Menelaus. Lewis Stone is Menelaus and Marie Corda will take the part of the world famous beauty.

Japan Only Country Not Ruled Over by Jazz Type of Music

TOKYO, Sept. 17—(I. N. S.)—Japan is the only civilized country in the whole where the common people still appreciate classical music, in the opinion of Rober Kitain, a Russian violinist now visiting Japan.

In America and Europe, jazz has conquered, he declares. He thinks Europe is even worse than America. But in Japan, he says the people still like good music better than jazz.

Many Contrasts Among Girls Of 101 Ranch Wild West Show

Are the girls with Miller Brothers 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East any different from the girls in your home town? Not a bit, except that the 101 young women are daring, expert riders, instead of secretaries, stenographers, teachers or shop girls. When 101 comes to Lincoln, Wednesday, Sept. 28, you'll be surprised at the attractiveness of its femininity, and you will wonder if Flo Ziegfeld did the picking, when the world's largest and most picturesque street parade swings by.

Street Cars of Nation Will Soon Adopt Gay and Striking Colors Similar to Taxi Cabs

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(INS)—Beauty, it appears, has been discovered by the American business man. And when the American business man discovers anything of an extra-industrial nature he stops at no half-trial measures.

The sudden urge for beauty has also inspired so many contests to find the most beautiful girl in almost every state, city and town in the Union that, judging from the newspapers the American people spend most almost as much time voting for beauty as they do voting for Congressmen.

In the great sweep towards making things softer for the eye, it was natural that attention should fall upon those objects viewed most by the people.

Gay Taxicabs

One of the first steps in New York came when the elevated trains were painted a bright orange. Then the taxicab drivers, spurred unconsciously perhaps, festooned their cabs with vari-colored lights. It became commonplace at night to hail a cab that looked not unlike a Venetian festive gondola. This practice, however, was soon stopped by the police who claimed that too many colored lights bewildered other drivers.

Next to be "beautified" was the gasoline pump station. Some of them at a distance resemble nothing so much as Japanese tea houses, Swiss chalets, and some even hint at a Hindu temple.

Even the "hot-dog" stands where in summer roasted frankfurters are dispensed to the ever hungry multitude, succumbed. It was found by those interested that these little shacks were a blight to sensitive eyes. They must be made beautiful. Hence cash prizes were offered for the most appropriate designs. "Hot dog" stands resembling the Greek temples may not be an idle dream.

Now Street Cars.

The latest "beautification" is now to be attempted on street cars. An advance announcement of the annual convention of the American Electrical Railway association to be held in Cleveland early in October declares that next year street cars will be "a riot of color." The announcement continues:

"The car builders and operators have felt the urge toward the beautiful that is dominant in the public mind. Street cars are to be painted in college colors and instead of being merely numbered they are to be named after prominent citizens in the cities in which they operate."

Trial of Rich French Strangler Draws Society Women to Court

MELUN, France, Sept. 17—(INS)—Not since the trial of the celebrated French "Bluebeard," Landru, several years ago, have there been such crowds and excitement in the French court rooms as have been seen recently during the hearing of the ex-millionaire Gaston Guyot, who strangled his telephone operator sweetheart and then burned her body in a haystack.

For five hours Guyot underwent a stiff grueling by the judge, marked by many dramatic incidents between counsel and applause and hisses from the society women who had motored down from Paris when the accused boasted of being a Don Juan. A few women even fainted and the judge himself, was so overcome that he was compelled to suspend the hearing for a short breathing space.

Enormous Hands.

Guyot was cool most of the time and showed emotion only when reference was made to his young daughter. Tears rolled down his cheeks and for a few minutes he was so affected he was unable to speak.

The grain-dealer was well-known in many quarters of Paris. His hands are enormous and he was recognized everywhere by those hands. There were rumors from time to time that his financial affairs were none too good. Then there were also mysterious rumors about the death of two Madame Guyots. His first wife was found dead in bed during a visit to a cousin's house in the country, with a bullet through her brains and a revolver at her side. The authorities concluded that it was suicide.

Shortly afterward, Guyot married again. He said that the wedding took place rather hurriedly. And by a strange coincidence, this second wife shot herself in her room in the hotel at which she was staying with her husband in Monte Carlo. During the hearing Guyot shrugged his shoulders and said that his second wife committed suicide because of her great losses at the gambling table.

Burned The Body.

Then Marie-Louise Beulaguet, a pretty telephonist came into his life. She exerted a strong influence over the strong man. On the evening of Friday, August 13 of last year, she persuaded Guyot to take her driving. He didn't want to because he had promised to dine with his little daughter. But Marie-Louise won him over. They drove to the little town of Claye, where Joffre had his headquarters during the war, had dinner there and a few drinks, perhaps too many.

According to the accused, his companion later suggested that they drive to le Havre and drove him half-mad with her demands. His temper rose and got beyond his control. While one hand remained on the steering wheel the other squeezed Marie Louise's throat until she fell back dead. Not knowing what to do with the body, he dragged it to the foot of a haystack and set fire to it.

Electric Chair for Executions Arouses Agitation in Europe

PARIS, Sept. 17—The worldwide agitation over the Sacco-Vanzetti case caused speculation in France as to the most preferable method of capital punishment.

In the concentrated efforts to save Sacco and Vanzetti, the radical newspapers of Paris published sensational drawings of the American electric chair, causing a deep impression on their readers and greatly aiding in the incitement of public opinion in favor of the two Italians.

Varying methods of capital punishment are employed in the different countries of Europe, but nowhere is there found the use of the electric chair.

Though various efforts have been made to change this means of carrying out the death sentence, the guillotine remains in France as a legacy of the Revolution.

In Germany the prisoner condemned to death has his head cut off with an axe.

In Great Britain and Austria death by hanging is traditional. Though the law in Belgium specifies the cutting off of the head, Belgian law has not had recourse to this means since 1863.

The Danish law specifies decapitation as does the Norwegian.

The condemned are put to death in Spain by strangulation with an iron collar called "garrot."

In the Russias of the Czars exile to Siberia was resorted to rather than capital punishment.

Decapitation with the sabre is the form of capital punishment in China.

Italy proposes to re-establish the death penalty as the result of the attempts on Mussolini. Switzerland has abolished the death penalty except for certain odious crimes.

In Portugal capital punishment is replaced by life imprisonment.

NEW BLOOD TEST FINDS PARENTS

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 17—Finding parents by means of blood tests are not yet admissible as binding evidence in Swedish courts, but Government medical laboratories here have found these tests useful in various cases.

Sometimes the test is needed in child support actions and some times it has to do with a will case. More than 100 cases thus far have been investigated by this method and it has been found that children as old as 12 years may be tested satisfactorily.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Editor—I have been wondering about what seems to me an illogical state of affairs. Lately one reads so much about the tremendous artistic superiority of European made films over those of the United States. It seems that Germany, in particular, occupies the position of a calmly amused grown-up enjoying the antics of a giddy child, the U. S.

Now for one thing, if this is true, why the foreign invasion? Why did Pola Negri, Vilma Banky, Greta Garbo and Lya de Putti, to mention just a few, leave the studios of Europe? At least half of the Hollywood directors are foreigners, men who seem to understand the value of artistic success. Surely, they would not have come here, if they, too, believed that American films are all cut from the same pattern, all bedtime stories punctuated with bedroom scenes and adorned with hugely impossible sets.

No, it is impossible. These people are too intelligent to have come here unless hoping to better themselves. Our "Broken Blossoms," "Four Horsemen," "The Covered Wagon," and "Ben Hur" are not quite devoid of truth of subtleties, of beautiful, tragic life. — INTERESTED.

How can we blame Germany for "giving us the laugh" as it were over our pictures, when our critics give a German made picture first place among the ten best pictures for 1926? In the annual poll taken by the Film Daily for the ten best features for last year, "Variety" led over such of our big features as "The Big Parade," "The Black Pirate," "Stella Dallas," "Beau Geste," "The Volga Boatman," "What Price Glory," "The Sea Beast," and "La Boheme"—pictures that we call the cream of our production.

Our American public goes wild over the foreign importations, because they are such, I think, and not because of their artistry—like a child, whose neighbor's back yard is so much more fascinating than his own. We turn "thumbs down" to the same artistic efforts of the foreign directors which are American made, such as "Greed."

"Hotel Imperial" had the foreign atmosphere, and although American made, was done by a German director with Pola Negri as the star. It was a very finished production and Miss Negri did some of the best work she has done since coming to this country, but we were only moderately enthusiastic concerning it. Had we imported it, it would have had a long run and been a treemndous success, I'm convinced.

The dollar is undoubtedly the lure of the foreign star and director to the American field. Our producers are making a big effort to capture foreign trade and to that is due their efforts to internationalize our pictures by introducing foreign blood through the stars and directors.

And the dollar works more ways than one. What might look like a very moderate salary to some of our big stars seems like a fortune to the foreign player until he tries to live in Hollywood on it. Then his contract is already signed and he must either forfeit it and take his chance on another one, or "grin and bear it," while the producer reaps his reward with his new "find" until the public favor wanes or switches to a newer toy.

Dear Movie Editor—If there is a more ardent fan in Lincoln than I, I would like to meet her.

I receive more pleasure from a movie than any dance or house party I ever attended. My mother and friends tell me I am at the sentimental age, when movies and sad stage plays appeal to me. They tell me that in a few years I will not enjoy the pictures I like so much now, and the actors and actresses I admire will seem like foolish silly ideas. I don't see how I could ever feel that way, at least I shall admire these stars until I learn differently.

I have been obtaining answers to my numerous uestions through Photoplay Magazine, but I liked the interesting answers you gave the other fans, and I thought perhaps you would be as kind to me.

I would like to know who played the part of the head jockey in "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut?" I believe his name was Billy Dooley in the picture. Is he married, and if so to whom? How old is he? What is his address? How long has he been in pictures and what is his next picture?

Please tell me the same about the girl who played the part of Elizabeth Foster opposite Adolphe Menjou in "Service for Ladies."

Someone told me "Gentleman Prefer Blondes" has already been made and shown in Lincoln, but I don't think so. My choices for Lorelei are Greta Nissen, Renee Adoree, Gilda Gray and Clara Bow. If you have any extra pictures of any of the stars, will you please send them to me? Where can I get a picture of Rudolph Valentino?

Please give me the addresses of Dorothy Gish, Pauline Garon, Nita Naldi, Edith Roberts, Constance Bennett, Eugene O'Brien, Lila Lee and Huntly Gordon.

What does the "Q" in Anna Q. Nilsson's name stand for? My vote goes to Anna. Cast another vote for Richard Dix, too.

Please give me the height, weight, age, color of hair and eyes, birthplace, real name, wife or husband of each, nationality, first appearance in movies and anything else you know that I have not mentioned of the following: John Gilbert, Lawrence Gray, Clara Bow, Renee, Adoree, James Hall, William Collier, Jr., Bebe Daniels, Esther Ralston, Charles Farrell, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Greta Nissen, and Donald Keith.

I saw "Camille" yesterday and it is excellent. Norma Talmadge is very sweet in the role of Marguerite Gautier and Gilbert Roland as Armand seems very promising. I saw "Camille" a good many years ago with Alla Nazimova and Rudolph Valentino, Nazimova seemed to fill the role of the notorious Camille better than Norma because Norma seems too innocent and sweet in the role, but I liked her better than Nazimova. I hope all of the fans besides you, dear editor, will see this picture when it comes to Lincoln.

I will look for my letter to appear real soon. Please don't be angry at me for writing such a lengthy letter. I am overly enthusiastic. If I have taken too much space, and too much of your precious time, tell me, and I'll never write again, just maybe. "PATCHES" from the Crazy Quilt.

I couldn't possibly be angry with such an enthusiastic fan, even though there were cause, and there isn't.

I wonder if you will outgrow your interest in pictures. Perhaps, when you outgrow your interest in novels and romance, beautiful landscapes. Your ardor may be tempered with age. You probably are not as interested in "all day suckers" now as you were when you were five, but that doesn't necessarily mean you have lost your taste for candy. Our tastes change as we become older—we become more educated and broader in our views, and more temperate, perhaps. There is no thrill now for a boy of twenty in a roller coaster. He must have a fling in the air. The movies, too, are keeping abreast with the times. They grow as we grow, and there are movies for every age.

Theater people are putting thousands and millions of dollars into motion picture houses, and the audience is not entirely filled with girls and boys of the flapper age, which means that there must be a general and universal taste for pictures.

In a few years you will have new screen favorites. We all do, and you will no doubt prefer a different type of picture to that you admire now, but I hope you will continue to enjoy life, because I know you will also enjoy the movies. They feature life as it has been, as it will be, and as it is.

Bobby Doyle is the jockey whom you admired in "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut. It was his first picture, and I have no record of any new ones for him. By writing Jackie Coogan productions, Hollywood, Calif., you will be able to secure his address, or have your letter forwarded to him. He is in the early twenties, and is one of the most successful jockeys in the country. He trained Jackie to ride in the race scenes. I have never heard of his marriage.

Kathryn Carver is the young lady who took the role of Elizabeth Foster in "Service For Ladies." She is said to have won Mr. Menjou's heart permanently. She is a blonde, twenty-one years old and has been in pictures less than a year. Just now she is vacationing in Catalina, but a letter would reach her if sent to the Paramount studio, 5451 Marathon Ave., Hollywood, Calif.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" has never been filmed. It is just now being prepared for screen adaptation. Ruth Taylor is the lucky winner of the famous "Lorelei" role.

You may still be able to secure a picture of Valentino by writing to the United Artists studio, 7200 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.

Miss Gish is in England, but a letter sent in care of Lillian at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Culver City, Calif. might reach her. Address Miss Garon, 7139 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif., Miss Roberts permanent address is 366 Madison Ave., N. . City. You will find Ann Pennington there, also. She spends so much time on the stage that any studio address I might give would hardly find her.

Constance Bennett was last under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. She is Mrs. Phillip Plante and is now enjoying private life. Write Mr. O'Brien at the Players' club, N. Y. and Mr. Gordon at the Hollywood Athletic club. Nita Naldi is in France, and has left me no forwarding address. Write Miss Lee at the El Capitan Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif.

"Querentia" is Anna's "Q."

I think you have covered everything in your next question, and if I know all that you ask I'll be thankful without looking for more.

Whew! Here goes!

Mr. Gilbert was born that way, but his friends call him Jack. His birthplace, was Logan, Utah, and the year '95. He is 5 feet 11 in height and weighs 160. Mr. Gilbert's eyes and hair are as dark off screen as they are on, and he first obtained screen recognition in "Princess of the Dark." Leatrice Joy is separated from Mr. Gilbert.

Lawrence Gray isn't married yet. He was born in San Francisco in 1898 with dark hair and eyes. His first important "bit" was with Gloria Swanson in "The Coast of Folly." He's about 5 feet 10 and weighs 160.

Little titian haired Clara made her first impotrant screen appearance in "Down to the Sea in Ships." She was born in Brooklyn in 1905 and is now 5 feet 3½ niches tall and weighs 112. Miss Bow is still single and wears her own name.

Miss Adoree is now Mrs. Gill. She was formerly married to Tom Moore. Mrs. Gill was born in Lille, France, twenty-six years ago. She is just a little over five feet in height and weighs 105. She has dark hair and gray-blue eyes.

Greta Nissen is the only other foreigner in your selection and she is Danish. Miss Nissen is 5 feet 4 in height and weighs 108. She is 22 and still single. Of course she's a blonde.

Mr. Hall is still single, and so are William Collier, Charles Farrell—in fact all of the others except Esther Ralston and she is Mrs. Frey. Mr. Hall was born in Dallas, Tex., in 1900. He is 5 feet 11 in height and 156 in weight. He has brown hair and blue eyes. "The Campus Flirt" was his first picture.

William Collier was born in New York i n1902. He has very dark hair and eyes and is 5 feet 10 in height. Weight 150. "Secrets of Paris" is one of his first successful pictures.

Bebe Daniels has been before the camera so long it's almost impossible to tell her first picture. She played child parts for Selig when she was 8 years old, and then later played opposite Harold Lloyd for two years in Rolin-Pathe comedies. It was in "Male and Female" that she made her first appearance as a dramatic player. Bebe was born in Dallas, Tex., in 1901. She is 5 feet five in height, weighs 120 and has dark hair and eyes.

Miss Ralston is a blonde, same height as Bebe and weighing five pounnds more. She was born in Bar Harbor, Me., in 1902.

She made her first screen appearance in "Huckleberry Finn."

Douglas Fairbanks, jr., started in his father's footsteps in "Stephen Steps Out." He is the son of Doug, sr., and Beth Sully. His eyes are gray-blue and he has moderately brown hair. He was born in 1909 and has grown to be 5 feet 10 in height and 155 in weight.

Charles Farrell is 6 feet 2 in height and weighs 170. He has brown hair and eyes and is 24 years old. Mr. Farrell made his first screen bid for fame as an extra in "The Cheat," with Pola Negri. He had borrowed his chum's studio pass and his name was not on the "extra" list, so he received no pay for the role. He held right on, however, and, after playing in only six pictures, he got a chance to play the flyer hero in "Wings," the big Paramount picture of the United States air service.

Donald Keith was born as Francis Feeney in Boston 23 years ago. After graduating he went to California, where his cousin, Francis Ford, gave him his first screen opportunity. It was a small part, but he soon climbed up to a role in "Secrets," with Norma Talmadge. Donald is 6 feet tall, weighs 155 pounds and has blue eyes and light brown hair.

Dear Movie Editor—I have written you before and hope my welcome is not worn out.

Quite a while ago I saw Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu" and I thought it was very good. Will you please tell me who Nang Ping's American lover was?

Please give me his address and tell me all about him. I did not care for Mr. Chaney in "The Unknown," although he played a wonderful part.

Please give me the addresses of the following: Lon Chaney, Joan Crawford, Norman Kerry, Gary Cooper, Louise Brooks, Esther Ralston and Jack Pickford.

I think Esther Ralston is about the most beautiful blonde actress on the screen. What do you other fans think?

And while I am about it, I will cast a vote for Richard Dix. Although Ronald Colman is a great favorite of mine, I think Richard heads my list.

Well, I guess this station had better sign off. Thanking you for your kind courtesy, and hoping to see my letter in print soon, BLUE EYES, Bertrand, Neb.

Of course you are welcome, Blue eyes, always.

Ralph Forbes was the good looking young American in "Mr. Wu." He is a British stage star and has recently been placed under contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. You will find him at the studio in Culver City, where he is playing opposite Lillian Gish in "The Enemy."

Mr. Forbes first came to this country with the English company presenting "Havoc" on the New York stage. Later he played in "The Green Hat" with Ruth Chatterton, and it was while this company was in Los Angeles that Mr. Forbes became interested in the movies. He made his film debut as one of the brothers in "Beau Geste," and then recived his M-G-M contract.

Lon Chaney and Joan Crawford are also drawing their weekly pay envelopes from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Culver City, Calif.

Address Jack Pickford in care of United Artists, 7200 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.

You will find Norman Kerry out at Universal City, Calif. and the others on your list have letter boxes at the Paramount Studio, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Calif.

Esther, the applause is coming your way at last, after all these years before the camera.

And Richard still holds his public!

Dear Movie Editor—I have at last taken up enough courage to write to you once. I sure like to read your column. It is so interesting.

How old is Alma Rubens? I'll bet she and Ricardo Cortez, her husband, are a nice looking couple. I hope they will stay together always.

Which of the actresses do you think has the friendliest face? I vote for Mary Pickford. Norma Shearer wins second place with me.

When did the following get married: Mary and Doug, Alma Rubens and Ricardo Cortez, Mildred Davis and Harold Lloyd, Claire and Bert Lytell and Elinor Fair and Bill Boyd.

When did Barbara La Marr die? How old was she when she died? How often had she been married? Who were all of her husbands, anyway? Jack Daugherty was one, wasn't he? Did she divorce everyone of them? Will you please tell me the color of her hair and eyes?

I'll close now with hopes that I may come again soon. Thank you in advance, PEARL, Stuttgart, Kansas.

It really isn't such a terrible ordeal after all when you once get started, is it, Pearl? And it will be that much easier the second time, so we shall expect to hear from you again soon.

Miss Rubens was born in 1895. She is a beautiful girl, and appears to be happy with Ricardo I don't recall the exact date of their marriage, but it's been close to two years.

It's close to nine years since Mary and Doug were married, so they are doing pretty well. Harold took Mildred for his permanent leading lady four years ago. Claire Windsor and Bert Lytell were married in May, 1925, so their matrimonial engagement was of short duration. The Boyds have celebrated their first anniversary.

I'm rather catholic in my tastes regarding the screen players.

Joan Crawford and Sally O'Neill are both charming little personalities to meet personally. Sally just bubbles over, while Joan is more quiet and retiring.

Miss La Marr's death occurred January 30, 1926. She was twenty-eight, and had been married the fifth time to Jack Daugherty, who was her husband at the time of her death. First on the list was Jack Lyttle. He died of pneumonia. Then she married Lawrence Converse, but the marriage was later annulled, because he already had one wife. Phil Ainsworth was her third husband and Bernard Deely was the fourth. Mr. Deely died, but not until Miss La Marr had divorced him and married Jack Daugherty.

Miss La Marr was known as the screen's "too beautiful woman." She had dark hair and grayish green eyes.

Dear Movie Editor—I surely look forward to your page, and I hope you will have the patience to answer a few questions.

In "The Flaming Forest," does Renee Adoree have her own hair or is it only a wig. It looks like real. I enjoyed the picture immensely. Also, what is her real name?

Mary Pickford was a dear in "Sparrows." I was a little disappointed because they did not show her past. It made the picture seem unfinished.

I am mounting pictures of actors and actresses instead of sending for them. I find many splendid ones, especially in magazines. I keep the pictures until I find better ones to take their place. I mount on construction paper. This is a suggestion to movie fans.

Are any of the following, stars: Billie Burke, Grace George, Elinor Patterson (I think she had the part of "the nun" in "The Miracle" if I'm not mistaken), Hope Hampton, Ann Harding and Fay Lamphier?

This is my first letter to this page and I hope you print it and fool the W. P. B. Yours truly, EVE of TOBBIE, Tobias, Neb.

No food for the hungry old basket until this department is taken care of and filled up!

I saw Renee in "The Flaming Forest," but it's been several months and I can't recall whether she wore her own hair or not. She has rather curly, bobbed hair, very dark. Does it answer the description of the hair in the picture? As I think back, Renee wore rather long curls, did she not? If so, they were just pinned on. It's frequently necessary for the players to wear wigs in order to carry out the description of the players given by the authors of the stories, particularly now when bobbed hair is the vogue.

Renee uses part of her own name, the rest of it is de La Fontaine, which should be inserted between the Renee and Adoree. She is Mrs. Gill in private life.

The fans will be interested in your photo collection suggestion.

Billie Burke is no longer a star, and neither is Grace George, but both have been on stage and screen. Hope Hampton is starred whenever she works before the camera, because her husband produces her pictures. Ann Harding has possibilities, but just now she's a leading lady. Fay Lamphier was only a featured player on the screen.

Miss Patterson is not a screen star and probably never will be because she prefers the footlights. She did play the role of the Nun in "The Miracle" on the stage, as you thought.

Screen Siftings

Still Prefer Blondes. — Thelma Todd, the blonde graduate of the Paramount picture school, is getting her share of "breaks" as a leading lady. Gentlemen do seem to prefer blondes, because Gary Cooper just recently chose Thelma as his leading woman in "Nevada," and now Richard Dix has selected her as his support in "The Gay Defender." Mr. Dix will play the role of Joaquin Murietta, an early California bandit, in the picture.

Wallace Takes the Air.—Wallace Beery seems to have taken the title of his new picture, "Now We're in the Air," too literally. At least he spends every minute he can find between scenes there now. And Wallace has started a new fad. As he flies over the homes of his friends he takes views of their homes from the air with a small motion picture camera which he carries along with him.

Some Combination. — Three important members of Hollywood's Swedish colony are working in "The Divine Woman" on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Greta Garbo is the star, and Lars Hanson, who was brought from Sweden at the same time Miss Garbo was, will play opposite her. Victor Seastrom, the famous Swedish director, will handle the megaphone on "The Divine Woman." The picture is adapted from Gladys Unger's "Starlight," in which Doris Keane played before the footlights. It's the romance of a French stage actress.

Long and Short Of It — Gene Adams, one of the smalles midgets in the world, is playing with Karl Dane, the tallest comedian, in the screen version of "Baby Mine." Mr. Adams is only thirty inches tall and he is in his early twenties. He has formerly been in a circus Karl Dane and George K. Arthur are costarring in the new comedy, and Charlotte Greenwood of stage fame, makes her screen debut as the leading lady.

Will Direct Rip. — William De Mille will step out of his office as associate producer of the Cecil B. De Mille productions long enough to direct "Rip Van Winkle" when it comes to the screen. Clara Beranger is now writing the picture version of the famous Washington Irving legend. Rudolph Schildkraut has already been cast as "Rip."

What's In a Part.—With a quirk of the comb, Victor Varconi was transformed from an aristocrat to a tough the other day during the filming of "The Angel of Broadway." Mr. Varconi has always worn a pompadour, or a cente part for his previous screen roles where he appeared as a patrician, but when he was cast as a tough truck driver, he didn't look the part. He soon remedied the matter when he parted his hair low on the left side, leaving a long shock to fall down over his eye. Leatrice Joy is the star of "The Angel of Broadway," which is coming to the screen under the gentle hand of Lois Weber.

Wants Title.—If you want a free autographed picture of Sally Eilers, Mack Sennett's new "discovery," here's your chance. Mr. Sennett wants a new title for his feature length comedy, "The Romance of a Bathing Girl," and to every suggestion which the fans send in, he will mail the picture of Sally, who is playing the lead in the feature. Titles should not be more than four words in length and should be sent to Title Editor, Mack Sennett Studio, Los Angeles.

The story deals with a girl who lands in Hollywood to find movie fame and gets a job as a bathing girl. She eventually falls in love with a soldier boy, and when he is called to war, she follows as a Salvation Army lass.

A romantic title with no hint of war is what Mr. Sennett wants, so get busy.

Another Parting.—The Hollywood gossip now is that Marilyn Miller and Ben Lyon are estranged. No matter now, if Marilyn didn't get her Paris divorce from Jack Pickford.

Lots of 'Em Do It.—Marie Prevost, a brunette will be "A Blonde for a Night" in her next picture.

Same As Above.—Cissy Fitzgerald, "perennial flapper" of the screen, will be seen as a gay and dashing widow opposite W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin in their new comedy "The Side Show." W. C. Fields is the owner of a circus side show, and the waulrus moustached comedian is a small town sheriff in the picture Both vie for Cissy's affections.

Plays With Hubby.—Doris Kenyon is leaving her small son in the hands of a nurse long enough to play opposite her husband, Milton Sills, in his forthcoming production, "The Valley of the Giants." Charles Brabin will direct. Mr. Brabin also called the action on Mr. Sills' "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," said to be his best vehicle in years.

He'll Need the Extra Cash.—Richard Barthelmess has hurried back to the First National studio from his vacation in the east to hasten the filming of his next picture, "The Noose." Mr. Barthelmess' wedding to Katherine Wilson, the stage star, will not take place until the new picture is completed. Between scenes Mr. Barthelmess hopes to put his Beverly Hills home in order for the new bride. "The Noose" is adapted from the successful stage play by that title.

Tries Pie Throwing — Marjorie Daw, well known as a dramatic screen player, is taking a fling in the comedy field. Miss Daw will play the leading role opposite Johnny Hines in his new comedy, "Home Made."

Plenty To Pick From—The First National studio is swarming with girls at present who are undergoing screen tests for the leading role in Harold Bell Wright's famous story, "The Shepherd of the Hills" which is to be made into a motion picture. Alec B. Francis ras already been selected for the title role, and John Boles, who played opposite Gloria Swanson in "The Loves of Sunya," will be the hero. Matthew Betz is the villain of the feature, which Albert Rogell will direct.

the stage, is Mr. Gilbert's leading woman in the picture. Mr. Bellew is well known on the New York stage and first went to California to play in "The Magic Flame." "Fires of Youth" is a newspaper story with Washington as its locale. It was written and is being directed by Monta Bell, a former newspaper man.

Another Recruit — Cosmo Kyrle, son of Kyrle Bellew of "Raffles" fame on the stage, will have a role in John Gilbert's new picture, "Fires of Youth." He is the second recruit from the stage in the cast, as Jeanne Eagles, star of "Rain" on Gangster Next — For his next screen characterization, Lon Chaney will play the role of a New York gangster. It is an original story by Tod Browning, called "The Big City," and pictures life among the gangsters and in the night clubs of New York. The cameras will start grinding on it as soon as "The Hypnotist" is completed. The cast is now being assembled.

Want Real Stuff—In order to insure realistic boxing scenes in Vera Reynolds' new picture, "The Main Event," Cecil B. De Mille has engaged Robert Perry as technical advisor for the picture. Mr. Perry has been in the prize fight game for 40 years as boxer, manager and trainer. He was associated with Jim Jeffries and John L. Sullivan during the height of their ring days.

Doane College News

Doane college opened Monday with a registration slightly below last year's record but still above that of the previous year. Students are still enrolling for a number have been delayed. The attendance of students outside of Crete is probably up to any previous record, but there is a great slump in attendance from Crete this year due partly to the small number in last year's graduating class who are entering college. Gaylord hall has more young women in it than any previous time in its history. Five young women from Tabor college and vicinity helped break the record in the dormitory attendance. Three young men from Tabor and Randolph, Iowa, complete the group from that territory.

Forty-one men reported for football practice Monday evening. This is the smallest squad Coach Haylett has had to work with since his arrival. A number of old veterans and a few new students who are good football material are expected to arrive at a later date.

The first chapel exercise was held Monday morning. A number of town visitors were present. President Dean introduced all of the new faculty members. Features of the program included beautiful music selections by Prof. Arthur W. Byler, head of the department of piano, and Miss Muriel Thomas, instructor in violin.

Miss Ruth E. Schrader, instructor in domestic science, head of the department of physical education for women, is still worrying over the serious injury which her father received just before she left for Crete. Miss Schrader was delayed a few days because of this accident which occurred on her father's farm in Illinois.

The annual general reception for the new students will be held Friday night in the parlors of Gaylord hall.

Douglass Orr Attends Meeting Of "Students League of Nations" At Rome While Touring Europe

The National Student Federation of America, which Mr. Orr represents, will hold its third annual meeting at Lincoln in December at the invitation of the University of Nebraska Student Council.

Extracts from Mr. Orr's letter telling of this congress at Rome, follow:

"The sessions of the C. I. E. (Confederation Internationale des Etudiants) began this morning, August 24. We entered the Palazzo Vidoni (city hall) between rows of guards, seemingly from some "crack" Italian regiment, dressed in blue and wearing gold-gilt helmets of the old Roman type. The opening meeting was held in the Grand Consiglio. Statues of Cavour, Mazzini, Garibaldi and other Italian patriots looked down upon the assembly and a row of "black shirts" stood behind the speaker's platform holding the faces and banners of the fascisti party. Blue uniformed carabinieri (gendarmes) with red-plumed cocked hats and white gloves were supplementary guards. What with a further sprinkling of military and naval uniforms, and the red fezes of some of the delegates from Palestine, it was a very colorful and impressiv gathering.

Speaking in Italian.

"The opening meeting was brief, consisting of speeches by an official of the Roman municipal government, the fascisti minister of education, and the young Count Balinski of Poland, president of the C. I. E. Mussolini honored the meeting with his patronage but did not appear in person. Most of the speaking was in Italian, so that I didn't understand much of it, although I got about as much Italian as French, a language that I am supposed to have studied. Fortunately the actual business of the C. I. E. is carried on in two languages, English and French.

"The American delegation is 100 per cent present. It is headed by Marvin Breckenridge of Vassar, vice president of the U. S. F. A., and includes a girl from Mills, a chap from Stanford, one from the University of Toledo and myself. Besides this official group there are about fifteen, mostly girls from Smith and Vassar, some of whom have been studying in Geneva at the Zimmern school.

"The National Student Federation has no status here as yet, that is, no official one. We applied for membership a year ago, and the special interest in this year's C. I. E. meeting lies in the possibility of bringing in the U. S. F. A. and the Deutsche Studentenchaft, an organization embracing Germany, Austria and German minorities, I believe, in Poland and Czechoslovakia. Of course the N. S. F. A. has been in co-operation with the C. I. E. in its travel work, including the sending of delegations from America to Europe and Europe to America, the student hospitality work, and so on, but the basis has been one of half-association, not full membership. If we are voted in at the present congress, it will be the student United States joining the sudent league of nations. The fact that the average student in the United States will not know what it's all about won't affect the analogy.

Count Balinski Presides.

"It is interesting to watch the executive council during one of the meetings. The council can be watched because its members sit at a long table on a platform and facing the delegates, a sort of "last supper" arrangement. In the middle sits Count Balinski who likes to rest his elbows on the table and his chin in his hands, and look out over the audience with his black eyebrows so arched that they form a "V", and make him look very owlish. On one side of him is a energetic Englishman who looks radical enough to take off his waistcoat if it gets too warm. Beyond him are assorted Frenchmen, Belgians and Italians. On the other side of the president is another assortment including a sandy Scot and a dignified Englishman with a wing collar who looks like prime-ministerial timber. We hear French - Polish - French, Italian - French - Swiss-French, German and many other varieties of French, but sooner or later most of it is rendered into British English by the efficient Mr. Macadam who is an Englishman despite his name, and the first vice president of the C. I. E. This is all at the plenary session. The most important work of the conference is done in six commissions concerned with admission of members, the central office, exchange of books and films, scientific exhibits, student travel and hospitality, sports, and so on. The meetings of these commissions will occupy most of the time until the final plenary sessions, before the conference breaks up.

"It is surprising what preparations Rome made for the C. I. E. delegates. Not only are there fetes, concerts, governmental receptions, and the like, but also free tram tickets, free entrance to the galleries and musums, as well as from 50 to 70 per cent reductions on the railroads. My international student identity card has become really useful now. I hope that the
